Special Notice.

The Farmers' Mutual Telephone Directory says, I handle any kind of rubber tire; and that I have the exclusive agency of the Republic Rubber Tires. That contract just cost me $200 of which of some of my customers will attest. I guaranteed those tires and I filled same to the letter. Now, right here I do most solemnly promise and swear that I will never again change the old and tried for any new thing whatsoever. Furthermore, that I will not use any Rubber Tire except Kelly's Springfield—the best rubber tire ever made and the best. I ought to know for surely I paid last year to find out. It is just like a boy changing the old girl for the new or a man leaving his aid and tried wife for a new one. Now, isn't it a fact that they always go back to the old and tried love, is it not so boys? That's what I have done with Kelly's Springfield Rubber Tire—gone back to my old love. While they cost me more money they will cost my customers $12.00 per set or $3.00 per tire; these tires I give a guarantee on for being as represented. They will not stuff out nor will they peel, but will wear smooth like a good tire should.

Now, in regards to repainting: I have tried to get a quick system and do good work, but I find it a failure, so I give it up and must stick to the old system. All my work I guarantee to be as represented. I do anything in the carriage line. Bring me your work if you want it done right. I solicit your trade.

LOCAL BANKS CALLED

To Meet and Discuss the Proposition to Handle the Road Bonds

Plenty of Money in Sight for That Purpose It Is Said.

D. B Wallace, cashier of the Equitable Bank & Trust Co., at Walton, believing that the banks of Boone county and the two at Erlanger, should, in the interest of the taxpayers of Boone county, handle the county's $200,000 road bond issue has sent to each of the banks except his own, a letter of which the following is a copy:

Wallace's Letter to the Banks.

"Gentlemen:—I am taking the liberty of writing you relative to the bond issue of Boone county for road purposes, and believing that the banks of Boone county should discuss the matter among themselves and have a concert of action, I would like you to have a representative at a meeting to be held at Walton, Ky., June 26th, at 1:30 p. m, when the matter will be gone over in a careful way to see if we cannot pool our issues and handle the matter in a way that would be of advantage to our banks and protective of the interests of the county. I believe we can handle the bond issue in a way that would be satisfactory all around and helpful to the financial interests of the county. Let me hear from you if you will have a representative at the meeting. I believe it will be of great value to you to have some one here to represent your bank.

The Recorder has contended all along that the road bonds should be handled at home; that there is ample money on hand for that purpose, and the bonds being non-taxable that the interest thereon would be a great assistance in the liquidation of taxes were the bonds kept at home.

Along this line is the following very timely article by Attorney J. G. Tomlin, of Walton, than whom no man in the county takes more interest in public improvements, but, at the same time, believes in a proper economy and a judicious handling of the finances necessary to improvements. His article follows:

Pikes. Economy.

First in importance in a scheme of economy in our system of roads and pikes is that the bonds be sold to the best advantage. I have stated frequently and I now repeat it that our $200,000 worth of bonds can be sold and should be sold to our own people at four per cent to be delivered as needed. They should be redeemed in equal sums each year after the first five years which would prevent the loss and risk incident to a sinking fund. When it is remembered that money has not, in Boone county, in the last 10 years loaned higher than five and six per cent; when it is remembered that the bonds are non-taxable; when it is remembered that the people of Boone county have nearly a million dollars on deposit; when it is remembered that the Walton school bonds sold at five percent when they were taxable; it is folly for the pike bonds to go out of the county or at a higher rate than four percent. Let the people with means or their agents, the banks, arrange this matter at once.

Any suggestion from outside sources to pay a premium on bonds at four and one-half or four and three-fourths is clever but gratuitous since our own people are amply able to take these bonds at four per cent. The court will probably be two years in expending the money and this arrangement will prevent any loss between the date of delivering the bonds and utilizing the money. Summing up this whole matter it would be bad financiering for us to send our bonds which are safe for New York and allow New York and Louisville and Lexington and other places to send us their oil, gas, investment, bank, and insurance stock, which seldom yields a return and which in the end is generally lost.

Logan Gaines Dead.

B. L. Gaines, who died at his home in Carroll county, last Friday, was buried at Carrollton, last Sunday, where a very large concourse of Carroll county people assembled to pay their last tribute of respect to one they admired in life for his many good qualities and who ranked as one of the county's most worthy citizens. Mr. Gaines was a son of Absalom Gaines, and was born in this county about eighty years ago, and was one of a family of several children, only three of whom survive, Legrand Gaines and Mrs. Fannie Cropper, of this county, and Clinton Gaines, of Louisville. Logan Gaines moved to Carroll county soon after the close of the civil war and soon took a place as one of the prominent citizens of the county, and served the county several times as a justice of the peace and could have had anyother office in the gift of the people of his county.

In the death of B. L. Gaines a large relationship and numerous friends in Boone county join the family in their grief over the departure of so good and useful a man.

No Peanut Throwing Allowed.

On the Border, Nogales, Ariz., June 13th, 1916.

Editor Boone County Recorder,

Dear Sir:—

I enclose a clipping from the Los Angeles "Times" which may possibly be of interest to you. It is rather a far cry from good old Boone county to the Mexican border, but even the delicate irony underlying the enclosed item does not alter the fact that ANY mention of God's country comes like a breeze from Heaven to the small colony of Kentuckians isolated in this playground of Satan's.

Papers in this section of the country may indulge in playful criticism of Kentucky and her people, but the readers of these same papers, are, nevertheless, well aware of the fact that the "Corncrackers" can teach them many things worth while,—from the proper manner of making a mint-julep to the holding of unswerving loyalty to one's native or adopted country. Quien sabe?

Very Truly Yours,
ROY P. DUNHAM.

Following is the clipping sent the Recorder:

FOR "CUL-CHAW'S SAKE.

The necessity of preparedness for war has not caused the citizens of Boone county, Kentucky, to lose site of the duty of cultivating their aestheticism. The authorities have issued an order prohibiting the cracking and eating of peanuts by the audience at dramatic and musical entertainments, although this unculchawed practice is still tolerated at Democratic meetings. When the actor says, "Hark, I hear a sound so soft that nothing lives twixt it and silence," it destroys the effect to hear a hundred jaws in the audience cracking goobers.

FARM ANIMALS

WHOLESOME FEED FOR SOWS

Special Attention Should Be Given to Animal Expected to Farrow Strong, Healthy Pigs.

The brood sow that is expected to farrow good, strong healthy pigs should receive a little special attention. During the first few weeks of pregnancy there is little extra demand on the mother, but later in the period the fetus is developing rapidly, and the extra care is necessary.

The brood sow must have plenty of clean, wholesome feed. The feed should not be fattening, but succulent and somewhat laxative. Roots, kale or fine clover hay are good winter green feeds. The hay is not green, but has the same effect on the digestion. Clover or alfalfa hay may be fed in racks where the sow can help herself at will. Do not force her to make her living altogether from this diet, but it supplements the grain very nicely. Don't starve the sow and expect to get a strong litter of pigs.

It is best to have the sows separated from the rest of the hogs, and if the old sows fight the younger ones make a further separation. It doesn't pay to subject the pregnant sow to punishment. Oftentimes they are found in the steer feed lot, where they are bunted around too much. Of course it is best not to shut them up in the farrowing pen until a few weeks before farrowing. They should be in there, however, long enough beforehand to become accustomed to the place. If you wait until the sow has picked her bed or nest, trouble may result. Keep the sow well fed, well-exercised, and in clean quarters for best results when it comes to farrowing time.

SHEEP REQUIRE DRY SHELTER

In Ordinary Climate House for Animals May Be Constructed of One Thickness of Boards.

Contrary to general opinion, sheep as well as any other class of farm animals require clean, dry shelter. It is especially important that the feet and fleece be kept dry. If their quarters are dry and clean the sheep will stand very cold weather without discomfort or disease. There must be ample ventilation for sheep, if closely crowded, sweat badly and quickly use up the oxygen in the air, but there must be no drafts as sheep are easily subject to colds.

In the ordinary climate the sheep barn may be constructed of one thickness of matched boards. It should be large enough to house the entire flock without crowding. Windows enough to permits lots of sunshine to enter and clean, dry bedding under foot are necessities. The lambing pens should be of warmer construction than the general shed.

RIGHT WAY TO CATCH SHEEP

Get Him Either by Hind Leg or Placing Hand Under Jaw—Never Grab Him by the Wool.

It is improper to catch a sheep by its wool. Butchers know what it means to the poor animal, for it leaves a black or blue mark or bruise on the carcass, which interferes with the sale of it.

Catch a sheep either by the hind leg or by placing the hand underneath the jaw or neck. When using a crook, aim to catch a sheep above the gambrel joint, as there is danger of injuring the leg when catching it below this joint.

REMOVE YOUNG PIGS' TUSKS

Youngsters Often Use Teeth in Fighting for Possession of Teat—Not a Difficult Job.

When young pigs are nursing they will often fight one another for the possession of a teat, and at that early age will make use of their tusks. The results are many lacerated mouths. The teats of the sows sometimes become sore from the same cause.

The removal of the tusks is the best way to prevent these troubles. This is done by taking a pig under the left arm, the mouth is then opened and the tusks are broken off near the gums on both sides of the mouth.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Life's hard tasks are never sent for us to give up with, they are intended to awaken strength, skill and courage in learning how to master them.

Some of the greatest men in history never discovered themselves until they lost everything but their pluck and grit.

A FEW DESSERTS.

So many people these days find bran such an addition to the diet that the following recipe will be welcome:

Bran Pudding.—Add to one-half cupful of bran and the same of whole wheat flour, one-half cupful of chopped, seedless raisins, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one cupful of milk, one well beaten egg, one tablespoonful of butter, melted, one teaspoonful of lemon rind and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Steam two hours and serve hot with lemon sauce. This is a most healthful dessert.

Cocoanut Cream Pudding.—Mix well one teaspoonful of flour with two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and a fourth of a cupful of shredded cocoanut. Cook five minutes after it begins to boil, then cool and add a beaten egg, and a few drops of vanilla. Pour into custard cups, surround with water and bake until firm. Serve with a fruit sauce.

Cafe Parfait.—Mix one-half cupful of strong coffee with a pint of cream, sweeten to taste, place in a bowl of ice water to chill, whip until thick and place on a mold packed in ice and salt. Be careful to have no liquid in the mold.

Cottage Cheese Pie.—Mix together two cupfuls of cottage cheese, two tablespoonfuls of milk, two well beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of sour cream. Mix a half teaspoonful of flour, a third of a cupful of sugar, a fourth of a teaspoonful of lemon extract, a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, and half a cupful of currants, add to the first mixture and pour into a pastry lined pie plate. Bake in a moderate oven until firm in the center.

Banana Pie.—Press peeled bananas through a ricer to fill a cup. To this add a half cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of molasses, half a teaspoonful of salt, one beaten egg, one-half a teaspoonful of cinnamon, half a cupful of milk and a third of a cupful of cream. Mix thoroughly and bake until firm in a plate lined with pastry.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

This is an unusual recipe worth trying, especially by those who do not care for the rich ordinary mincemeat.

Lemon Mincemeat.—Squeeze the juice from four large lemons and place the peel in cold water, bring to a boil and change the water twice, cooking the peel until tender, then drain and pound to a paste, add four apples chopped, the juice of the lemons, one pound of currants, one and three-fourths cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of nutmeats, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg, allspice, cloves, salt and a half cupful of raisins, mix all together with half a cupful of butter and put into a jar.

Cheese and Spinach Roll.—Take two quarts of cooked spinach, add one tablespoonful of butter and chop fine. Add a cupful of grated cheese, two eggs, beaten, and enough bread crumbs to form into a roll. Bake in a baking dish.

Sour Roast Beef.—Take a quart of water, two cupfuls of vinegar and salt and pepper to taste; slice into this a few onions and carrots, then add a roast of beef. Allow the meat to soak over night, then roast as usual. When the meat is half cooked add the vegetables from the brine and a little of the brine to baste the meat. When the meat is tender, remove and add a half cupful of sour cream and flour to thicken. Serve hot. This is a delicious old German recipe.

Nut Strips.—Beat two eggs until light, add a half pound of brown sugar, one cupful of walnut meats. Sift twice five tablespoonfuls of flour and a quarter of a teaspoonful of baking powder and a dash of salt. Mix and spread thin on buttered pans. Cut in strips when cold. These are delicious served with afternoon tea or cocoa.

Raisin Bread.—Take a cupful of brown sugar, a cupful of sour milk, a teaspoonful of soda, a dash of salt, two cupfuls of graham flour, a cupful of raisins chopped. Put into a deep bread pan and bake fifty minutes in a slow oven.

Grow Fruit.

Within the last few years the hustlers of Owen county have begun to learn many valuable lessons. They have learned that the farm land of the states of much greater value than our forefathers knew and that by intensive farming and fruit growing the incomes from the farms may be doubled. Yet but little has been done to put out the right kinds of orchards and fruits. No winter apples can be had in Owen after the middle of winter, no cherries to supply the trade and no pears, grapes or strawberries to meet the demands. The farmers of the county need to take a short course in fruit growing and learn the business.

Planting, spraying and pruning are all important factors in fruit growing. There are many old fields in this county that needs to be worked up and put out in winter apple trees with a few of pears around the field. Every farmer can raise all the peach trees he needs and with a little study one may learn to bud fruit and soon grow an orchard. Thousands of barrels of Roman Beauty apples have been shipped into Kentucky from other states. Why? Because they are not grown here. Mr. Farmer grow more fruit, more berries and more things to eat.—Owen Co. Demo-

TO OPERATE TRACTOR

Engineer Should Know Every Part of His Machine.

Trouble Generally Caused by Two or Three Persons Handling Engine—Too Many Are Satisfied If Machine Runs.

(By E. R. GROSS, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

Trouble with the tractor often occurs when the operator can assign no cause. This is most likely to be the case when two or three persons handle the machine and no one is definitely "the engineer" and responsible for the machine. It may also happen to an inexperienced engineer.

The timing of the spark and adjustment of valves are just sufficiently delicate to cause much trouble if they are allowed to shift slightly on account of a loose bolt or are slightly changed by one operator without the knowledge of the others.

It is necessary to have one person who is the engineer and have him as well informed as possible on his machine. Every day he should learn something more about it and its operation, until he can truly say at all times just how every part is and thus locate trouble as soon as it occurs. Real trouble, time-wasting trouble, will come to such an engineer only through unavoidable accidents, and these will be rare.

The expert sent out from the factory cannot operate the tractor as well as the engineer who operates it daily, yet he may be able to find trouble the operator could not locate. It is the expert's business to locate trouble, the operator's, to avoid it. Too many are satisfied if a machine runs. That is not enough. Does it run right? Are all bearings perfectly lubricated and properly adjusted? Is there pounding, even to the very slightest degree? Is the valve and spark adjustment such as to give the highest power? No one can answer these questions so well as the operator, if only the operator knows. You can't get an operator who knows these things for your tractor, but you should get one who will know, when he has been on the job a short time.

CAST ALFALFA BEFORE SWINE

Coburn, Kansas Expert, Urges Farmers to Grow This Profitable Legume—Ideal Stock Feed.

"Cast your alfalfa before swine and your wife will wear pearls," says the Kansas alfalfa expert, Coburn, in urging farmers to begin growing this profitable legume. "Alfalfa is adapted to almost any region but must have a soil sweetened with lime and inoculated with soil from a successful alfalfa field or sweet clover corner." Many farmers have failed with alfalfa because of poor seed and careless methods in providing a proper seedbed. Mr. Coburn points out the fact that alfalfa is an ideal feed for horses, cattle, sheep, swine and chickens. Land that grows alfalfa is worth 50 per cent more than land that has not been made to grow this queen of legumes, he claims.

USE FOR A RIDGE SMOOTHER

Piece of Timber or Scantling, Attached to Harrow, Will Prove Quite Satisfactory.

To keep the common two-section harrow from leaving a ridge on the soil, and thus confusing the operator of the corn planter who is following the harrow, I make use of the following simple device here illustrated, writes A. Kirkley of Plainville, Ill., in Farm Progress. Either a 1 by 2 or 2 by 3 timber or scantling may be used for the drag that is fastened to the harrow. This smooths down the soil and does not add to the load. It may be fastened to the harrow by means of a chain or by a rope. It should extend about 2 inches on either side of the harrow. Wire will not do as well as the rope or chain, as it will break at the turns. The stick should drag about 14 to 16 inches back of the harrow.

UTILIZE ALL WASTE PLACES

Idle Corners Here and There Could Well Be Set to Trees—Profitable in Few Years.

On many farms there are waste corners here and there that could well be set to trees that would in the course of a few years be a source from which to get an occasional bean pole, fence post or other stick, and finally, if nut-bearing trees were planted, a fine lot of nuts would be produced; the basswood by the industry of the bees would furnish the table with the very nicest of honey; or if, in the case of the sugar maple, sugar of which there is none to equal it could be made, and during all this time the trees would be growing into valuable wood or timber.

DAINTIES FOR TEA TABLE

Sandwiches of Many Kinds Are at the Command of the Hostess—Various Forms of Cakes.

Sandwiches of various kinds and dimensions are always a good beginning. Better have the loaf a day old, and sandwich bread, close crumb, is the best to make them with. Spread the butter on smoothly and add a thin layer of nut paste. The top slice will not need butter. Trim the crusts off and cut diagonally across. Even smaller sandwiches, making four out of the square, are large enough for the bite.

Finger rolls, very fresh, with a soft crust and a paste made of chicken mashed with the yolks of eggs, boiled six or seven minutes, and just a little milk to make it smooth, are very appetizing. Graham bread, buttered and sliced the same as the sandwich loaf, spread with a mixture of jam and cream cheese, is very nice, too.

Meat minced very fine, with some milk to moisten it for smooth spreading, or thin slices of tongue with graham bread, makes good sandwiches.

Fresh Boston brown bread, mashed with cream cheese and sugar and made into balls, like butter, only smooth and larger, looks like great chocolate creams and makes a delicious titbit.

Meats that are potted and already minced into a paste for spreading of chicken, tongue and turkey make excellent sandwiches of white or brown bread.

If the sandwiches are made in the morning and intended for later use it is well to wrap each separately in paraffin paper. This will keep them soft and perfectly fresh until served.

Ginger nuts and cinnamon cakes have some snap to them, and macaroons and kisses are always ready at the baker's if the busy housewife is too rushed to make them.

It is not necessary to have so many kinds of sandwiches or cakes, but a choice of two or three of those mentioned here will be sufficient. The finger rolls are especially attractive, as they can be daintily disposed of without removing the gloves.

For Luncheon.

Omelette with tomato sauce is a delicious dish for luncheon. Beat the yolks of four eggs until foamy, then add two-thirds of a cupful of milk, with which has been mixed a teaspoonful of flour, one-third of a teaspoonful of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Beat well together, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites and bake in a buttered pan in a hot oven.

For the sauce melt a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan and fry in it until brown a small, finely chopped onion. Add a little of any small vegetables and a half a can of tomatoes rubbed through a sieve. Thicken with a table spoon of flour moistened to a smooth paste with a little cold water. Season with salt and pepper and cook for five minutes, stirring constantly. Pour over the omelette as soon as it comes from the oven and serve hot.

Rice a la Conde.

One-fourth pound Carolina rice, two ounces butter, three ounces sifted sugar, one pint milk, one tin apricots or peaches, one teaspoonful vanilla essence, cherries and angelica. Wash the rice thoroughly in cold water, put into a pan of cold water and bring to a boil, then pour away the water. Add the milk and stir until boiling, then cook slowly for three-quarters of an hour, stirring occasionally. Add the butter, sugar and vanilla, and turn into a bordered mold—one with a hole in the center—and set aside to cool. When cold turn out, fill the center with apricots or peaches and decorate with cherries and angelica. The peaches should be cut in half and the juice poured around.

Good Round Steak.

A very palatable and economical dish can be made from a round steak as follows: Pound flour into both sides of the steak, as much as the meat will take up. Fry in drippings or other fat in an ordinary pan or kettle, then add water to cover it. Cover the vessel tightly, so that no steam can escape, and allow the meat to simmer very gently for two hours. It is then ready to serve, the gravy being already thickened by the flour beaten into the steak. The gravy is delicious and far superior to the kind made in the ordinary way after the meat is cooked.

Vegetarian Turkey.

One-half pint mashed potato, half pint shelled English walnuts or pecans, one-half pint lentil pulp, one-half pint graham flour (coarse grains sifted out), two beaten eggs, two teaspoonfuls salt, one small onion minced, one teaspoonful sage, one heaping teaspoonful minced parsley and two tablespoonfuls butter. Mix ingredients, press in pan and steam one hour. Let cool, mold in shape of turkey and bake until brown. Baste with butter or meat stock. Serve with cranberry sauce.

Egg Sandwiches.

Try these for the lunch boxes: Boil as many eggs as desired until yolks are mealy. Chop the whites fine, add yolks rubbed to a paste. Moisten with salad dressing. Spread between slices of white or graham bread.

Fine Dish Cloths.

One would think there could be no possible use for an old lace curtain, but you will find in washing dishes three times a day that an old lace curtain, cut in squares, makes the finest of dish cloths.

KEEPING A GOOD STAND OF RED CLOVER

Heavy Second Crop of Clover.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Red clover is commonly seeded with small grain which is called the nurse crop. This nurse crop serves two functions, it keeps the weeds down and it produces a money crop while the clover is making its first year's growth. Whether it is wise to use a nurse crop depends on so many things that it cannot be discussed within the limits of a brief article; it has been abundantly shown, however, that if weeds are kept down by clipping, the clover will make a better growth when sown alone than when with a nurse crop. In dry seasons the nurse crop is pretty certain to cause the death of the clover by taking all the moisture and then leaving the young plants exposed to the heat of a July or August sun when in a weakened condition by reason of the lack of moisture. If a nurse crop is used care should be taken not to seed it too thickly, since the thicker the grain crop the more certain it is to smother the clover or to take all the moisture and leave the soil dry at harvest time. Of the small grains rye shades the ground the least and oats the most and these crops represent both extremes of desirableness so far as red clover is concerned. The most frequent causes of the death of young clover are the drought and heat to which the plants are subjected upon the removal of the grain crop. The amount of injury caused will, of course, depend on the season.

Injury will also be worse on soils deficient in humus since these run together and dry out more than soils having plenty of organic matter. Top dressing the fields with manure during late winter is as good a preventive of this danger as can be suggested. The manure will not only prevent loss of moisture but will furnish plant food for the young clover, making stronger plants, better able to withstand drought. It is also advisable to leave the grain stubble as long as possible so as to afford shelter to the young plants.

If there is a good stand of clover on a field in September and October there is every reason to expect a good stand in spring, barring, of course, most unusual weather conditions. If, however, the soil is deficient in lime the plant, though appearing fair in the fall, may lack the vigor to go through even a reasonably mild winter. Two mistakes are often made, and these should be guarded against: The young clover should not be pastured closely in the fall, nor should it be allowed to seed. Last fall, owing to the favorable summer young clover was found blossoming and seeding in many fields. This is bad because it weakens the plants and increases the number of clover-seed insects, the late broods finding these flower heads a fine place in which to lay eggs which hatch into larvae, many of which may live over the next winter.

Provided there is lime and phosphorus enough in the land, second-year clover should give little trouble unless attacked by root borers or other insects. There are leaf-eating insects that do damage locally and some fungi have been known to kill whole fields or to reduce yields, but the insects working on the roots probably give more trouble than other insects or than diseases. When a field becomes infested with root-eating insects there is nothing to do but plow it up. The fact that insects and diseases of all kinds increase in clover fields is one of the best reasons why such a field should not be kept longer than two years.

The principles of successful clover growing may be summarized as follows:

Give the clover a chance to make a healthy plant by adding lime, phosphorus and potash to soils that need them. In some way add vegetable matter to the soil and keep up the supply by turning under clover often enough.

Give the seed a fair chance by placing it in mellow soil and covering it from one-half to one inch deep.

If sown with a nurse crop, give the young plants a chance by not seeding the grain crop too thickly, by top dressing with manure if practicable, and by cutting the stubble as high as possible.

For further information the reader is referred to Farmers' Bulletin No. 455 of the United States department of agriculture.

DEFINITION OF PERFECT SOIL

Sand, Clay, Lime and Organic Matter Are Named as Necessary Ingredients by Ohio Expert.

Prof. Alfred Vivian, head of the department of agricultural chemistry of Ohio State university, defines a perfect soil as "one which contains the ingredients in perfect proportions; sand, to enable it to absorb air and moisture in proper amounts and to render it warm and friable; clay, to keep it cool, and prevent a too rapid leaching or evaporation of water; lime, to assist in the decay of vegetable matter, and organic matter to retain the best amount of moisture and to furnish material for the various chemical processes continually going on in good soils."

PULLING POWER OF TRACTOR

Prospective Purchaser Should Insist Upon Knowing Pounds Engine Is Capable of Exerting.

Before buying a tractor it is important to know its pulling power. An eminent authority says rated drawbar horsepower is not a satisfactory way of stating a tractor's pulling capacity. The prospective customer should insist upon knowing how many pounds of drawbar pull an engine is capable of exerting, and also the corresponding speed.

Drawbar pull in pounds means nothing unless speed is also given. Also if you know the normal pulling capacity of your tractor in pounds, you can figure to better advantage on how to avoid overloading it.

QUIT WASTING GOOD MANURE

Every Forkful of Fertilizer Should Be Returned to Soil—Don't Throw It Away.

Every forkful of manure should go back to the soil. Farmers back East are paying out at the rate of $2.50 for the sacked condensed plant food equal to that contained in one ton of manure—and are getting no humus-forming material, either.

We are heading for their fix fast unless we quit wasting the manure. The manure from one cow is worth anyway $20 a year. Why throw it away? It would be just as logical to dump the cream into the creek.

BUILDING A POULTRY HOUSE

Extreme Open-Front Structure Furnishes Ideal Conditions—Roosting Closet Desirable.

A house with a large area of glass and no muslin has a high moisture content and low temperature, accompanied with rapid changes. An extreme open-front house furnishes ideal conditions, providing the birds are protected from rain, snow and drafts.

A house, the front of which contains some muslin and glass is a very efficient type. Hollow tile construction makes a very desirable house, but it is doubtful whether at the present prices of tile and mason labor the resulting increased cost warrants its use. A roosting closet with double walls is desirable in shed-roof laying houses.

The providing of ample means of properly ventilating shed-roof, paper covered houses adds greatly in reducing temperature during spring and summer. Tongued and grooved boards for the outside wall when covered with a layer of building paper are reasonable in cost and supply in a great measure the nonradiating qualities of a double wall.

VALUABLE FEED FOR SWINE

Pigs Receiving Rape Pasture in Addition to Corn Make Big Daily Average Gains.

The animal husbandry department of South Dakota Agricultural college conducted an interesting experiment to determine the comparative value of hogging off corn with and without rape. It was learned that the pigs receiving rape pasture in addition to corn made a daily average gain of 1.28 pounds, while those receiving corn only, gained but 1.06 pounds.

SILO SAVES MUCH FEED COST

Begin Planning for Place to Store Green Fodder Necessary for Cattle During Winter.

It's none too soon to begin to plan on that silo for next fall. If you have not a silo now you should be planning to see if you couldn't make good use of one this year.

A silo or two on every farm last year would have meant the saving of a lot of feed that was more or less of a loss without the silo.

Special Notice.

The Farmers' Mutual Telephone Directory says, I handle any kind of rubber tire; and that I have the exclusive agency of the Republic Rubber Tires. That contract just cost me $200 of which some of my customers will attest. I guaranteed those tires and I filled same to the letter. Now, right here I do most solemnly promise and swear that I will never again change the old and tried for any new thing whatsoever. Furthermore, that I will not use any Rubber Tire except Kelly's Springfield—the first rubber tire ever made and the best. I ought to know for surely I paid last year to find out. It is just like a boy changing the old girl for the new or a man leaving his old and tried wife for a new one. Now, isn't it a fact that they always go back to the old and tried love, is it not so boys? That's what I have done with Kelly's Springfield Rubber Tire—gone back to my old love. While they cost me more money they will cost my customers $12.00 per set or $3.00 per tire: these tires I give a guarantee on for being as represented. They will not stuff out nor will they peel, but will wear smooth like a good tire should.

Now, in regards to repainting: I have tried to get a quick system and do good work, but I find it a failure so I give it up and must stick to the old system. All my work I guarantee to be as represented. I do anything in the carriage line. Bring me your work if you want it done right. I solicit your trade.

BIG FISCAL COURT

Two Days Devoted to The County's Road Problem.

Full Proceedings of The Term.

The following business was disposed of by the fiscal court at its special session last week:

Came the Verona and Mudlick turnpike company and offered to turn its road over to the county on the following terms: "That the road shall be kept in a good state of repair and that if any turnpike on which the county of Boone own or contracts any of the capital stock is ever purchased by said fiscal court of Boone county then the said fiscal court of Boone county will acknowledge upon demand its indebtedness to the stockholders of the Verona and Mudlick Turnpike company, and same was accepted by the court.

The Boone and Grant Turnpike Company's, and the Verona and Gallatin Turnpike Co's. roads were taken over by the county on the same terms.

The proposition of the Burlington and Belleview Turnpike Company to turn the pike over to the county on condition that the county repair same and expend the sum of $2,800 before Jan. 1, 1918, and said proposition was accepted by the court, and the toll gates are to be removed from same as soon as the stockholders consent in writing. Suits to Recover School Funds.

Suits aggregating $80,683.42 have been filed at Frankfort to recover money alleged to have been paid illegally by Barksdale Hamlett, of Hopkinsville; J. G. Crabbe, of Richmond, and Ellsworth Regenstein, of Newport, while they were State Superintendents of Public Instruction. Special Assistant Attorney-General John C. Duffy prepared and filed the suits, although they are signed by Attorney General Logan.

The petition in the Hamlett suit is against him, as principal, and R. H. Vansant, Mrs. Alice Mayo, executrix of the estate of John C. Mayo, deceased, and D. W. Gardner, secureties, to recover a total of $64,711, alleged to be due the state from Hamlett. The petition elleges that as Superintendent of Public Instruction Hamlett unlawfully and wrongfully and without right or authority of law paid out the following sums:

To himself as increased salary, $1,375; to Daisy Hamlett, his wife, $6,916.77; to himself for alleged expenses, $8,517.30; for the publication of books not authorized by law, $28,037.41; to various clerks, stenographers and other employees without authority, $19,-864.33.

It is alleged that this total sum was paid out of the state school fund. A judgment against the defendants is prayed for to cover the losses that the state is alleged to have sustained by these alleged unlawful and wrongful acts of Hamlett.

Each of the sureties executed bond to the state for Hamlett in the sum of $25,000 for his faithful discharge of his duties, and these bonds were accepted by James B. McCreary as Governor.

The second suit was against Crabbe, principal, and his surety Frank P. James for $10,550.43, of which $2,770.51 is said to have been paid out for additional clerks stenographers and help, $5,117.66 for alleged alterations printing, and $2,672 for alterations on the new capitol. These sums are alleged to have been paid out of the school fund without authority of law.

The third suit is against Regenstein, principal, and the National Surety Company to recover a total of $5,361.99, of which $916.70 was paid out as contingent expenses; $3,045 for clerks, stenographers and help, and $1,400 for printing, which is alleged to have been unauthorized by law.

Reports coming in from various parts of the county indicate that foxes are more numerous this year than common, and they have been committing great depredations among the poultry flocks. They seem to be particularly aggressive in the lower end of the county and many of the farmers living between here and Virden have almost been compelled to give up trying to raise poultry. Only a few days ago a fox appeared in the yard at the home of Edgar Patton and made off with a fine hen that was raising a brood of chickens. The animal seemed to be not the least bit afraid of the members of the family and paid no attention to their shouts. The young turkeys in that end of the county have also been greatly reduced in number by the foxes and an effort will be made by some of the farmers to get rid of the pests.—Clay County Times

WILSON LAUDED AS PEACEMAKER

St. Louis, June 15.—His voice burning with emotion, Ollie M. James U. S. Senator from Kentucky, today eloquently told the story of three years' leadership of the Democrats and lauded Woodrow Wilson as the greatest American of present day history.

James' was an appeal "not to swap horses while crossing a bloody stream," and a plea for recognition of the President as a "master diplomat" and "unconquerable leader," worthy of brilliant record in the book of history "for his achievements for peace."

"The Democratic party is proud of the achievements of Woodrow Wilson," he said.

"He has brought prosperity and plenty to 100,000,000 Americans. He has given work to every willing hand in the republic. Every toiler has the full dinner pail—full to overflowing.

"He elevates himself" the Kentuckian continued, "to that lofty but lonely eminence occupied by George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Woodrow Wilson, the three worst abused, but best-beloved Americans the Republic ever knew.

"Mexico, England, Germany and Austria look alike to him when America is involved.

"He might overlook the wrong of the weak, but never the insult of the strong.

"He has struggled for peace. When the last great day shall come and before the court of God the nations of this earth shall march in judgment review, the monarchs of the old world shall have to answer for this awful carnage, this heartless orphaning of millions of children, this cruel widowing of millions of mothers, this brutal turning of a once happy land into a place of mourning.

"And on that last day I can see our President holding in his hand the accusing picture by Henri Danger of Christ on the battlefield with the dead and dying all about him and with the roar of cannon, the scream of shrapnel, the wail of the dying and above his head written these words:

"'And He said unto them Love one another.'

"When that day shall come who is it that would have our President exchange places with the blood bespattered monarchs of the world?

"I can see Him, with the white light streaming upon his head, and hear the Master say: "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."

"With critics about him, with patience and strength and great foresight, he has kept a national peace with honor.

"He has driven from the control of the fiances of the people of this nation an ogigarchy of wealth, and substituted in its stead a just government, interested only in supplying the legitimate business needs of the country with such currency to meet its demands and requirements.

"It ought not to be necessary to nominate him in a partizan convention.

"Patriotism in this world crisis should rise above politics, and all parties should rejoice at an opportunity to proclaim him the whole-hearted and happy choice of a republic of peaceful freemen.

"And, as we cannot afford to swap horses while crossing a stream, who would say that we can afford to swap horses while crossing a bloody stream?

"So America cannot afford to change leadership during this great cataclysm that shakes the nations of the earth, for, to Wood row Wilson more than any other citizen in all the world of Christian people, wherever the rain falls or the sun shines, this world around, looks anxiously, hopefully and prayerfully that he will bring peace to the struggling armies of Europe.

"What party is it now that would dare undertake to discredit this master diplomat, this unconquerable leader, this great American, for by that you may palsy the hand that may write the peace treaty of the world."

James reviewed the record of Democracy, overlooking nothing. Here it is as James sees it:

Wilson chased the lobbyists out of the Capitol.

The party reformed the tariff.

Eliminated many panics by enacting the Federal reserve law.

Did more to build up an army and navy in three years than the Republicans did in 40 years.

Handled the German submarine problem with the greatest ability and won for America its greatest diplomatic victory.

Dealt with the Mexican situation as Abraham Lincoln did under like conditions.

Refrained from war with Mexico altho it would have insured victory, the poll tax, fall.

Tried to enact a bill creating a merchant marine, but it was defeated by a Republican filbuster.

Passed an effective rural credits bill.

Met quickly every demand of the stress of war and gave unparalleled prosperity to the country.

Freed business from the blackmail of the politician and emancipated it from the clutch of monopoly.

Has given to this country government without graft; administration without special privilege; expenditures of the people's money without dishonesty or scandal.

Demonstrated that principle is mightier than force, and that diplomacy hath its victories no less renowned than war.

Neither bullied the weak nor feared the strong.

Given work to every willing hand in the republic.

Provided a Federal Trade Commission whose duty it is to destroy favoritism, weed out unfair advantage and give to industry everywhere an equal advantage.

Drove from the Treasury of the nation a ship monopoly that was enjoying subsidies on canal tolls of millions of dollars a year.

Do You Favor a Fraternity Day?

Fraternity Day last year at Belleview was such a pleasing success that some of the prominent members of the several fraternal orders in this county desire having a Fraternal Day again this year, and to that end each lodge that is in favor of the proposition should notify Leonard Kite, Burlington, R. D. 2, who will take steps to have a meeting of representatives of the several lodges in the county, that the time may be fixed and the place for holding the exercises chosen. This matter should be taken up by the lodges at once and Mr. Kite informed as to their wishes in regard to the matter.

Now What Do You Say?

When Dr. G F. McKim, of Cincinnati, was in Burlington a week or ten days ago he informed some of his friends that his father, W. F. McKim, had organized a Wilson club at his new home in North Carolina, which was very pleasing to the Doctor, who is also a great admirer of President Wilson.

BURLINGTON TO HAVE CHAUTAUQUA

The Date Has Been Set For July 10, 11 and 12.

The people of this community should rejoice in the fact that this summer we are to have a Chautauqua of our own. Many of our citizens have during previous summers attended Chautauqua's in the larger cities nearby and they are very enthusiastic over the realization that this year they can enjoy the same kind of a program without going away from home.

The local committee which was instrumental in bringing the Chautauqua to Burlington, this year assures us that the program will be of the same high character as that provided for the larger Chautauquas, the only difference being in the length of the program.

The movement was started some time ago when a representative of the Welfare Chautauqua's visited our town and presented the proposition to a number of our public spirited citizens. The opportunity presented for affording the people of our community a chance to enjoy the splendid lectures, and musical entertainment was one that could not be overlooked and our business and professional men were practically unanimous in deciding at once to put Burlington on the map with other enterprising towns that provide wholesome and inspiring entertainment of this kind for their citizens.

All arrangements have been made to assure the event being a success in every way and every man, woman and child in the community should give the movement the support it deserves by talking it to friends, buying a Season Ticket and attending all of the six sessions.

The following Local Committees have been organized to carry out the details of the management:

Chairman of Committee on General. Charge, E. C. Riley.
Treasurer, A. B. Remaker.
Secretary, R. H. Carter.
Committee on Grounds, Dr. E. W. Duncan, N E. Riddell.
Committee on Publicity, W. L Riddell.
Committee on Light, Newton Sullivan.
Committee on Ticket Selling. L. A. Conner, Chas Maurer, W. D. Cropper, C. W Goodridge, Dr. M. A. Yelton, N E. Riddell, W. R Rogers.

The Chautauqua will be held on the school house grounds in a large tent furnished by the Chautauqua management. The platform, seats and piano will be provided by our Local Committees.

The program itself is a most interesting one. Space will not permit giving details regarding it in this issue, but it can be stated in a general way that there will be six inspirational and instructive lectures supplemented by six musical concerts and other entertainment of the highest order.

The programs and other advertising material has been received by the Committee on Publicity and the Posters, Banners, etc., are now being put up in conspicious places.

In next week's issue of this paper we will describe the various interesting features of the program in more detail. Read these announcements—spread the good news far and wide. Buy a Season Ticket. Be a "booster," not a "Knocker," and show your public spirit by doing everything in your power to make this the one big event of the year in this community.

Mrs. Kittie Ingram Dead

Mrs. Kittie Ingram, widow of the late R. H Ingram and a daughter of the late Noah Clore, of Florence neighborhood, died at Speers Hospital, Newport, one day last week after a very brief illness. The remains were taken to Belleview and interred last Friday. She is survived by two sons, Albert and Harry. Mrs Ingram had a large number of relatives in this county.

BESSIE MAE SIEKMAN.

Bessie Mae Siekman, the 10-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs Fred Siekman, of Taylorsport, who has not missed a day from school in three years, although she lives a mile from the school house and must cross a creek which is almost impassable during the winter months. She has been promoted to the Sixth Grade with high honors. This bright and determined young girl deserves much credit. We respect and honor all such young people; also her parents, who have kept her in health and fostered her ambitions, have their share in her success. May she continue in the path she has so nobly started to follow, and may others profit by her example.

Taking Notes in Pendleton County

Five hundred farmers representing sixty counties in the state, and covering the territory from the Big Sandy on the east to the Mississippi river on the west, who have heard much on the sweet clover and alfalfa growing in Pendleton, came here last Thursday morning in two special Pullman trains to see with their own eyes the conditions that actually exist. Most of these farmers came from hilly or broken districts similar to our, and are deeply interested in growing grasses. They came; they saw, and went away singing the praises of the good people of this county for the liberal hospitality extended them. It was an intelligent body of men who came, not on a pleasure trip, but seeking information. It took fifteen Pullman Palace cars to bring the visiting farmers to see the old sweet clover county of Pendleton, and every man was glad he was one of the number to visit and see what a bill county has accomplished in the last few years under adverse circumstances.—Outlook.

Base Ball—Burlington 4; Petersburg 2

The Petersburg ball team came up last Saturday afternoon and engaged the Burlington team on its diamond. Rogers and Slayback, for Burlington, and Tafferty and Berkshire, for Petersburg were the batteries. The score was 4 to 2 in favor of Burlington, altho Rogers was entitled to a shut-out. Rogers allowed 7 hits and struck out 14 men and had 3 errors behind him. Tafferty allowed 7 hits, struck out two men and three "doubled" Thompson was a live wire in the right field, while the other outfielders pulled down several hard drives. The ground was in bad condition and the players could not do themselves justice. The same teams will play at Petersburg next Saturday afternoon.

Went a Long Way Around

W. D Cropper came from the Chautauqua at Walton in his auto Sunday night, and rather than take his chances in the chasm east of town, he went from Limaburg to Hebron, to Idlewild, thence to Burlington, covering about fourteen miles to make two and a half. In so doing he exercised good judgment.

APPLICANTS FOR ENLISTMENT

Kentucky National Guard Examiners To Work Far Into Night - Blue Grass Brigade Ready for Service.

Frankfort, June 19.—So great was the flood of applicants for enlistment in the Kentucky National Guard which appeared at the headquarters of the various units today that medical examiners were forced to work well into the night. Many men were turned away and asked to return later.

All present members of the Kentucky Brigade will be examined and unfit men weeded out before the regiments move to a mobilization camp at Earlington. Among the applicants for enlistment appearing at the headquarters of the three regiments were many former members of the U. S. army.

A telegram was received by Governor Stanley from Captain Redd, of the House of Reform at Greendale stating that 175 inmates of that institution desire to volunteer for field service.

Major C. W. Longmire, of this city, said today he had received a message from Captain William S. Taylor, of Somerset, that 72 men desired to enlist. Major Longmire directed Captain Taylor to enlist his company up to 150, which is full war strength.

Brig. Gen. Roger D. Williams telegraphed to Gen. Hugh L. Scott, Chief of Staff, at Washington that the Kentucky National Guard was ready for service and that all of its companies are well equipped. Gen. Williams said that the present strength of the Kentucky guard is about 2,200, but that he did not believe that the Kentucky troops would be ordered from their mobilization camp to the front until their strength had been recruited up to 4,000 or 5,000. He said that would mean that the troops would be in camp, becoming hardened to camp conditions for sixty or 90 days. It was reported that the Kentucky troops would not be mustered in for about two weeks chiefly on account of the necessary preparations for their maintenance at the mobilization camp. The time will be utilized in recruiting the local companies up to their full strength and in completing the lists of stores and company equipment.

The impression has gotten into the daily newspapers that there is big shortage of shoes and leather in America. In consequence for about the first time in history, nearly every daily paper, large and small, in the United States has been publishing warnings about this alleged shortage, without giving study or serious attention to the matter. It is not surprising, therefore, that much leather, many shoes, and considerable leather merchandise of all kinds, had been hurriedly purchased and accumulated, as much as possible, by nervous and excited buyers. It can hardly be logically asserted that there is any shortage of shoes and leather in America. For fully nine months our shoe and leather factories, as a rule have been running at, or near, full capacity. This meant a tremendous output of shoes and leather. Even allowing for increased exports, we yet seem to be carrying fairly liberal supply of shoes and leather although some shortages may appear here and there, for special reasons.—Hide and Leather.

Henry C. Schafer, a farmer, school trustee and master of the local Masonic Lodge, was shot and stabbed to death in a schoolhouse nine miles south of Hawesville. His dead body was found in a pool of blood, with a large knife at his side, by his wife and daughter, who went to the school house after hearing shots. Schafer was 40 years old and is survived by his wife and seven children. Dr. R. W. Frymire, a widower, 65 years old, who has practiced medicine in Hancock county for 30 years, was arrested by a posse soon after the killing, but not until after he had been shot down when he resisted arrest. He was taken to Owensboro for safe keeping. Schafer and Frymire were closeted in the school house for more than an hour. Schafer's son went to the door and told his father that his mother had dinner ready. The father said he would be there soon. The lad says he left the building, closing the door. In a few minutes shots were heard.

H. H. Deacon, serving a life sentence for killing the umpire at a ball game in Bullitt county between Nelson and Bullitt county teams three years ago, was pardoned by Gov. Stanley on petition of citizens including a relative of the dead umpire, Robert Nell, county officers of both counties and the jurors. The Governor said the record showed that the umpire had been drinking and had frequent altercations with players, during one of which Deacon swung a baseball bat on the umpire's head, killing him. Petitioners said Deacon was incensed at the umpire's conduct and rulings but had no idea of seriously injuring him. He was only a years old.

It looks very much like Carranza is determined to force the U. S. into war with Mexico. At no time since he consented that a force of United States soldiers could enter Mexico in pursuit of Villa, has his actions and motives been above suspicion, but, on the contrary has been seeking an excuse to attack the American troops, no doubt, believing that Villa and other leaders of armed bands in Mexico will come to his assistance. Carranza is very little if any better than Villa in any particular.

Selling Vessels of the Ohio.

Recent references to early navigation of the Ohio River by sail and for cargoes from Cincinnati to Europe might mislead the casual reader to the belief that not until the forties were ships sailed down the Ohio to the Mississippi and thence to the Gulf and the Atlantic and foreign ports.

A century and fifteen years ago—on April 27, 1801, to the exact—Cincinnati people found anchored in the Ohio at the mouth of the Licking the hundred-ton brig St. Clair, with cargo from above and to be taken on here for "the Havanah." Commodore Abraham Whipple, a veteran officer of his country's navy in the War of the Revolution, and said to have been the first man to fire a gun at the enemy aboard a ship under commission, of our Congress, was in command of the St. Clair, launched at Marietta.

Many sailing ships, built and launched along the Ohio followed the St. Clair down the rivers to the salt seas during the first decade of the last preceding century. There were schooners, brigs, barks, barkentines, galleys and full-rigged ships, all launched and started down stream on the bosom of a "fresh," as the floods were called those times. The solitary voyager, closely hugging the stiller waters in his pirogue, gazed in awe at the unaccustomed vision or a fully masted and yarded ship sweeping down toward him on the rushing tide of the tawny Ohio, a ship as graceful as ever a Yankee privateersman dreamed of; a taut and trim craft of white oak and black walnut, with stately masts of splendid yellow pine and yards crossed ready for sails to be bent at New Orleans, but carrying now only a jib or fore and main topmast stay sails, and possibly, if a full rigger, a spanker to catch the breeze for steering the man at the wheel closely watching every shift of the current, and lounging at her bulwarks a crew of hardy frontiersmen, some of whom had learned their trade of sailing under their country's flag on the Atlantic and other great waters in the War of the Revolution.

During the forties there was revival of this enterprise with Cincinnati sharing largely in it. As late as 1850 Swasey & Co., of Cincinnati, built the brig Louisa of 200 tons, the bark John Swasey of 300 tons, and the bark Salem, 350. The late Capt John Swasey said many years ago to the writer of this: "Why, sir, when the bark John Swasey beat around Agulas there was not a thing about her, except cargo and crew, that had not been sent aboard her here. Every stitch of her canvas was put together in our lofts. We built her from keel to truck, and we put in every stick of her from royal wast down to spanker boom. Every bit of her standing and running rigging, every block and every stay—everything about her, you might say—was Cincinnati make, and our firm did it all."

The largest and finest of all the scores of sailing ships launched along the Ohio River and of the dozen or more from Cincinnati was the big full-rigged ship Minnesota, of 850 tons, built by Litherbury & Co., of Cincinnati, for Captain Deschong, of N. O., to carry cotton to Europe. The Minnesota had a long and successful career.—Enquirer.

Marquis Wheat.

Marquis wheat has aroused much interest in the United States recently, about 7,000,000 bushels being harvested in 1914. This has produced an abundance of seed and many farmers have been considering the advisability of growing this variety in the future. For this reason the results of the Government tests of this wheat published in Farmers' Bulletin 732 will be of special interest.

Marquis wheat, says the bulletin is a hybrid produced on the Central Experiment Farm at Ottawa, Canada. It is an early variety, ripening from 98 to 135 days after sowing, the average length of the growing period in the northern Great Plains being about 115 days. This makes it three or four days earlier than most of the Fife varieties, the group with which it is classed. Because of this earliness, Marquis wheat escapes to some extent the drought of dry years, the rust and fall rains of wet seasons, and the early fall frosts. These characteristics have made it especially valuable in the prairie Provinces of Canada. In the United States they have not proved to be so great an advantage.

In the northern prairie States, including Iowa, Minnesota, and the subhumid parts of eastern Nebraska, and the two Dakotas, the Government investigators found that Marquis wheat slightly outyields the groups of spring wheats commonly grown in the section. Where winter wheat can be grown, however, it outyields any spring wheat, Marquis included. The bulletin recommends in discarding well-known varieties, and advises the farmer who wishes to try Marquis to compare it carefully with the other spring wheats and to hold fast to that which proves best.

In the semiarid section covering most of the northern half of the Great Plains area and including most of Nebraska, the Dakotas, northeastern Colorado, eastern Wyoming, and the eastern half of Montana, the durum wheats have been found to outyield all the spring common varieties, including Marquis. Here again, however winter wheat is decidedly better than any spring wheat. The Marquis is not recommended, therefore, wherever winter wheat can be grown or wherever durum wheat is used. Elsewhere it is a safe variety to grow and is especially well adapted to central South Dakota where drought and rust often reduce the yield of later maturing varieties.

Clean Food Shops.

The food officials of many states are giving attention to the sanitary condition of country and city grocery stores, according to the officials engaged in the enforcement of the Federal Food and Drugs Act who recently have investigated the matter. The country store is both a collecting and distributing agency of foods. It sells foods of many kinds to the farmers and at the same time buys from them for shipment to the city butter eggs, fruits, vegetables, poultry and other products of the farm. If the shelves and counters are laden with dust, if cobwebs hang in every nook and corner, if flies, bugs, and vermin inhabit the place, the food products are certain to be more or less contaminated and likely to become dangerous to health. The reports from various State officials indicate that many stores have been found in the past to be in such a condition.

A clean, light, well-ventilated store attracts customers, and the progressive merchant needs no other incentive to keep his floor, shelves, and counters spotless clean, which includes screening from flies and the elimination of all other insects. Some storekeepers, however, seem to require prodding from food-and-health officials to induce them to maintain that degree of cleanliness which will insure that the food they handle will be free from contamination. Some of the States have very effective sanitary laws, which repure frequent inspection of all establishments where foodstuffs are put up, manufactured, or kept for sale. Other States depend upon the general provisions of pure-food laws which require that foods shall be free from contamination. A few of the States lack either a law that will reach the unclean store nuisance or means for enforcing the law.

State food and health officials have used various means to control effectively the sanitary condition of places where foodstuffs are sold. One of the most effective means that has been employed is that of securing the cooperation of women's clubs and civic organizations. When a delegation of women customers calls upon a merchant and suggests that he clean up, he is compelled to put his store in good condition and to keep it so. When the grocerymen in a town find that a large portion of the housekeepers are buying only from the cleanest stores, there arises a wholesome form of competition. A food inspector can, under even the best conditions, inspect a store but a few times during the year, because of the number he has to visit. The customers come every day, however, and when they act as unofficial sanitary inspectors the merchant with the unclean store can not escape detection and punishment in loss of trade.

Competition in cleanliness has been secured in one State by means of colored placards which the inspector gives the merchants who keep their stores in a sanitary condition. A store in excellent condition gets a large white placard, one in fine condition gets a blue placard, and one in good condition gets a red card; the store that falls below the latter grading gets no card. The proprietors are permitted to keep the placards posted in a conspicuous place as long as the store is kept in the condition represented. There is keen competition among the merchants to get and keep the best placards. The buying public knows what the different colored placards signify and are particularly partial to the white placard stores. Other States have adopted a score-card system similar to that used in grading dairies. The inspector scores each store where foodstuffs are sold according to certain points indicated on an inspection card. The scores are made public thru the local press by means of bulletins or circulars.

The sanitary condition of stores is subject to State or local control. The Federal Food and Drug Act has no jurisdiction over such matters except as to foods and drugs sold in the District of Columbia, the Territories, and insular possessions, which are under the direct control of the Federal Government. However, if food becomes contaminated in an insanitary store or in any other manner and is afterwards shipped into interstate commerce, the party responsible for the shipment may be prosecuted under the Federal law, and the contaminated food may be seized.

State News.

Farm conditions in Bath county were never better. Ample rains have enabled farmers to set out their tobacco and a good stand is reported from every part of the county. Some crops have already been sold at from 10 to 15 cents per pound.

A man with a wagon show canvas ed near Nortonville was accused of stealing rails from Wm. Miller, of that place. The trial took place before Squire E. E Smith, and tho no attorneys conducted the case several witnesses were examined. One man identified a rail by the knots thereon, saying he had sat on those knots many times. The accused man was acquitted. Madisonville Messenger.

The Bluegrass stripping season began the latter part of last week in Bourbon county. The crop will be between thirty-five and forty per cent. of the usual yield, the decrease being due to the enormous amount of white clover. White clover has practically taken full possession of all the pastures. Corn is doing well Hemp is growing well. Timothy is not up to the standard, but the alfalfa and clover crops are fine.

Graves county farmers had prepared their land this year many of them putting stable manure in the hills and others using commercial fertilizers. Corn crops are for the greater part in weeds and grass, too wet to cultivate. Unusual heavy rainfall has discouraged the farmers. Hog prospects are good and pasture likewise. Peaches, apples and most all small fruits give fine promise. Blackberries will be the biggest yield for many years.

W. E Forgy, who cut his first crop of alfalfa last week, reports a yield of about three and one-half tons per acre. Mr Forgy has six acres of this crop growing, from which twenty-two tons of hay were taken. There will be two other cuttings of the crop this year, and with anything like good seasons two more good crops of hay will be secured. Hence, it will be seen that alfalfa is not only a great soil builder, but a very profitable crop as a money-bringer. Alfalfa is being grown by a number of farmers but as yet the acreage is small. As the years go by it is hoped that the acreage will be largely increased and that this profitable crop will supplant to a great extent other crops that are not so profitable.—Pembroke Journal.

The Tobacco Crop.

Plants in Pennsylvania are short because of very unfavorable weather.

The usual acreage is planted in Ohio county, but poor yield predicted.

Extremely cool nights has retarded the growth of Virginia plants.

In Montgomery county, transplanting is completed in all but a few places.

In North Carolina, plants are scarce and growers say they will certainly reduce the crop.

About 80 per cent. of big tobacco crop set out in Graves-co., but heavy rains have washed and ruined much of this.

The acreage in Bath county is larger than for several years. Transplanting completed and a good stand secured.

The entire acreage is practically out in Nicholas county, and the stand is almost 100 per cent. Acreage larger than for a number of years.

The outlook for the crop in Bourbon county is good. Plants are plentiful and good and practically all have been set out. Acreage about the same as last year.

Jessamine county tobacco growers have finished setting their plants, which were unusually strong and large. The rains came in the nick of time to insure their growth.

Tobacco that was planted early in Fleming county is ready for first cultivation. Transplanting practically finished and prospects are bright for an early and a good crop.

In the Connecticut Valley, the continued cold weather has prevented the growth of tobacco plants sufficient for transplanting. It is doubtful if the setting out of the new crop will be finished before July 1st.

Practically this years' entire crop in Caldwell county was transplanted in May. This will be the first time in years that the growers have succeeded in getting virtually the whole crop out during the month of May.

Barley harvest has begun in Jessamine county, and the crop is very good. While wheat and rye are not so heavy, the heads are well filled. There is no complaint of the Hessian fly, which is injuring the wheat in many Kentucky counties. Bluegrass seed will hardly be worth gathering because of the unusual growth of white clover, which abounds in every pasture.

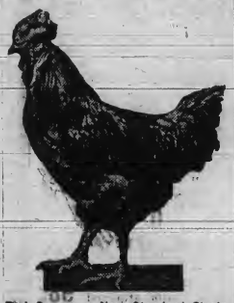
FARM POULTRY

MEAT AND EGGS FOR FARMER



One of General Purpose Breeds Is to Be Desired—Strain More Important Than Breed.

Leghorns, Minorcas, Spanish, Blue Andalusians, Campines, and Anconas are egg breeds.

Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Orpingtons, Javas, Dominiques, Rhode Island Reds, and Cornish are general purpose breeds.

Brahmas, Cochins and Langshans are meat breeds.

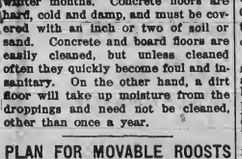
The strain is more important than the breed. Get stock always from someone who has developed a strain bred to lay. The trap-nest is the only test.

DIRT FLOORS GAIN IN FAVOR

When Built Ten or Twelve Inches Above Ground Outside Dampness and Rats Are Avoided.



There is difference of opinion as to which kind of floor is best for poultry houses. In my opinion, says a writer in an exchange, if given proper attention, a dirt floor comes nearer pleasing the hens than floors of either board or concrete. If a brick or concrete wall is built entirely around the house, and the wall filled in until the floor is ten or twelve inches above the ground outside, the building will not only be rat-proof but damp-proof as well.

Board floors must be raised at least eight or ten inches above the ground. This allows air to circulate underneath, which makes the house cold during winter months. Concrete floors are hard, cold and damp, and must be covered with an inch or two of soil or sand. Concrete and board floors are easily cleaned, but unless cleaned often they quickly become foul and insanitary. On the other hand, a dirt floor will take up moisture from the droppings and need not be cleaned, other than once a year.

POULTRY INDUSTRY IN U. S.

Unlimited Demand Guaranteed for Products by Increase in Population and Short Beef Supply.

The poultry industry has increased more rapidly than any other branch of agriculture. The annual valuation of poultry and eggs produced in the United States is reputed to be at least one billion dollars. The gradual increase in our population and decrease in the beef supply will guarantee an unlimited demand for poultry products for years to come and at lucrative prices.

Meat Food Increases Eggs

In the poultry feeding experiments made at the Purdue university it was found that the addition of some form of meat food to the ration increased the egg production about 100 eggs per pullet per year. This would mean about 10,000 eggs in a farmer's flock of 100 hens. The income per bird in the pen fed no meat food was 67 cents. The pen fed skim milk gave an income of $2.78, the highest in the experiment, due to heavier winter egg production.

Poultry raisers have long been familiar with the schedule of "grains, greens, grits and grubs," but farmers as a rule have paid too little attention to the "grubs" part of it. This experiment shows the importance of providing a substitute for the bugs and worms the fowls get during the summer season when they are permitted to range. On most farms there is plenty of skim milk and no better use can be made of it than to feed it to the chickens. Meat scrap and fish scrap can be purchased if skim milk is not available.

Over $400,000 has been poured into the coffers of Warren county strawberry growers in the past three weeks—a golden stream that will enter into the arteries of trade and redound greatly to the benefit of every line of business. This has been by far the best strawberry year Bowling Green and Warren county has ever known. Not less than $60,000—some say $72,000—was paid to strawberry pickers during the season drawing to a close. Up to Saturday 358 carloads had been shipped, and these cars heavily packed equal to at least 460 carloads of the capacity of those of 1915.—Bowling Green News

What is probably the largest tobacco crop in the history of Todd county has been set out, and the recent wet weather has caused plants to take on a fine hold and an unusually thriving appearance for so early in the season. Corn, too, is looking well, and taking into account the heavy rains that have largely prevented working, is remarkably free of weeds.—Todd Co Times

Farmers about Bracht Station have the progressive idea that an exchange of opinions brings about a betterment of conditions generally and establishes a healthy feeling of co-operation among all with whom they have connection, and for some time past these public spirited citizens have been holding a monthly meeting at the Bracht school house where various subjects have been discussed and suggestions made for advanced farming. With a view to extending the power of these meetings invitations will be extended to the good workers in the cause to attend some of the meetings and give the public the benefit of their knowledge and experience. The next meeting will be held Saturday, July 1st, at 7:30 p. m., when Prof Thos. Bryant of the State College, Lexington, will speak on "Profitable Stock Raising," and will be followed in practical talks by Hon. J. G Tomlin, A. R. Edwards, D. B. Wallace and others, and a pleasant and profitable meeting is anticipated.

Walton's first Chautauqua was a decided success in every particular outside of the very disagreeable weather that prevailed several days during the meeting. From the beginning last Friday until the closing number Tuesday night the greatest of interest was manifested and the program every day was entertaining and very attractive. Those who participated in the feature of entertaining were all worthy of the hearty applause they received, and their individual department was particularly pleasing to our people. H. W Stauffacker, of LaRue, Ohio, was the manager in charge and made a good impression on our people. Those of our citizens who guaranteed the $750 to the Chautauqua and the $50 for the electric lighting, succeeded in getting sufficient patronage to be able to meet the bills without going into their pockets and so well pleased were they with the entire affair that they have contracted for a Chautauqua meeting here next year at $800 guarantee, and about 400 tickets at $1.50 for the season have been signed for by our citizens. It was altogether a nice affair for the town and there is no one who regrets its coming and all seem to be anxious for a return of the Chautauqua next year.

The Burlington and Petersburg teams played a pretty good game last Saturday at Petersburg in which the features were Brown's running one hand catch of a long line drive to right field and Ruth's, Huey's and Roger's pitching.

The game opened with Tafferty in the box for Petersburg, Kelly, first man up, waited Tafferty out, and Conner hit safe to left field. The next three men went out but not until Kelly had scored. In the first three innings 11 men faced Huey four of whom struck out, only two of the eleven seeing first, one on four balls and the other on an error. It was in the fourth that Tafferty was hit to a fare you well, and four runs were scored. Huey, the first man up went out Cosby to Mahan, Kelly got four bad ones again. Conner singled and Rogers, Tolin and Slayback each followed with two baggers, before the slaughter could be stopped and there was no more Taffy in the game. Ruth was put in the box and stopped the carnage, pitching five innings, allowing only three hits and no runs.

In the fourth inning Huey allowed two hits and gave one man a base on balls and before he could retire the side one had scored. In the fifth inning Ruth, second man up, hit for a home run, and Shinkle singled, but only one run was scored. In the next inning Huey retired the side on strike outs and surrendered the box to Rogers, who officiated three innings, struck out 9 men, allowed no hits and no runs, only ten men facing him in three innings.

MAKING THE BUTTER CAKES

Breakfast and Luncheon Delicacy Worth All the Time That Can Be Bestowed on It.

An earthen bowl should always be used for mixing cake, and a wooden cake spoon with slits lightens the labor. Measure dry ingredients, and mix and sift baking powder and spices, if used, with flour. Count out number of eggs required, breaking each separately that there may be no loss should a stale egg chance to be found in the number, separating yolks from whites if rule so specifies. Measure butter, then liquid. Having everything in readiness, the mixing may be quickly accomplished.

If butter is very hard, by allowing it to stand a short time in a warm room it is measured and creamed much easier. If time cannot be allowed for this to be done, warm bowl by pouring in some hot water, letting stand one minute, then emptying and wiping dry. Avoid overheating the bowl, as butter will become oily rather than creamy. Put butter in bowl and cream by working with a wooden spoon until soft and of a creamy consistency, then add sugar gradually and continue beating. All yolks of eggs or whole eggs beaten until light, liquid and flour mixed and sifted with baking powder; or liquid and flour may be added alternately. When yolks and whites are beaten separately whites are usually added at the last, as in the case when whites of eggs alone are used.

A cake can be made fine grained only by long beating, although light and delicate with a small amount of beating.

Never stir cake after the final beating, remembering that beating motion should always be the last used.

Fruit, when added to cake, is usually floured, to prevent its settling to the bottom. This is not necessary if it is added directly after the sugar, which is desirable in all dark cakes. If a light fruit cake is made, fruit added in this way discolors the loaf. Citron is cut first in thin slices, then in strips, floured, and put in between layers of cake mixture. Raisins are seeded and cut, rather than chopped. Washed currants, put up in packages, are quite free from stems and foreign substances, and need only picking over and rolling in flour.

Stewed Beef With Dried Green Peas.

Wash (after picking over) one pint of dried green peas. Put in kettle with enough water and let come to a boil (water should cover), and while boiling add about one-half teaspoonful of baking soda (saleratus). Continue boiling for about five or ten minutes, then remove from fire and strain and wash the peas to free from taste of soda. Prepare about one-half pound of lean beef (stew beef) by rinsing and cutting up in not too small pieces. Put the meat and prepared peas again in kettle and stew until meat is tender. Keep covered with water while meat is cooking. Season with salt, pepper and a small lump of butter (the butter may be omitted, but I prefer to add it).

Mock Fish.

Cut some scraped salsify into inch lengths, dropping them as done into water acidulated either with vinegar or lemon juice, and, soaking them in it for an hour; drain carefully, barely cover with boiling salted water, cook gently until soft, and strain.

Having made a thick, white sauce with the liquor mingled with an equal quantity of scalded milk, thickened with butter and flour in the usual proportions and seasoned agreeably with salt, pepper and lemon juice, put the salsify into fireproof shells, mask with the sauce, strew lightly with bread crumbs and a few knobs of butter, and brown in a quick oven. Or, if preferred, serve in cases of puff paste.

Vegetarian Rissoles.

Rub three ounces of butter into one-half pound of whole-meal bread crumbs, adding one tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley, one teaspoonful each of shredded onion and of minced herbs, a grate of nutmeg and lemon peel and seasoning to taste; mix this with an egg beaten up in one teacupful of milk, or, better still if available, of white sauce; mold into balls or torpedoes, fry in hot fat and serve garnished with daintily fried slices of hard-boiled egg, handing brown sauce and red currant jelly at the same time.

Irish Iceberg.

Put four cupfuls of water and two cupfuls of sugar in saucepan, bring to the boiling point and let boil 20 minutes. Cool, add three-fourths cupful of lemon juice. Color green and strain. Freeze, using three parts of finely-crushed ice to one part of rock salt. Serve in tall dessert glasses and pour over each portion one teaspoonful of creme de menthe. Sprinkle with chopped nuts, using Jordan almonds, English walnuts, and pecans in equal proportions.—Woman's Home Companion.

White Sauce.

Two tablespoonfuls butter, two tablespoonfuls flour, one cupful milk or white stock, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, a few grains cayenne, one-fourth teaspoonful pepper. Melt butter, add flour, seasonings and liquid. Stir until the boiling point is reached. Boil five minutes, beating constantly.

For Irons That Stick.

Irons will never stick to clothes if one-half teaspoonful of either lard or kerosene is added to the starch while it is hot.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION SIDELIGHTS

One of the most interesting features of the recent Democratic convention at St. Louis is the fact that it took lovely woman to force the only roll call demanded on the national platform, as well as to inspire the only real excitement that marked the convention.

"Votes for Women" was the issue that stirred up things. The Mexican plank, nailed in at the last minute by the platform builders, did not create a ripple. "Americanism" and "preparedness" received polite ovations, but it remained for the woman suffrage plank to start a real fracas.

Headed by Gov. Ferguson of Texas, the antis endeavored to wrench the suffrage plank from the platform. But President Wilson's feelings on the subject, as presented to the convention by Senator Walsh of Montana, were not to be ignored. And so, after a three-hour battle in which the term "political expediency" was used with telling effect, the antis were routed by a vote of 888¼ to 181¼.

The vote, however, does not tell the real story of the battle, which was one of the most vigorous and picturesque ever staged at a national Democratic convention. Fifteen women delegates fought from the floor on the side of the pro-suffragists, while hundreds of their sisters waved yellow pennants and cheered them on from the balconies. A thunderstorm that almost drowned out the voices of the delegates as they answered the roll call brought both the suffrage battle and the convention to a most melodramatic finish.

THE SUFFRAGE PLANK.

"We recommend the extension of franchise to the women of the country by the states upon the same terms as to men."

It was the above little plank that inspired Gov. Ferguson of Texas to mount the platform in the Coliseum and read a minority report withholding the party support from the ladies who want the vote. That the Democratic party should scorn the political exigencies of the situation and defy the 12 western states in which women vote was the burden of his argument. Sharing the same opinion with him were C. L. Bartlett of Georgia, Stephen B. Fleming of Indiana and "Jim" Nugent of New Jersey, the old-time enemy of President Wilson. This trio signed the minority report with the Texan.

Lined up against Gov. Ferguson, who acted as spokesman for the minority, were Senator Stone of Missouri, Senator Pittman of Nevada and Senator Walsh of Montana.

Senator Walsh did not mince matters in his argument for the adoption of the suffrage plank. He stated plainly the adoption of the plank was necessary as a matter of political expediency, adding that the present political situation in this country was a condition and not a theory.

"The states in which women vote control 91 votes in the electoral college," he said, adding significantly, "every political party has declared for woman suffrage in some way or other. It becomes a simple question whether you will incur the enmity of these women.

"Now, my friends," he continued, "as late as 1907 there were but two states west of the Missouri river that returned Democratic senators and now we have 15 of them. The question is, are you ready to surrender the 16 votes you have in the United States senate and turn them over to your political enemies?"

In conclusion, Senator Walsh said that he revealed no secret when he said President Wilson knew all about the suffrage plank.

"The president believes it vital to his success that it stay in the platform," he said. "I ask you in all the fervor of my soul, who is there wiser or more patriotic than he?"

Following Senator Walsh's speech, Gov. Ferguson was allowed five minutes for rebuttal. The vote was then taken and his minority report voted down, after which the original suffrage plank, as approved by the resolutions committee was unanimously adopted.

The Women Delegates.

The presence of the 15 women delegates at the Democratic convention not only added color to the affair, but changed the views of a number of the men delegates on the subject of political activity for women. For the women delegates were a fine, whole-some-looking [illegible] and they worked as enthusiastically for the best interests of the party as the men.

Three of them, Miss Mary E. Foy of California, Mrs. T. S. Taliaferro of Wyoming, and Mrs. W. A. Harris of Kansas, spoke before the resolutions committee in favor of the suffrage plank which the National American Woman Suffrage Association presented to the convention.

One of the other delegates, Mrs. Teresa E. Graham, of Idaho, was nominated by the National Democratic committee to be one of the committee that will notify Vice-President Marshall of his nomination.

W. D. Cropper, S. B. C.

The hemp growing industry in the Bluegrass will outrival the tobacco crop this year, it is said. Hemp, in the days gone by, was a money-maker but it gradually gave way to the cultivation of tobacco, the high prices favoring the latter. But in the last year or so the tide has turned in favor of hemp again. Thus the farmers of the Bluegrass will not allot so large an acreage to the nictoine plant this year, preferring to have smaller fields and give them a more scientific cultivation, bringing their Burley leaf up to a higher grade of excellence. Why wouldn't it be an excellent idea for the farmers of Woodford county to curtail their tobacco acreage and raise something else? Diversify your farming, farmers; raise more corn, wheat, potatoes and other farm products. When you do this you are feeding the hungry and rendering a service to mankind.

Carroll county's tobacco crop is set, and frequent rains have started the plants growing exceeding any setting in years. The acreage, from best information attainable, is about equal to that of 1915, though it may exceed it.—Carrollton News.

RECIPES WORTH WHILE

FIVE DELICIOUS DISHES THAT ARE EASY TO PREPARE.

Egg Noodles With Anchovies May Be Recommended—Vermicelli Sweet Custard Excellent—Proper Preparation of Macaroni Soup.

Egg Noodles With Anchovies.—Fry a small onion, sliced, in butter with a teaspoonful of chopped parsley; add six boned anchovies, cut in four pieces each; stir in three-quarters of a cupful of white wine and a cupful of cooked egg noodles and simmer gently for 20 minutes. Serve with grated cheese.

Egg Noodle Sweet Souffle.—Add half a package of cooked egg noodles to two cupfuls of hot milk, and let stand on back of stove until milk is mostly absorbed, then let it cool and add a teaspoonful of salt, half a cupful of sugar, the beaten yolks of two eggs, and whites beaten to a stiff froth. Turn into a buttered souffle mold, set it in a pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven 25 minutes. Serve immediately alone or with sweetened cream.

Vermicelli Sweet Custard.—To half a package of cooked vermicelli add two cupfuls hot milk, a teaspoonful of salt, half a cupful of sugar, two eggs well beaten and half a teaspoonful of vanilla. Turn into a buttered baking dish, set dish in a pan of hot water in oven and bake until the custard is set.

Macaroni Soup.—To one quart of boiling water, salted, add a large handful of macaroni, boil 20 minutes, drain and blanch. Add two cupfuls of strained stewed tomatoes, season highly and just before serving add a cupful of cream.

Soup Spanish With Rings.—Simmer in three quarts of water two pounds of lean meat for two hours. Skim well as it boils, then add one cupful of cooked white beans, four onions chopped fine, two cloves of garlic, four red peppers chopped, and two slices of lemon, salt to taste; allow this to cook thoroughly until soft, strain through a colander, rub through the pulp, place on the fire again and boil; add lastly one-fourth package of soup rings, one tablespoonful of butter and one of milk rubbed in two ounces of flour. When rings are tender the soup is ready.

New Apple Salad.

Beat half a cupful of double cream, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a quarter teaspoonful of salt until firm throughout. Cook two apples, cored and cared, in a syrup of equal measures of sugar and water (two or three cloves or an inch of cinnamon bark may be added) and set them aside to become thoroughly chilled. Chop fine four maraschino or candied cherries and eight or ten pecan nuts or blanched almonds. Carefully wash three small heads of tender lettuce, first removing the ragged outer leaves and cutting the stalks that the heads may stand. Dispose the heads on individual plates with an apple in the center of each. Mix the cherries and nuts through the prepared cream and turn it over the apples.

Rhubarb Jelly.

Allow one pound of sugar to a pound of rhubarb. Peel and cut up rhubarb into small pieces, put into a dish a layer of rhubarb and a layer of sugar until all is used. Do this in the evening, then in the morning pour off all the liquid you can into a saucepan and boil hard for 30 minutes. Then add the rhubarb, let come to the boiling point and simmer for ten minutes. Do not stir at all. Stand your jars in boiling water to prevent breaking, and then pour jelly into them while hot. After jars are secured turn them upside down to cool, and when cool keep in a dark place. Strawberries may be put away in the same way, using less sugar.

To Launder Fringed Cloths.

Fringed cloths are often quite ruined in appearance at the laundry. They may be made to look like new for an indefinite period if when they are starched a little care is taken not to starch the fringe. Fold each cloth in four, like a handkerchief, and then gather the fringe of each part into the hand and hold it firmly while you dip the middle into the starch. When the cloth is dry shake the fringe well and comb it with a comb and it will fall as softly and prettily as when new.

Cauliflower and Cabbage.

To keep cauliflower white and free from scum when cooking, before placing the cauliflower in the saucepan tie it up in a piece of clean muslin. When ready, it can be easily lifted from the pot into the colander to drain. Untie the muslin and you will find the vegetable beautifully white.

The same applies to cabbage, to prevent which spoiling all that it always smells, is found very good to have a piece of bread tied up in the muslin and put in the saucepan.

Prune Pie.

Stew one pound of seeded raisins, one pound of prunes (raw), chopped together, in one cupful water, two cupfuls of sugar with one cupful of flour mixed to a paste; mix all together and bake with two crusts.

Turnip With Onion.

Slip and put in salted water. When tender drain and mash turnip and onion together with butter and a little pepper.

DAIRY

PROTECTION OF MILK SUPPLY

Dependable Means of Determining Healthy Cows Afforded by Means of Tubercular Tests.

The increasing interest in the protection of the milk supply for the consuming public is one of the encouraging features of live stock improvement, and equally so as a sanitary means of improved health among our people. It has demanded some nerve and resolution on the part of sanitary officials in all parts of the country. It has become a risky proposition now for a health officer to lend his assistance to any dishonesty in the matter of covering up a diseased or unhealthy animal.

The guarding of the milk supply for the innocent purchaser and user is certainly a noble work for anyone in authority. The tubercular tests applied to cows in many of the dairies furnishing milk to city and townspeople have proved to be a very dependable means of determining the health of the animal as to this particular ailment.

There is but a very small per cent of the cattle on farms and ranges that are affected by this disease, except by coming in contact with the disease distributed through the dairy cow from diseased districts. The wearing of the tag in the ear is the trademark that all cow buyers should observe, if they are especially skeptical as to a cow's lung power and general tubercular standing. It is well to be on the safe side and insist on the tuberculin test.

LIABLE TO BECOME CHOKED

Trouble Is Likely to Occur When Animals Attempt to Devour Vegetables Without Mastication.

(By H. S. RAKINS, Colorado Station.)

Of all animals on the farm, cattle are, perhaps, the most liable to become choked. Choking is most liable to result from attempting to swallow without mastication, carrots, turnips, potatoes, apples or sugar beets. Cattle frequently choke from chewing leather, boot heels, old rags and all sorts of unseemly things which could not be digested if swallowed, and the practice indicates a depraved appetite.

In such cases, if the services of a veterinarian cannot be secured the owner will have to do the best he can alone, and the things that are usually done first should not be done at all. Attempting to pour water down the throat usually results in most of it going into the lungs, and the result is death of the animal, that might otherwise have been saved.

A case of turnip choke came under observation recently. A sharp-pointed broomstick was thrust down into the throat in an effort to push the turnip downward, and the animal died from the injury. Less heroic efforts will usually relieve the animal. Whatever is attempted to relieve the sufferings animal, do not try the drench or the broomhandle.

SANITARY DAIRY MILK PAILS

Old-Fashioned Habit of Using Open Bucket Has Been Discarded—Quality Now Counts.

A time-honored practice is to use an open pail and bring it into the house peppered with an unpleasant assortment of stable dirt and refuse. That may have been good enough for grandfather but you can't get away with it in these days of sanitation. Instead you use a closed pail, milking through a strainer packed with an absorbent cotton filter. Sure! They cost a little money, but so does anything worth while. For the fellows who believe in "Quality" such an investment will pay more than 10 per cent interest if a trifle of good salesmanship is used to dispose of the superior output.

BETTER FEEDING OF CATTLE

Best Method of Treating Manure Is to Scatter It Over Fields in Winter or Summer.

The better feeding of live stock, the more valuable is the manure; and the more manure is worth, the more need is there for the proper handling of it. The best method of treating manure is to haul it out as soon as made and scatter it over the field, whether the season be winter or summer.

Special Notice.

The Farmers' Mutual Telephone Directory says, I handle any kind of rubber tire; and that I have the exclusive agency of the Republic Rubber Tires. That contract just cost me $200 of which of some of my customers will attest. I guarantee those tires and I filled same to the letter. Now, right here I do most solemnly promise and swear that I will never again change the old and tried for any new thing whatsoever. Furthermore, that I will not use any Rubber Tire except Kelly's Springfield—the first rubber tire ever made and the best. I ought to know for surely I paid last year to find out. It is just like a boy changing the old girl for the new or a man leaving his old and tried wife for a new one. Now, isn't it a fact that they always go back to the old and tried love, is it not so boys? That's what I have done with Kelly's Springfield Rubber Tire—gone back to my old love. While they cost me more money they will cost my customers $12.00 per set or $3.00 per tire: these tires I give a guarantee on for being as represented. They will not stuff out nor will they peel, but will wear smooth like a good tire should.

Now, in regards to repainting: I have tried to get a quick system and do good work, but I find it a failure so I give it up and must stick to the old system. All my work I guarantee to be as represented. I do anything in the carriage line. Bring me your work if you want it done right. I solicit your trade.

MAKING THE BUTTER CAKES

Somewhat and Luncheon Delicacy Worth All the Time That Can Be Bestowed on It.

An earthen bowl should always be used for mixing cake, and a wooden cake spoon with slits lightens the labor. Measure dry ingredients, and mix and sift baking powder and spices, if used, with flour. Count out number of eggs required, breaking each separately that there may be no loss should a stale egg chance to be found in the number, separating yolks from whites if rule so specifies. Measure butter, then liquid. Having everything in readiness, the mixing may be quickly accomplished.

If butter is very hard, by allowing it to stand a short time in a warm room it is measured and creamed much easier. If time cannot be allowed for this to be done, warm bowl by pouring in some hot water, letting stand one minute, then emptying and wiping dry. Avoid overheating the bowl, as butter will become oily rather than creamy. Put butter in bowl and cream by working with a wooden spoon until soft and of a creamy consistency, then add sugar gradually and continue beating. All yolks of eggs or whole eggs beaten until light, liquid and flour mixed and sifted with baking powder; or liquid and flour may be added alternately. When yolks and whites are beaten separately whites are usually added at the last, as in the case when whites of eggs alone are used.

A cake can be made fine grained only by long beating, although light and delicate with a small amount of beating.

Never stir cake after the final beating, remembering that beating motion should always be the last used.

Fruit, when added to cake, is usually floured, to prevent its settling to the bottom. This is not necessary if it is added directly after the sugar, which is desirable in all dark cakes. If a light fruit cake is made, fruit, added in this way discolors the loaf. Citron is cut first in thin slices, then in strips, floured, and put in between layers of cake mixture. Raisins are seeded and cut, rather than chopped. Washed currants, put up in packages, are quite free from stems and foreign substances, and need only picking over and rolling in flour.

Stewed Beef With Dried Green Peas.

Wash (after picking over) one pint of dried green peas. Put in kettle with enough water and let come to a boil (water should cover), and while boiling add about one-half teaspoonful of baking soda (saleratus). Continue boiling for about five or ten minutes, then remove from fire and strain and wash the peas to free from taste of soda. Prepare about one-half pound of lean beef (stew beef) by rinsing and cutting up in not too small pieces. Put the meat and prepared peas again in kettle and stew until meat is tender. Keep covered with water while meat is cooking. Season with salt, pepper and a small lump of butter (the butter may be omitted, but I prefer to add it).

Mock Fish.

Cut some scraped salsify into inch lengths, dropping them as done into water acidulated either with vinegar or lemon juice, and, soaking them in it for an hour; drain carefully, barely cover with boiling salted water, cook gently until soft, and strain.

Having made a thick, white sauce with the liquor mingled with an equal quantity of scalded milk, thickened with butter and flour in the usual proportions and seasoned agreeably with salt, pepper and lemon juice, put the salsify into fireproof shells, mask with the sauce, strew lightly with bread crumbs and a few knobs of butter, and brown in a quick oven. Or, if preferred, serve in cases of puff paste.

Vegetarian Rissoles.

Rub three ounces of butter into one-half pound of whole-meal bread crumbs, adding one tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley, one teaspoonful each of shredded onion and of minced herbs, a grate of nutmeg and lemon peel and seasoning to taste; mix this with an egg beaten up in one teacupful of milk, or, better still if available, of white sauce; mold into balls or torpedoes, fry in hot fat and serve garnished with daintily fried slices of hard-boiled egg, handing brown sauce and red currant jelly at the same time.

Irish Iceberg.

Put four cupfuls of water and two cupfuls of sugar in saucepan, bring to the boiling point and let boil 20 minutes. Cool, add three-fourths cupful of lemon juice. Color green and strain. Freeze, using three parts of finely-crushed ice to one part of rock salt. Serve in tall dessert glasses and pour over each portion one teaspoonful of creme de menthe. Sprinkle with chopped nuts, using Jordan almonds, English walnuts, and pecans in equal proportions.—Woman's Home Companion.

White Sauce.

Two tablespoonfuls butter, two tablespoonfuls flour, one cupful milk or white stock, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, a few grains cayenne, one-fourth teaspoonful pepper. Melt butter, add flour, seasonings and liquid. Stir until the boiling point is reached. Boil five minutes, beating constantly.

For Irons That Stick.

Irons will never stick to clothes if one-half teaspoonful of either lard or kerosene is added to the starch while it is hot.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION SIDELIGHTS

One of the most interesting features of the recent Democratic convention at St. Louis is the fact that it took lovely woman to force the only roll call demanded on the national platform, as well as to inspire the only real excitement that marked the convention.

"Votes for Women" was the issue that stirred up things. The Mexican plank, nailed in at the last minute by the platform builders, did not create a ripple. "Americanism" and "preparedness" received polite ovations, but it remained for the woman suffrage plank to staff a real fracas.

Headed by Gov. Ferguson of Texas, the antis endeavored to wrench the suffrage plank from the platform. But President Wilson's feelings on the subject, as presented to the convention by Senator Walsh of Montana, were not to be ignored. And so, after a three-hour battle in which the term "political expediency" was used with telling effect, the antis were routed by a vote of 888½ to 181¼.

The vote, however, does not tell the real story of the battle, which was one of the most vigorous and picturesque ever staged at a national Democratic convention. Fifteen women delegates fought from the floor on the side of the pro-suffragists, while hundreds of their sisters waved yellow pennants and cheered them on from the balconies. A thunderstorm that almost drowned out the voices of the delegates as they answered the roll call brought both the suffrage battle and the convention to a most melodramatic finish.

THE SUFFRAGE PLANK.

"We recommend the extension of franchise to the women of the country by the states upon the same terms as to men."

It was the above little plank that inspired Gov. Ferguson of Texas to mount the platform in the Coliseum and read a minority report withholding the party support from the ladies who want the vote. That the Democratic party should scorn the political exigencies of the situation and defy the 12 western states in which women vote was the burden of his argument. Sharing the same opinion with him were C. L. Bartlett of Georgia, Stephen B. Fleming of Indiana and "Jim" Nugent of New Jersey, the old-time enemy of President Wilson. This trio signed the minority report with the Texan.

Lined up against Gov. Ferguson, who acted as spokesman for the minority, were Senator Stone of Missouri, Senator Pittman of Nevada and Senator Walsh of Montana.

Senator Walsh did not mince matters in his argument for the adoption of the suffrage plank. He stated plainly the adoption of the plank was necessary as a matter of political expediency, adding that the present political situation in this country was a condition and not a theory.

"The states in which women vote control 91 votes in the electoral college," he said, adding significantly, "every political party has declared for woman suffrage in some way or other. It becomes a simple question whether you will incur the enmity of these women.

"Now, my friends," he continued, "as late as 1907 there were but two states west of the Missouri river that returned Democratic senators and now we have 15 of them. The question is, are you ready to surrender the 15 votes you have in the United States senate and turn them over to your political enemies?"

In conclusion, Senator Walsh said that he revealed no secret when he said President Wilson knew all about the suffrage plank.

"The president believes it vital to his success that it stay in the platform," he said. "I ask you in all the fervor of my soul, who is there wiser or more patriotic than he?"

Following Senator Walsh's speech, Gov. Ferguson was allowed five minutes for rebuttal. The vote was then taken and his minority report voted down, after which the original suffrage plank, as approved by the resolutions committee was unanimously adopted.

The Women Delegates.

The presence of the 15 women delegates at the Democratic convention not only added color to the affair, but changed the views of a number of the men delegates on the subject of political activity for women. For the women delegates were a fine, wholesome-looking lot and they fought just as enthusiastically for the best interests of the party as the men.

Three of them, Miss Mary E. Foy of California, Mrs. T. S. Taliaferro of Wyoming, and Mrs. W. A. Harris of Kansas, spoke before the resolutions committee in favor of the suffrage plank which the National American Woman Suffrage Association presented to the convention.

One of the other delegates, Mrs. Teresa E. Graham, of Idaho, was nominated by the National Democratic committee to be one of the committee that will notify Vice-President Marshall of his nomination.

The hemp growing industry in the Bluegrass will outrival the tobacco crop this year, it is said. Hemp, in the days gone by, was a money-maker but it gradually gave way to the cultivation of tobacco, the high prices favoring the latter. But in the last year or so the tide has turned in favor of hemp again. Thus the farmers of the Bluegrass will not allot so large an acreage to the nicotine plant this year, preferring to have smaller fields and give them a more scientific cultivation, bringing their Burley leaf up to a higher grade of excellence. Why wouldn't it be an excellent idea for the farmers of Woodford county to curtail their tobacco acreage and raise something else? Diversify your farming, farmers; raise more corn, wheat, potatoes and other farm products. When you do this you are feeding the hungry and rendering a service to mankind.

Carroll county's tobacco crop is set, and frequent rains have started the plants growing exceeding any setting in years. The acreage, from best information attainable, is about equal to that of 1915, though it may exceed it.—Carrollton News.

RECIPES WORTH WHILE

FIVE DELICIOUS DISHES THAT ARE EASY TO PREPARE.

Egg Noodles With Anchovies May Be Recommended—Vermicelli Sweet Custard Excellent—Proper Preparation of Macaroni Soup.

Egg Noodles With Anchovies.—Fry a small onion, sliced, in butter with a teaspoonful of chopped parsley; add six boned anchovies, cut in four pieces each; stir in three-quarters of a cupful of white wine and a cupful of cooked egg noodles and simmer gently for 20 minutes. Serve with grated cheese.

Egg Noodle Sweet Soufflé.—Add half a package of cooked egg noodles to two cupfuls of hot milk, and let stand on back of stove until milk is mostly absorbed, then let it cool and add a teaspoonful of salt, half a cupful of sugar, the beaten yolks of two eggs, and whites beaten to a stiff froth. Turn into a buttered soufflé mold, set it in a pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven 25 minutes. Serve immediately alone or with sweetened cream.

Vermicelli Sweet Custard.—To half a package of cooked vermicelli add two cupfuls hot milk, a teaspoonful of salt, half a cupful of sugar, two eggs well beaten and half a teaspoonful of vanilla. Turn into a buttered baking dish, set dish in a pan of hot water in oven and bake until the custard is set.

Macaroni Soup.—To one quart of boiling water, salted, add a large handful of macaroni, boil 20 minutes, drain and blanch. Add two cupfuls of strained stewed tomatoes, season highly and just before serving add a cupful of cream.

Soup Spanish With Rings.—Simmer in three quarts of water two pounds of lean meat for two hours. Skim well as it boils, then add one cupful of cooked white beans, four onions chopped fine, two cloves of garlic, four red peppers chopped, and two slices of lemon, salt to taste; allow this to cook thoroughly until soft, strain through a colander, rub through the pulp, place on the fire again and boil; add lastly one-fourth package of soup rings, one tablespoonful of butter and one of milk rubbed in two ounces of flour. When rings are tender the soup is ready.

New Apple Salad.

Beat half a cupful of double cream, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a quarter teaspoonful of salt until firm throughout. Cook two apples, cored and cared, in a syrup of equal measures of sugar and water (two or three cloves or an inch of cinnamon bark may be added) and set them aside to become thoroughly chilled. Chop fine four maraschino or candied cherries and eight or ten pecan nuts or blanched almonds. Carefully wash three small heads of tender lettuce, first removing the ragged outer leaves and cutting the stalks that the heads may stand. Dispose the heads on individual plates with an apple in the center of each. Mix the cherries and nuts through the prepared cream and turn it over the apples.

Rhubarb Jelly.

Allow one pound of sugar to a pound of rhubarb. Peel and cut up rhubarb into small pieces, put into a dish a layer of rhubarb and a layer of sugar until all is used. Do this in the evening, then in the morning pour off all the liquid you can into a saucepan and boil hard for 30 minutes. Then add the rhubarb, let come to the boiling point and simmer for ten minutes. Do not stir at all. Stand your jars in boiling water to prevent breaking, and then pour jelly into them while hot. After jars are secured turn them upside down to cool, and when cool keep in a dark place. Strawberries may be put away in the same way, using less sugar.

To Launder Fringed Cloths.

Fringed cloths are often quite ruined in appearance at the laundry. They may be made to look like new for an indefinite period if when they are starched a little care is taken not to starch the fringe. Fold each cloth in four, like a handkerchief, and then gather the fringe of each part into the hand and hold it firmly while you dip the middle into the starch. When the cloth is dry shake the fringe well and comb it with a comb and it will fall as softly and prettily as when new.

Cauliflower and Cabbage.

To keep cauliflower white and free from scum when cooking; before placing the cauliflower in the saucepan tie it up in a piece of clean muslin. When ready, it can be easily lifted from the pot into the colander to drain. Untie the muslin and you will find the vegetable beautifully whole.

When boiling cabbage, to prevent the unpleasant smell that it always makes, it will be found very good to place a small piece of bread tied up in muslin in the saucepan.

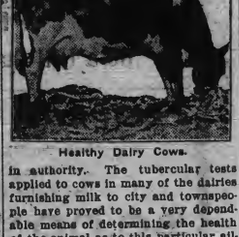
Delicious Pie.

Take one cupful seeded raisins, one cupful cranberries (raw), chopped together; one-third cupful water, two-thirds of a cupful of sugar with one heaping teaspoonful of flour mixed with the sugar; mix all together and bake between two crusts.

Mashed Turnip With Onion.

Cut up turnip and put in salted water with an onion. When tender drain off water, mash turnip and onion together, add butter and a little pepper. Serve hot.

DAIRY



PROTECTION OF MILK SUPPLY

Dependable Means of Determining Healthy Cows Afforded by Means of Tubercular Tests.

The increasing interest in the protection of the milk supply for the consuming public is one of the encouraging features of live stock improvement, and equally so as a sanitary means of improved health among our people. It has demanded some nerve and resolution on the part of sanitary officials in all parts of the country. It has become a risky proposition now for a health officer to lend his assistance to any dishonesty in the matter of covering up a diseased or unhealthy animal.

The guarding of the milk supply for the innocent purchaser and user is certainly a noble work for anyone in authority. The tubercular tests applied to cows in many of the dairies furnishing milk to city and townspeople have proved to be a very dependable means of determining the health of the animal as to this particular ailment.

There is but a very small per cent of the cattle on farms and ranges that are affected by this disease, except by coming in contact with the disease distributed through the dairy cow from diseased districts. The wearing of the tag in the ear is the trademark that all cow buyers should observe, if they are especially skeptical as to a cow's lung power and general tubercular standing. It is well to be on the safe side and insist on the tuberculin test.

LIABLE TO BECOME CHOKED

Trouble Is Likely to Occur When Animals Attempt to Devour Vegetables Without Mastication.

(By H. S. BAKINS, Colorado Station.)

Of all animals on the farm, cattle are, perhaps, the most liable to become choked. Choking is most liable to result from attempting to swallow without mastication, carrots, turnips, potatoes, apples or sugar beets. Cattle frequently choke from chewing leather, boot heels, old rags and all sorts of unseemly things which could not be digested if swallowed, and the practice indicates a depraved appetite.

In such cases, if the services of a veterinarian cannot be secured the owner will have to do the best he can alone, and the things that are usually done first should not be done at all. Attempting to pour water down the throat usually results in most of it going into the lungs, and the result is death of the animal, that might otherwise have been saved.

A case of turnip choke came under observation recently. A sharp-pointed broomstick was thrust down into the throat in an effort to push the turnip downward, and the animal died from the injury. Less heroic efforts will usually relieve the animal. Whatever is attempted to relieve the sufferings animal, do not try the drench or the broomhandle.

SANITARY DAIRY MILK PAILS

Old-Fashioned Habit of Using Open Bucket Has Been Discarded—Quality Now Counts.

A time-honored practice is to use an open pail and bring it into the house peppered with an unpleasant assortment of stable dirt and refuse. That may have been good enough for grandfather but you can't get away with it in these days of sanitation. Instead you use a closed pail, milking through a strainer packed with an absorbent cotton filter. Sure! They cost a little money, but so does anything worth while. For the fellows who believe in "Quality" such an investment will pay more than 10 per cent interest if a trifle of good salesmanship is used to dispose of the superior output.

BETTER FEEDING OF CATTLE

Best Method of Treating Manure Is to Scatter It Over Fields in Winter or Summer.

The better feeding of live stock, the more valuable is the manure; and the more manure is worth, the more need is there for the proper handling of it. The best method of treating manure is to haul it out as soon as made and scatter it over the field, whether the season be winter or summer.

Special Notice.

The Farmers' Mutual Telephone Directory says, I handle any kind of rubber tire; and that I have the exclusive agency of the Republic Rubber Tires. That contract just cost me $200 of which of some of my customers will attest. I guaranteed those tires and I filled same to the letter. Now, right here I do most solemnly promise and swear that I will never again change the old and tried for any new thing whatsoever. Furthermore, that I will not use any Rubber Tire except Kelly's Springfield—the first rubber tire ever made and the best. I ought to know for surely I paid last year to find out. It is just like a boy changing the old girl for the new or a man leaving his old and tried wife for a new one. Now, isn't it a fact that they always go back to the old and tried love, is it not so boys? That's what I have done with Kelly's Springfield Rubber Tire—gone back to my old love. While they cost me more money they will cost my customers $12.00 per set or $3.00 per tire: these tires I give a guarantee on for being as represented. They will not stuff out nor will they peel, but will wear smooth like a good tire should.

Now, in regards to repainting: I have tried to get a quick system and do good work, but I find it a failure so I give it up and must stick to the old system. All my work I guarantee to be as represented. I do anything in the carriage line. Bring me your work if you want it done right. I solicit your trade.

CHAUTAUQUA DATE APPROACHING

All Plans Worked Out to Make It The Event of The Year.

The plans of the local committee in charge of the Chautauqua are working out in fine shape. Everybody is showing a proper spirit by boosting the enterprise and indications are that it will be a grand success.

The committee in charge of the selling reports that the Season Tickets are going fast. Those who have not yet subscribed should do so at once if they do not want to pay the extra cost of buying single admissions. The amount saved by buying one Adult Season Ticket is $1.05, and the amount saved by buying a Youths Season Ticket is 65 cents. Thus it will pay to buy a Season Ticket even if you can not attend all of the six sessions.

As stated in last week's issue of this paper the program as announced is a most interesting one.

FIRST DAY.

There will be two musical concerts on the first day, one at 2:30 and one at 7:30 p. m. These concerts will be given by the Capitol City Concert Co., the personeli of which includes Marian Parkin, Soprano Soloist, Collice Trotter Null, Violin Soloist, Adah Whitted Strong, Pianist. Each of these ladies is a talented and accomplished musician and all combine the charm of ability and personality that has made them so successful in their chosen field. Miss Parkin is also an impersonator and will give variety to their program by her costume songs and readings.

The lectures on the first day one at 3 p. m and one at 8 p m., will be given by Charles L. Stalker, an entertainer and orator of many years experience on the Chautauqua platform. Not only does he have the reputation of being a polished speaker but he is also an artist and illustrates his lectures with lightning sketches, showing scenes and characters as he hurries along.

SECOND DAY.

The second day of the program will be a great day for the children and young folks as it is on this day that Irwin "The Prince Of Magic" appears to entertain and bewilder us with his sleight of hand performances. In addition to Irwin there will be Angelo Minnetti, an Italian Piano-Accordionist who plays this most melodious of all musical instruments with a dash and style that only the Italians seem capable of putting into their playing. Minnetti claims that the beautiful instrument upon which he plays and which cost him almost one thousand dollars, is the finest one in America. It has a volume and a quality of tone that closely resembles a magnificent pipe-organ.

It is on this day, too, that you have that unusual privilege of listening to a detailed account of the great war in Europe, as related by Lieutenant Donald McGibner, an American who spent several months in the first line tranches to the French Ambulance Corps and his work in caring for the wounded between the battle lines enabled him to observe actual fighting conditions in the terrible conflict as few Americans have been permitted to witness them. Lieutenant McGibney made many friends among the French officers, and was permitted to take many close up pictures right in the trenches, a privilege not accorded, he claims, to any other American. These pictures have been made into steroptican views and are used by Lieutenant McGibner in illustrating his lectures.

THIRD DAY.

The music on the third day will be given by a company of talented musicians—a mother and her three sons—"The Dickson's."

Mrs. Dickson is a contraito singer and pianist, Maurice sings tenor and plays the clarinet, John sings bass and plays the violin while Ross has a baritone voice and also plays the violin. All are talented musicians with many years experience on the Chautauqua platform.

Their program is made up of solos, duets, trios and quartettes, both vocal and instrumental. They give one concert in the afternoon at 2:30 and a grand closing concert in the evening at 7:30.

The lectures on the third day will be given by Dr. William H. Kent, of Iowa, who has made a special study of the small town and the methods used in building them. His lectures are full of inspiration and ideas that should help to make this community more progressive and a better community in which to live.

Every person in the community should hear Dr. Kent lecture in the afternoon on "THE GOLDEN NOW" or "THE SMALL TOWN CHURCH" and his wonderfully helpful address in the evening on "BUILDING UP THE HOME TOWN."

Almost Criminal Carelessness

As Miss Mary Furlong and her sister, Mrs. Kirb Tanner were coming home from church in Florence last Sunday morning, they were met on a sharp curve in the pike by an automobile that was driven at a high rate of speed and to escape a collision with the machine which crowded their side of the road they had to drive upon the bank and their buggy came very nearly turning over. There was ample room at the curve for both vehicles had the auto been held to its side of the road, but the lady says the driver acted as though he is one who thinks no other person has any right on the public road when he is passing with his machine. They do not know who the fellow was and could not get the number of his license tag, and it may be well for him in the matter of dollars and cents that they did not. Wreckless drivers will have to be looked after and the sooner the better.

Bankers Hold Important Meeting

At a meeting of representatives of several of the local banks held in Walton, last Monday, it was agreed that the local banks ought to take care of the $200,000 road bond issue, the rate of per cent to be four. It was further agreed that in case any citizens of the county should desire to purchase any of the bonds that they be turned over to them by the banks, the bank from which the purchase is made being paid in addition to the par value of the bond the four per cent interest accrued at the time the bond is delivered to the purchaser.

If the banks all agree to it the proposition will be made to the fiscal court, and will be wholly in the interest of the county, as the banks, should they become the permanent owners of these bonds will make very little out of them. Should the fiscal court decide to let the local banks have the bonds they will be issued only as the money is needed, which would be another saving to the county.

The banks are willing that the fiscal court investigate their proposition and should a better proposition be offered for handling the bonds that it be accepted, as they are not anxious to tie up so large a sum of money unless it is clearly to the county's advantage.

A Monstrosity.

William Afterkirk, whose cow several weeks ago dropped a monstrosity, was in Burlington one day the past week exhibiting photographs of the strange animal taken before it died. It was certainly a curiosity, its hide resembling that of an alligator. The The calf lived a month, and when it died Mr. Afterkirk had it skinned and is having the hide mounted.

The streets in Burlington are very dusty and because of the prospects of them being repaired this summer there in no effort being made to have them oiled.

Furlong sisters have improved the looks of their premises by the removal of their front yard fence.

Several weeks ago W. L. Will Build a Hotel

Practically all the stock has been subscribed for the new hotel in Covington. The building will be a concrete structure beautifully located on Seventh near Greenup street. It is to be a modern hotel in every particular. Covington has been without a good hotel so long that it may be a difficult task to secure a patronage that will sustain the enterprise.

A Good Job Well Done

The six foot sidewalk in front of Library Hall adds very much to the appearance of the front of the premises and the organization could not have made a better investment of funds, and is entitled to congratulations because of its sense of fitness of things. The sidewalk in front of the building now bears the impress of welcome, and the public will appreciate the spirit manifested in providing for its comfort. The sidewalk is a good job well done.

Improvement of the Dixie Highway

At the meeting of the Kenton county Fiscal Court Thursday in Covington bids were opened for the improvement of the Dixie Highway from Covington to Erlanger with concrete. Cooper & Co., of Louisville, presented the lowest bid, $84,604, for two sections. A section is about a mile and a half. The highway is to be improved from Covington to the present concrete road, a distance of about 1¼ miles. About two miles from the end of the concrete road on the Dixie Highway to Erlanger is also to be concrected. Other bids received were: Owen O. Hearn and Walter Metzel, of Covington, $71,200, for the entire roadway; Vastine, Nowland & Lowry, of Covington, $78,458; Lewis, of Covington, $70,000; Moridge & Co., of Newport, $71,235.

All the above bids were rejected as being too high.

Something about the Fish Law

The act passed by the last session of the Legislature for the protection of the fish in the streams of this State is in effect. Circular letters have been sent out by the Executive Agent J. Q. Ward, to all the counties notifying fishermen it will be unlawful to catch fish except with rod, line and hook, hand lines, set lines and trot lines. Persons attempting to catch fish by anyother means will be subject to a fine of not less than $15 nor more than $100 for each offense. The new law prohibits the use of wing nets, seine, trap, trammel net, dip net, or anyother kind of a net or contrivance that will materially hinder the passage of the fish in any stream in the State. The use of dynamite or other forms of explosives in the streams is forbidden under the law. Shooting of fish is also forbidden.

BURLINGTON'S CENTENNIAL.

COURT HOUSE BUILT IN 1817.

The Chatauqua which will be held in Burlington, beginning July 10th, is to be taken as a celebration of Burlington's centennial, as one hundred years ago February 5th, the name of the town of Wilmington was changed to Burlington, the original name of the place being Craig's Camp.

In an old county court record book in the county clerk's office the following orders appear, at that time the county court being composed of five officials denominated Esquires:

At a county court begun and held at Boone county court house in and for the county of Boone on Monday, the 5th of February, 1816, present

Abner Graves,
William Rogers,
Lewis Conner,
Jeremiah Kirtley,
Abraham Depew, Esquires.

A majority of the court being present and concurring doth agree to build a commodious court house at this place, to be built of brick, and to be commenced this season, and Joseph Graves, Abraham Depew and William Rodgers are appointed commissioners to superintend and carry the same into effect. They are to draft the plans of the proposed building and procure it at the next term for their adoption. The commissioners are clothed with the power to draw all the county funds from the sheriff, etc., and also dispose of the present court house and such lots in Wilmington as belong to the county in order to raise funds sufficient to enable them to carry the said building into effect, etc.

A majority of the court being present and upon mature deliberation doth change the name of this town of Wilmington to the name of Burlington, and it is ordered that the change be observed in all processes, etc., issued when it is necessary and that it hereafter be observed in all respects whatsoever.

The committee appointed to build the new court house submitted their plans to the court at the term following their appointment. They called for a brick building forty feet long, thirty-six feet wide, suitable thickness and proportionate height. Later on the committee amended its plans and added a space of twelve feet in front of the building, five brick columns two stories high, and a cupola, and it was after this style the building was built, although nothing can be found in the records as to its cost when it was completed, although the committee was ordered by the court at its March term, 1819, to deliver the key of the new court house to Jeremiah Kirtley who was appointed keeper of same. The picture given with this article shows the building as it was completed and stood until 1878, when Judge O. D. McManama declared it unsafe and put on foot a move which resulted in its remodeling. The building as remodeled stood until it was replaced with the present court house which cost something over $20,000.

Waterloo—Weather warm and wet. Growing crops of all kinds look well. Farmers are busy harvesting a small crop of wheat. Tobacco raisers in this section generally are done setting plants. The proposed alteration in the East Bend road has created quite a stir in this neighborhood. It seems all have freely consented to the right of way through their premises for this grand improvement with the exception of Mr. Mat Acra, of the Harmony Ridge neighborhood. It is hoped he will consent to let the road go thru his place.

Normansville—Altho corn is growing very fast now, it does not promise so good a yield as usual, owing, the farmers say, to the draught in the early part of the season. Tobacco is growing nicely and there will be a full crop in this section. Local option will be voted on at the August election. Squirrels are suffering since the boys are permitted to kill them.

Forgot to Display His Badge

Deputy Sheriff Albert Conner went to Edward Farrell's in Verona precinct, one day last week on official business, and upon entering the front yard he was met by a Shepherd dog which attacked him, jumping at his throat. Mr. Conner pushed the vicious animal off and began kicking it, but before Mr. Farrell, who was near by, could stop the dog's attack it had bitten the officer in the calf of one of his legs, making an ugly wound which has given him no trouble and probably will not. Mr. Conner made a vigorpus defense, but had the owner of the dog not been close and rushed to his rescue there is no telling what the outcome of the attack would have been. When Mr. Conner reached home in the evening he was yet somewhat excited around the edges. Mr. Farrell hates the occurrence very much and, doubtless, before this has put an end to the career of the ferocious brute.

Samuel Pope, son of the late Lawrence Pope, died at his home in Beech Grove neighborhood, last Friday morning, after an illness of many months. Had Mr. Pope survived until the 27th of next October he would have been 83 years old. He was among the county's oldest and best citizens and reared a large family of children, all of whom are very fine and useful people. Besides a large family of children Mr. Pope is survived by a widow, who was a daughter of the late Gabriel Jones; and two brothers, W. H. Pope, of this county and Jas. K. Pope, of Carroll county. The interment took place last Sunday at Belleview in the presence of a large concourse of friends who deplore the death of an esteemed citizen.

A Pair of Accidents

Mrs. Cora Strouse and children had quite an experience last Sunday as they were returning home from the funeral of a relative. At the top of the hill this side of Limaburg the horse they were driving scared at the large steam roller on the side of the road, and turned the buggy over, but no one was hurt. They got back in the buggy and had gone but a short distance when they met an auto at which the horse took fright and turned the buggy over the second time, getting loose and running some distance, damaging the buggy top slightly. Mrs. Strouse's little girl was slightly hurt in the second event.

B. L. Gaines

Mr. B. L. Gaines died at his home on the Ohio river three miles above Carrollton last Friday morning at nine o'clock from the effects of a stroke of paralysis sustained June 4th.

Mr. Gaines was born in Boone county, Feb. 22, 1837, and came to Carroll county 45 years ago and purchased from the Scott heirs the fine farm on which he spent his remaining days. He was recognized as one of the best and most prominent farmers and stockraisers in Carroll county, and to him farming was a great pleasure.

In politics he was a Democrat, and in the selection of a candidate for his party he always took under advisement the standing of the candidate and worked to secure his election. He served as a member of the Fiscal Court and strove for the betterment of the condition of county affairs, and his opinions along that line had great weight with the members of the court. He was a man true to every trust, be it a matter of friendship or official obligation.

Mr. Gaines is survived by his wife and three children—Perry B. Gaines, Master Commissioner of the Carroll circuit court; Miss Ella Gaines, who resided at the homestead, and Mrs. Virginia T. Craig, of Gallatin county, near Ghent.

Services were held at the home at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. T. W. Croxton and though the weather was inclement, raining a greater part of the day, the procession that followed the remains to their last resting place in the Odd-Fellows cemetery consisted entirely of automobiles, there being 23 in line. —Carrollton News.

The Cincinnati Speedway

More than 1,000 men are rushing work on the new Cincinnati Speed way, now in course of construction at Sharonville, just outside the Cincinnati city limits. The new track, the first to be built in the Ohio Valley, will be two miles in length and will offer its first big race on Labor Day, September 4, when thirty-two of the leading auto race drivers will face the starter in a 300-mile contest. Prizes aggregating $30,000 will be offered in this event, and it is confidently expected that a speed of more than 90 miles an hour will have to be maintained by the winner. An interesting feature in connection with the race will be the exposition of the Dixie Highway Association, to be held at the Cincinnati Music Hall from September 1 to 9th inclusive. All roads in Hamilton county now are being put into first-class condition, so that autoists may enjoy perfect touring in visiting the race and the exposition.

The Committee.

If It Has to Be War, Make It Short and Decisive.

The prompt assembling of the militia in the various states has already provided the Government with a force sufficient to guard the border and to contribute at least 75,000 men for an advance into Mexico, in case such advance is ordered by the President.

With the regulars relieved from border guarding duty and available for active operations as against the Carranza outfit, about 125,000 men can be put into Mexico within the next 30 days.

If war is declared between the two countries fully 300,000 men will be required by the United States in Mexico to do the work of restoring peace and order to that turbulent population quickly and thoroughly.

And this estimate calls at the same time for the effective active co-operation of the naval forces of the United States in the occupation of ports and the blockade and patrol of both coasts of the disorderly country.

As modern war is waged today, Mexico has not within its borders war material supplies to carry on an active defense as against 300,000 soldiers of the U. S for even four months' time and our naval forces and our land forces guarding coasts and border lines within 30 days after declaration of war can seal up all inlets so effectually that no additional supplies can enter.

It will be advisable for our Government to speedily run a line of garrisons close down to the border line between Guatamala and Mexico, and also take possession of the Tehuantepec Railway line clean across from Atlantic to the Pacific, as that line will be of great use in speedy transfer of troops and munitions between the two coasts, and its occupancy by our troops would create a second line barrier as between Mexico and the Latin American countries to the South.

Not that any one of these countries but will remain neutral in case of war, but their nationals have the right of neutrals to ship arms and ammunition to either the United States or Mexico or to both, and our navy and our army must see to it that such shipments do not reach the Mexicans.

Upon the sea such shipments can be seized by our vessels and upon the territory of Mexico they can be captured by our troops, and such seizures and captures will save thousands of lives of our soldiers and serve materially to shorten the war.

In case there is to be war between this country and Mexico the sooner 300,000 volunteers are called for and placed in actual service the better the results of the war for the U. S and the greater will be the saving of lives and treasure thru overthrow and dispersal of the Mexican forces.—Enquirer.

Rouse In Gallatin County.

All indications are against Congressman Arthur B. Rouse whose candidacy for re-nomination was announced in last week's Independent, having any opposition, as there have been no other candidates as yet announced and the probability is that there will be none.

Arthur B. Rouse was a better and more useful congressman during the term he is now serving than he was the term before. He will be a better and still more useful congressman next term than he has been in the past. Legislative experience and an acquaintance with governmental affairs as well as the "know how" to get help for his constituency, are among the things a congressman can only acquire by experience, and until he does acquire them he is a representative of his district only for ornamental purposes, Arthur Rouse has passed the ornamental stage long ago. And this is not said by way of disparagment of Mr. Rouse's pulchritude, of which he has probably the average supply. Of course, he looks just as well a congressman as he ever did, but he has become that which is better, far better for the district, and that is, a very useful representative. He has given service, excellent service, and in doing this, has fitted himself for larger work, for more direct usefulness to his district, for efficiency has grown with performance. With Arthur Rouse the district will have a tested efficiency, and that alone should suffice to establish the value of the present congressman. And with his value thus established, the logical sequence is his retention on the job.

Aside from all personal reasons this is reason enough why the electorate of this district will this year vote to return Mr. Rouse to Congress, and on doing so, avail themselves of the wisest choice in the matter. Mr. Rouse's personal following all over the district is large—larger than it has ever been before. And in that one might find that aside from his very likeable personality, Mr. Rouse has other things to account for the large personal following. And among them it might be mentioned that he has kept faith with his people—he has regarded their interests after he was elected just as he promised to do when he was asking for their suffrage before election. His success has in no wise lessened the loyalty of his friendship—has given him a new appreciation of his [illegible] is the same plain, [illegible] Rouse today he [illegible] candidate, and [illegible] same idea of [illegible] man.—Warsaw Y. Globe

Mexican Intervention

The bandit, Villa, appears to be upon the threshold of achievement of his ambition, indicated in his murderous border raids—the intervention of the U. S. in Mexico.

And, as if sanctioning the course of Villa, which he has never made any serious efforts to interfere with or to punish, Provisional President Carranza now invites it through the unreasonable attitude he has assumed toward the American punitive expedition there for no other purpose than the just punishment of the bandits.

General Carranza and those Mexicans who blindly indorse his unreasonable course are taking upon themselves a responsibility the seriousness and gravity of which they little appreciate or understand.

They can easily bring on intervention if they so desire, and seemingly it is their determined purpose to do so. Certainly, if Carranza persists in the attitude he has assumed toward the Pershing expedition, it will be inevitable. Any attacks by the Carranzistas, with official sanction, upon General Perishing's troops, or the necessary withdrawal of General Pershing in order to avoid a disastrous battle, will mean that we must go into the country pacify it, disarm it, restore it to order and teach it a salutary lesson.

If it comes to this, we will not go unprepared. It may be some weeks or months before the required army can be mustered and equipped; but when we go into Mexico, if we must, we shall go in sufficient force to accomplish the purpose for which intervention is undertaken, with the least possible loss of life.

In the meantime, Mexico will be completely shut off from the outside world. Certainly, as soon as intervention is determined on, effective blockade of all the Mexican coasts will be set up, and nothing will be permitted to enter or leave that country without the sanction of this country.

It is a task for which the people of the United States have no desire or liking; but if it becomes duty, if it must be done, they will do it as it should be, completely and effectively. Mexico will be brought to her senses, a quality in which, under present rule, she is evidently seriously lacking.

If intervention apparently now unavoidable, is brought about, Mexican thick-headedness must bear the responsibility for it. Certainly this country has done ev erything within its power to avoid it, short of permitting the continuance of murderous border raids which the present Mexican authorities are apparently powerless to suppress.

Every assurance that could possibly be asked, that we have no designs upon that country and do not want to interfere with its internal policies, has been given; but Mexican suspicion cannot understand true disinterestedness.

We may as well make up our minds that it has got to come, and get ready for it as speedily as possible. Then, if by chance, it may be warded off, so much the better. But if not, there will be no cessation in the process until Mexico has been forced to her knees and agrees to become good and stay good.—Atlanta, Georgia, Constitution.

GREASER IGNORANCE.

It Will Be Direct Cause of War Between Mexico and United States

If the United States is compelled to enter upon a protracted and costly war in Mexico it will result directly from the density of the ignorance of the Mexican masses. Ignorance breeds prejudice, and among an ignorant people prejudice cannot be removed by the ordinary methods of enlightment. The Mexican believes that American aims and American methods of to-day are similar to the American aims and methods of a decade or five decades ago. No protestation of friendliness can alter his belief.

A strong man in Mexico might keep the Mexican people from the folly of war. There appears to be only one strong man in Mexico today, and he is a bandit and murderer, the outlaw Villa, whose hatred of the United States led to the present crisis. Carranza is not strong. He means well, but he drifts with the tide of popular prejudice, not being brave enough to breast it.

The Mexicans of today are not themselves to blame for their miserable condition of mental inefficiency. They are the logical product of generations of exploitation and oppression. During these long years the U. S stood as the friend of their oppressors, and individual Americans took a prominent part in the exploitation. To impress these dufled minds with an appreciation of the benevolence of the United States has proved to be an impossible task.

These facts explain, but they do not condone the treachery and barbarism of Mexico. The Mexican people, if they uphold outlawry and stand ready to protect criminals from punishment, become themselves criminals. The American duty of self-protection cannot be modified by any consideration of the why and wherefore of Mexican conditions.

If war does come it will be perhaps the most needless war of all history. The United States does not desire to fight, and the dearest wish of Americans is that Mexicans retain and enjoy complete independence. It will be an amazing paradox if the United States is compelled to fight all Mexico to prove its good intentions.—N Y. Globe

OUR COINS

Uncle Sam Now Planning to Change Style of Money—Issue New Design.

It is announced that the United States treasury will soon issue new designs in place of the present style of quarters, dimes and half dollars. If they are no better specimens than the buffalo nickel, there will be little to be gained by change.

To most people one design for a coin is as good as another provided it passes at the grocery store. But do have a real significance. For centuries nations have used them to express their ideas, history, and leaders. A well designed and executed coin is a sign that the nation is of high intelligence and developed of craftsmanship. Conversely a poorly designed coin suggests a low development of the arts.

The familiar designs of our present silver coins would not probably strike a typographical expert as very well done, compared with those issued by European governments, the lettering and figures seem rather coarse and blunt, too heavily shaded and lacking in clear cut definition. The Lincoln cent introduced a few years ago was one example of a finely done coin. The lettering for the words "one cent" is peculiarly well rounded, clear and beautiful, and would be hard to improve upon.

The buffalo nickel had at least one well done feature, the Indian head, a vigorous and an expressive drawing of this American type. But the lettering was crowded down almost to nothing and the coin had a rough and bunchy appearance that made it look like some freak advertising medal. Few of them are seen in daily life, and the older design has been almost universally preferred.

Lettering on coins that require a magnifying glass to read may be called artistic, but it spoils the design. Every letter or figure on the coin should be clear and obvious, so that everyone who examines it can see just what ideas were meant to be conveyed. —Ex.

Thought It Was a Bluff.

Chihuahua, City, June 22.—The 17 American soldiers, negro troopers of the Tenth Cavalry, who were captured in the battle at Carrizal, were brought here today with Lem H. Spillsbury, a Mormon scout, employed by General J. J Pershing, and were interned.

Spillsbury said that Captain Charles T. Boyd commanded the Americans, and, with Lieutenant Henry A. Adair, was among the killed.

A Captain Moore, who was with the American detachment, was wounded in the shoulder, but escaped.

In announcing this afternoon a story of the battle, which he said, Spillsbury had from General Jacinto Trevino, commander of the military district of the northeast, announced that any time and at any place the American troops move other than toward the border he will comply to the letter with his superior's orders, and will attack them as General Felix Gomes did at Carrizal.

General Trevino said that all diplomatic arrangements are outside of his sphere.

Spillsbury's story, as announced by General Trevino, was to the effect that 76 negroes, comprising Troop H. of the Tenth, Captains Boyd and Moore, Lieutenant Adair and himself, composed the American detachment that encountered the Mexicans. He said that he saw on the field the bodies of Boyd and Adair and at least 11 of the negroes.

Spillsbury's account, as given out, follows:

"We left Casas Grandes on Sunday morning, arriving outside of Carrizal early Wednesday morning.

"Captain Boyd immediately dispatched a courier to the Jefe Politico of the little village, advising him that we were on our way to Villa Ahumada.

"After we had waited some time Lieutenant Colonel Rivans came out and warned Captain Boyd that he better had turn back. Captain Boyd then explained that he was in pursuit of some bandits who he had heard had looted Santo Domingo, and also was bound to catch a negro deserter who he had heard was in Villa Ahumada.

"In reply to this Colonel Rivans notified the American that if he attempted to advance he would have to pass over the bodies of the Mexicans. He advised Boyd that he had better not argue the matter.

"Rivas returned to the village to report to his superior officer, General Gomez, who sent out a note inviting the Americans to enter Carrizal for a conference, Captain Boyd declined this invitation.

"On this ground Gomez went out in person and insistently urged the Americans to retire, pointing out that his orders from his superiors necessitated his acting on them without further parley. General Gomes repeated these words as he walked away.

"Boyd surely answered, 'All right.' General Trevino's announcement then goes on to quote Spillsbury as saying that after General Gomez had retired to his troops, who were lined up outside the town, Captain Boyd ordered his men to advance, where upon Spillsbury expostulated with him, arguing that a fight was sure to follow. Spillsbury is reported as saying and Capt. Boyd obstinately seemed to think that the Mexican General was only bluffing," and the firing quickly began. He is quoted further:

"Captain Moore and Lieut. Adair fell, the latter mortally wounded. Captain Moore was wounded in the shoulder, and immediately the negroes became demoralized. At the same time the men holding the horses fled with the mounts, leaving behind 17 negroes and myself. We were forced to surrender.

"I saw the bodies of Boyd and Adair and at least 11 negroes on the field of battle."

Wilson' Ultamatum

Washington, June 25.

The text of the note to the Mexican de facto Government, transmitted today to James Linn Rodgers, special representative of the American Government in Mexico City, says:

"Mr. Arredondo yesterday delivered to this Government the following communication:

"I am directed by my Government to inform Your Excellency, with reference to the Carrizal incident, that the Chief Executive, through the Mexican War Department, gave orders to General Jacinto B. Trevino not to permit American forces from General Perishing's column to advance further south, nor to move either east or west from the points where they are located, and to oppose new incursions of American soldiers into Mexican territory. These orders were brought by General Trevino to the attention of General Pershing, who acknowledged the receipt of the communication relative thereto. On the 22nd instant, as Your Excellency knows an American force eastward quite far from its base, notwithstanding the above orders, and was engaged by Mexican troops at Carrizal, state of Chihuahua. As a result of the encounter several men on both sides were killed and wounded and 17 American soldiers were made prisoners."

"You are hereby instructed to hand to the Minister of Foreign Relations of the de facto Government the following:

"The Government of the United States can put no other construction upon the communication handed to the Secretary of State of the United States on the 24th of June, by Mr. Arredondo, under instructions of your Government, than that it is intended as a formal avowal of deliberately hostile action against the forces of the United States now in Mexico, and of the purpose to attack them without provocation whenever they move from their present position in pursuance of the objects for which they were sent there, notwithstanding the fact that those objects not only involve no unfriendly intention toward the Government and people of Mexico, but are, on the contrary, intended only to assist that Government in protecting itself and the territory and people of the United States against irresponsible and insurgent bands of rebel marauders.

"I am instructed, therefore, by my Government to demand the immediate release of prisoners taken in the encounter at Carrizal, together with any property of the United States taken with them, and to inform you that the Government of the United States expects an early statement from your Government as to the course of action it wishes the Government of the United States to understand it has determined upon, and that it also expects that this statement be made through the usual diplomatic channels, and not through subordinate military commanders."

How we Whipped Mexico in 1847

The war with the Southern Republic had blazed out on the Texan border in 1845, and the American government had now decided to carry it into the heart of the hostile territory. With the cause of quarrel we have no concern. Gen. Grant has condemned the war as "one of the most unjust ever waged by a stronger against a weaker nation." Be this as it may, it is doubtful whether any of Grant's brother officers troubled themselves at all with the equity of invasion. It was enough for them that the expedition meant a struggle with a numerous enemy, armed and organized on the European model, and with much experience of war; that it promised a campaign in a country which was the very region of romance, possessing a lovely climate, historic cities and magnificent scenery. The genius of Prescott had just entombed from dusty archives the marvelous story of the Spanish conquest, and the imagination of many a youthful soldier had been already kindled by his glowing pages. To follow the path of Cortez, to traverse the golden realms of Montezuma, to look upon the lakes and palaces of Mexico, the most ancient city of America, to encamp among the temples of the vanished race, and to hear, while the fireflies flitted through the perfumed night, the music of the black-eyed maidens of New Spain—was ever more fascinating prospect offered to a subaltern of two-and-twenty.

The companies of the First Artillery which had been detailed for foreign service were first transferred to Point Isabel, at the mouth of Rio Grande. Several engagements had already taken place. Palo Alto, Resaca de la Palma, and Monterey were brilliant victories, won by sheer hard fighting over far superior numbers; and a vast extent of territory had been overrun. But the Mexicans were still unconquered. The provinces they had lost were but the fringe of the national domains; the heart of the Republic had not yet felt the pressure of war, and more than six hundred miles of difficult country intervened between the invaders and the capital. The American proposals for peace had been summarily rejected. A new President, Gen. Santa Anna, had been raised to power, and under his vigorous administration the war threatened to assume a phase sufficiently embarrassing to the United States.

Jackson had been attached to a heavy battery, and his first duty was to transport guns and mortars to the forts which protected Fort Isabel. The prospect of immediate employment before the enemy was small. Operations had come to a standstill. It was already apparent that a direct advance upon the capital, through the northern provinces was an enterprise which would demand an army much larger than the government was disposed to furnish. It seemed as if the First Artillery had come too late. Jackson was fearful that the war might come to an end before his regiment should be sent to the front. The shy cadet had a decided taste for fighting "I envy you, men," he said to a comrade more fortunate than himself, "who have been in battle. How I should like to be in one battle!" His longing for action was soon gratified. Mexico had no navy and a long seaboard. The fleet of the United States was strong, their maritime resources ample, and to land an army on a shorter route to the distant capital was no difficult undertaking.

Gen. Winfield Scott, who had been sent out as commander-in-chief, was permitted early in 1847, to organize a combined naval and military expedition for the reduction of Vera Cruz, the principal port of the Republic, whence a good road leads to Mexico. The line of advance would be thus reduced to two hundred and sixty miles; and the natural obstacles, though numerous enough, were far less serious than the deserts which barred invasion from the north. For this enterprise most of the regular regiments were withdrawn from the Rio Grande; and Gen. Taylor, the hero of Palo Alto and Monterey, was left with a small army, composed principally of volunteers, to hold the conquered provinces. Scott's troops assembled in the first instance at Tampico. The transports, eighty in number, having embarked their freight, were directed to rendezvous in the roadstead of Lobos, one hundred and twenty miles north of Vera Cruz; and when the whole had assembled, the fleet set sail for Isla Sacrificios, the island where Cortez had landed in 1520, three miles south of the city. The army invasion, in which the First Regiment of Artillery was included, consisted of 13,000 men. On the morning of March 9th the sun shone propitiously on the expedition. The surf boats, each holding from seventy to 80 men, were quickly arrayed in line. Then, dashing forward simultaneously, with the strains of martial music sweeping over the smooth waters of the bay, they neared the shore. The landing was covered by seven armed vessels, and as the boats touched the beach the foremost men leaped into the water and ran up the sandy shore. In one hour Gen. Worth's division, numbering 4,500 men, was disembarked; and by the same precise arrangements the whole army was landed in six hours without accident or confusion. To the astonishment of the Americans the enemy offered no resistance, and the troops bivouacked in line of battle on the beach.

Little more than a mile north, across a waste of sand-hills rose the white walls of Vera Cruz. The city was held by 4,000 men, and its armament was formidable. The troops, however, but partially organised, were incapable of operation in the open field. The garrison had not been reinforced. Santa Anna, on learning that the American army on the Rio Grande had been reduced, had acted with commendable promptitude. Collecting all the troops that were available, he had marched northward, expecting, doubtless, to overwhelm Taylor and still to be in time to prevent Scott from seizing a good harbor. But distance was against him, and his precautions were inadequate. Even if he defeated Taylor, he would have to march more than a thousand miles to encounter Scott, and Vera Cruz was ill-provided for a siege. It was difficult, it is true, for the Mexican general to anticipate the point at which the Americans would disembark. An army that moves by sea, possesses the advantage that its movements are completely veiled. But Vera Cruz was decidedly the most probable objective of the invaders, and, had it been made secure, the venture of the Americans would have been rendered hazardous. As it was with Santa Anna's army far away, the reduction of the fortress presented little difficulty. An immediate assault would in all likelihood have proved successful. Scott, however, decided on a regular siege. His army was small, and a march on the capital was in prospect. The government grudged both men and money, and an assault would have cost more lives than could well be spared. On March 18 the trenches were completed. Four days later, sufficient heavy ordnance having been landed, the bombardment was begun. On the 27th the town surrendered; the garrison laid down their arms, and 400 cannon, many of large caliber, fell into the hands of the Americans.

The fall of Vera Cruz was brought about by the heavy artillery, aided by the sailors, and the First Regiment was continuously engaged. The Mexican fire, notwithstanding their array of guns, was comparatively harmless. The garrison attempted no sortie; and only sixty-four of the investing forces were killed or wounded. Nevertheless, Jackson's behavior under fire attracted notice and a few months later he was promoted to first lieutenant "for gallant and meritorious conduct at the siege of Vera Cruz."

Scott had now secured an admirable line of operations; but the projected march upon the City of Mexico was a far more arduous undertaking than the capture of the port. The ancient capital of Montezuma stands high above the sea. The famous valley which surrounds it is embosomed in the heart of a vast plateau, and the roads which lead to this lofty region wind by steep gradients over successive ranges of rugged and precipitous mountains. Between Vera Cruz and the upland lies a level plain, sixty miles broad, and covered with tropical forest. Had it been possible to follow up the initial victory by a rapid advance, Cerro Gordo, the first and the most difficult, of the mountain passes, might have been occupied without a blow. Santa Anna, defeated by Taylor at Buena Vista, but returning hot foot to block Scott's path, was still distant, and Cerro Gordo was undefended. But the progress of the Americans was arrested by the difficulties inherent in all maritime expeditions.

An army landing on a hostile coast has to endure a certain period of inactivity. Under ordinary circumstances, as at Vera Cruz, the process of disembarking men is rapidly accomplished. The field guns follow with but little delay, and a certain proportion of cavalry becomes early available. But the disembarkation of the impedimenta—the stores, wagons, hospitals, ammunition and transport animals—even where ample facilities exist, demands far more time than the disembarkation of the fighting force. In the present case, as all the animals had to be requisitioned in the country, it was not till the middle of April that supplies and transport sufficient to warrant further movement had been accumulated; and meanwhile Gen. Santa Anna, halting in the mountains, had occupied the pass of Cerro Gordo with 13,000 men and forty-two pieces of artillery. The Mexican position was exceedingly strong. The right rested on a deep ravine, with precipitous cliffs; the left, on the hill of Cerro Gordo, covered with batteries, and towering to the height of several hundred feet above the surrounding ridges; while the front strongly intrenched, and commanding the road which would zigzag fashion up the steep ascent, followed the crest of a lofty ridge.

He Gets What He Goes After.

Washington, June 22.—Thru efforts of Congressman Arthur B. Rouse in Washington the War Department decided on Ft. Thomas as place of mobilization for the Kentucky National Guard.

Earlington was previously announced by the department as the chosen site, and this is said to have come about when Governor Stanley and Adjt. Gen. Tandy Ellis made the suggestion.

When Rouse heard of the possibility of a changed decision he got busy for Ft. Thomas, while others favored Lexington. Representative Cantrill favored the latter location.

In defeating the selection of Earlington, Rouse pointed out the lack of facilities there, notably the fact of but one railroad.

He stressed the fitness of Ft. Thomas with housing quarters for 1200 men and abundant space for tent-pitching on the large reservation. Rouse told the War Department of the fort's armories and the splendid shipping facilities, access to great provisions centers and the altitude, promoting health.

Nebraska Harvesting Wheat

Lincoln, Neb., June 22.—Nebraska's great annual wheat crop harvest has begun. The largest wheat crop in the State's history is being gathered—such a crop as the State did not even dream of 10 years ago.

Between 71,000,000 and 74,000,000 bushels of winter wheat is the estimate of the State's Labor Bureau, which also estimated that 7,000 extra farm hands were needed for the harvest.

Besides this, some spring wheat is raised in the northern section of the State, but this amount is relatively small, and its harvest will begin in two or three weeks.

The wheat crop of Nebraska this year, it is estimated, will exceed that of last year by about 10,000,000 bushels.

The State board of education has prepared a public graded course of study for the common schools of the state. The course specifies the order of the study, the time to be alloted to each and which course of study shall be observed by the teacher and enforced by the trustees. The course of study is complete and thorough being a revision of the courses of study for the past years. The purpose of the course is to bring order into the vast school system of the state. With over 10,000 teachers working in 120 counties, it is absolutely necessary that there should be some unifying and organizing ideas in order that the school system may be more efficient. W. O. Gilbert superintendent of public instruction urges trustees and the teachers to comply with the provisions of the common school law and use the course of study. He also urges the institutes and teachers' associations to discuss the course at the meetings.

Probably no inland town in the State can boast of a better surrounding territory and conditions. There is nothing about the town itself to keep it from being both beautiful and prosperous. The people probably spend a little too much time knocking, there seems to exist a little measly spirit of jealously which makes life a misery to those engaged but aside from this our little town should have a get together meeting and get on the road to prosperity.—Owen County Democrat.

Cattle owners and dealers of this State who had stock killed during the epidemic of the foot and mouth disease have filed claims for the amount due them by the State with Commissioner of Agriculture Cohen. The last Legislature passed a bill providing for the reimbursement of owners whose stock was killed. Half of the claims were to be paid by the State and the other half by the Federal government. The claims filed represent about one-third of those which the State will have to pay.

Federal Inquiry or Railroad Strike?

Faced by demands from the conductors, engineers, firemen and brakemen that would impose on the country an additional burden in transportation costs of $100,000,000 a year, the railroads propose that this wage problem be settled by reference to an impartial Federal tribunal.

With these employes, whose efficient service is acknowledged, the railroads have no differences that could not be considered fairly and decided justly by such a public body.

Railroads Urge Public Inquiry and Arbitration

The formal proposal of the railroads to the employes for the settlement of the controversy is as follows:

"Our conferences have demonstrated that we cannot harmonize our differences of opinion and that eventually the matters in controversy must be passed upon by other and disinterested agencies. Therefore, we propose that your proposals and the proposition of the railways be disposed of by one or the other of the following methods:

1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenue of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected, and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot, under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved; or

2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law" (The Newlands Act).

Leaders Refuse Offer and Take Strike Vote

Leaders of the train service brotherhoods, at the joint conference held in New York, June 1-15, refused the offer of the railroads to submit the issue to arbitration or Federal review, and the employes are now voting on the question whether authority shall be given these leaders to declare a nation-wide strike.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is proposed by the railroads as the public body to which this issue ought to be referred for these reasons:

No other body with such an intimate knowledge of railroad conditions has such an unquestioned position in the public confidence.

The rates the railroads may charge the public for transportation are now largely fixed by this Government board.

Out of every dollar received by the railroads from the public nearly one-half is paid directly to the employes as wages; and the money to pay increased wages can come from no other source than the rates paid by the public.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, with its control over rates, is in a position to make a complete investigation and render such decision as would protect the interests of the railroad employes, the owners of the railroads, and the public.

A Question For the Public to Decide

The railroads feel that they have no right to grant a wage preferment of $100,000,000 a year to these employes, now highly paid and constituting only one-fifth of all the employes, without a clear mandate from a public tribunal that shall determine the merits of the case after a review of all the facts.

The single issue before the country is whether this controversy is to be settled by an impartial Government inquiry or by industrial warfare.

John L. Jones of the Landing neighborhood, who has a reputation of being one of the best corn and hog raisers in the state, sold eighty-two hogs on the Cincinnati market last week for $1,543.57, and the selling price was the top of the market, 9¼ cents a pound. These hogs were made an experiment in feeding. Mr. Jones being of the opinion that an all corn feed was not the best gave them a half corn feed and put them on clover. On April 20th he weighed the hogs, the scales showing 9,725 pounds. He fed the drove six bushels of corn per day for 30 days, putting them on clover. At the end of the thirty days the hogs weighed 12,850 lbs. He then increased the corn to ten bushels per day, leaving them on clover, and on June 19th they weighed 16,430 pounds. Mr. Jones estimates that he obtained $1.80 per bushel for his corn fed the hogs during the period.

The above is a picture of Miss Williametta Baker who graduated from the Highland High School, Ft. Thomas, and won the honors of her class and was the valedictorian. She went thru High School without being tardy or absent a day, and the Superintendent thought so well of Miss Baker that the past year she has been the sub. teacher in the grades. Miss Baker also won a scholarship in the University of Cincinnati. The young lady is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. H. Baker, formerly of Big Bone Springs, where she was born, and naturally Boone county feels proud of the distinction she has attained in school work. Her sister won similar honors in graduating two years ago.

CHALMERS MOTOR CO. Detroit, Mich. U.S.A.

Quality First

WHY I HAVE HUNG THE CHALMERS MONOGRAM OVER MY DOOR

I made up my mind to give you people the biggest possible automobile value for your money.

I studied the situation from every angle.

When I decided to hang the Chalmers Monogram over my door, I did so for salient, rock-ribbed reasons.

I am convinced that Chalmers cars combine big value and sensible price.

Hugh Chalmers does not make them merely to sell—but to stay sold.

Some automobile factories build their own frames, but buy their engines elsewhere in job lots. They are not factories at all—just big assembly plants.

But the Chalmers car is built entirely in the Chalmers plant—from rough casting to final assembly.

The great Chalmers plant comprises twenty-two great, clean, sunny buildings.

If you ever get into Detroit, visit the Chalmers factory.

In the chassis assembly room you will hear a din like the rivet hammers of twenty skyscrapers crashing in concert—the compressed-air hammer squad riveting Chalmers chassis.

In the physical testing laboratory, you will see up-to-date instruments of torture ingeniously designed to crush, twist, stretch, and bend iron and steel. Here all raw material that goes into the Chalmers car must first receive unqualified O. K.

Samples of every shipment of steel, iron, bronze, and aluminum must be found perfect by Chalmers chemists. Their laboratory is the best equipped in the whole motor industry.

You'll see the great forge and foundry. There are more drop forgings—remember—in the Chalmers car than in any other car in its price class.

The enormous fender press, which cost $90,000, turns out a graceful Chalmers molded fender with every 175-ton blow.

Automatic milling machines bore and grind Chalmers cylinders—accurate to 1-1000 of an inch.

In the Chalmers heat-treat inferno, the roar and smoke of thirty furnaces suggest Vesuvius at bat—batting 1000 per cent.

Everywhere you'll see inspectors—alert, all eyes, fingers, measurement—insisting on deadly accuracy—armed with micrometer, with scleroscope; 226 inspectors all told; and inspection alone costs the Chalmers company over $800,000 every year.

Every Chalmers car I sell ties up with the great Chalmers organization, year after year, by virtue of the highly developed Chalmers Service.

There is nothing vague about Chalmers Service.

Its universal coupon system provides for 100 half-hours of free inspection service every year, negotiable at any Chalmers dealer in the country.

That's the reason why I paid cold cash for a generous quota of these magnificent cars.

VOL. XXXXI. Established 1875. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, JULY 6, 1916. $1.50 Per Year. NO. 41

Clore-Hensley Marriage.

Tuesday morning, at 10 o'clock, Miss Elizabeth Keith, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. B Hensley, became the bride of Willard Francis Clore, of Belleview, Ky.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, on North Conde street, in the presence of the immediate friends and relatives of the two families. The bride's father, who is pastor of the First Baptist church, performed the beautiful impressive ceremony. The attendants were Miss Helen McConkey, maid of honor, and Clyde Barr, best man. Miss Lula Bell Hensley, sister of the bride, played Lohengrin's wedding march. The bride wore a dainty white gown of embroidered set and carried white lilies. Miss McConkey wore white and carried pink roses.

Following the ceremony and congratulations, a two-course luncheon was served and Mr. and Mrs. Clore left at noon for Cincinnati, Ohio, where they will visit for a few days and will also visit with relatives in Kentucky. They will be at home to their friends after September 10th at Fort Worth, Texas. The marriage is the culmination of a romance begun several years ago, when the bride with her parents lived in Kentucky. Since coming to Tipton Mrs. Clore has made a large number of friends and has been active in the church and social life of Tipton. The groom is a carpenter and is in every way worthy of the bride he has chosen. Among the out of town guests were the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Keith, of Greenwood, Ky., and the groom's mother and brother, Mrs. Belle Clore and John Clore, of Boone county, Ky. —Tipton Indiana, paper.

Smeared It On.

Belleview ball team came out last Saturday afternoon, and gave the Burlington team nine generous coats of whitewash. Rogers was given good support and held Burlington to three little bingles, while his team made nine hits and got five runs for him. Rogers is evidently the best amateur twirler in this part of baseballdom, and when given anything like fair support is a hard proposition for the opposing batters. Bad throwing and poor fielding behind Huey was responsible for the greater part of Belleview's runs. Owen Smith succeeded Huey in the sixth inning and held Belleview to three hits and no runs in the three innings he officiated.

Hits—Off of Rogers 3; off of Huey six in five innings, off of Smith three in four innings.

Struck out—By Rogers 13; by Huey 13, by Smith 2.

A foul ball that was knocked about fifty yards from the plate went through one section of the wind shield on George Bachelor's auto. Besides getting the wind shield broken Mr. Bachelor had three or four punctures to repair Saturday.

Jacob W. Rouse.

The funeral of Jacob W. Rouse, whose death was announced last week, took palce at Hebron last Thursday, Rev. George A. Royer delivering the sermon. Mr. Rouse had been a member of Hebron Lutheran church for 55 years and was a faithful worker in its interest, and in that organization he will be sorely missed. The very large concourse of relatives and friends that assembled at the funeral was a fitting testimonial of the esteem in which the deceased was held as a neighbor, friend and citizen. The deceased is survived by a widow, and two children by his first wife, Dr. W. O. Rouse and Mrs. Wallace Tanner, both of St. Petersburg, Fla.

Mr. Rouse had been in delicate health for several months, heart disease having attacked him previous to his going to Florida last winter to avoid the severe weather of this climate, and shortly after his return home it became apparent that the end was near, and his children in Florida were summoned, and were with him at the time of his death.

A man who lead a life well worthy of emulation has departed.

Be Reasonable.

From the argument put up by some it appears they think that Joel Clore ought to make the county a present of the Bullittsville and Dry Creek pike. Suppose that pike is clearing Mr. Clore not to exceed two dollars and 50 cents a day, where is there a man among his critics who would present to the county a piece of property that is netting him that amount? Mr. Clore has asked the county more for his road than it is willing to give, but that does not justify a desire to see the county secure the property for nothing. The road proposition should be approached in a business like manner, and where a value is put on a road by its owners and the fiscal court thinks it too high, let the question be determined in the proper way. The fact that the county voted in favor of free turnpikes and followed up that action by voting a bond issue with which to build bridges and roads, does not, by any means, justify an implication that the pikes are to be freed regardless of the property rights of their owners. Far from it.

JOHN MEEKS

Paroled After Serving Eight Years for Slaying Al Clutterbuck.

MEEKS WAS A GOOD PRISONER.

John Meeks, who killed Albert Clutterbuck in Florence, this county, on the night of Dec. 14, 1907, and was tried and sentenced to the penitentiary for life in the Boone circuit court, April 25, 1908, was paroled last week, having served eight years and 2 months. Meeks was a good prisoner which made much in his favor, while another factor that made in favor of his parole was his saving of the life of one of the guards, P. J. Mulken, of Louisville, several years ago, when another prisoner attacked him with a shoe knife and laid his cheek open from his eye to his throat. Just as the prisoner struck at the guards heart Meeks seized the prisoner and after a hard struggle with him succeeded in disarming him. Meeks has no relations living in this county now it is said, his mother, who lived in Florence, having died several years ago.

CONVENIENT BROODER COOP FOR CHICKS

Homemade Brooder Coop Is Inexpensive and Handy.

For either free range or for intensive poultry culture the brooder coop shown herewith will be found very convenient. It consists of a frame of any suitable size, preferably three by six feet and two or two and one-half feet high. At each side is wire netting between the framework for about two-thirds of the length of the coop. If desired, glass may be used for part of the remaining space, as indicated. Preferably, one end should be tight so as to afford certain protection in case of wet or storm. Tightness may be secured by using matched lumber or glass. The coop has no bottom, but rests directly upon the ground. The left hand end is opened, but may be closed by a door which may either slide or swing on hinges.

The coop has a double lid; one made of matched lumber and secured by crosspieces as shown. In order to hold it up a hinged prop may be placed in the middle. This prop is long enough to drop down on the outside and lie parallel with the wall without actually touching the ground. The second or inner top may be made to slide in a groove. It consists of a framework covered at one end with wire cloth and at the other with burlap or cheese cloth. The advantages of having a double top are that in warm weather the fowls can be kept comfortable by abundant ventilation and in cold, wet or otherwise unpleasant weather they may be completely protected by the solid top. A coop of this kind can be used to advantage in rearing chicks at range, but it is not satisfactory for full grown fowls.

RECIPE FOR INSECT POWDER

Mixture of Cresol, Gasoline and Plaster of Paris Will Be Found Entirely Satisfactory.

A good homemade insect powder can be made by thoroughly mixing one-fourth pint of cresol and three-fourths of a pint of gasoline. Add to this mixture gradually with stirring just enough plaster of paris to take up the liquid. For the above amounts it will take about two and a half pounds of plaster of paris. Spread out thin on paper until dry, screen carefully and it is ready for use. If strong crude carbolic acid is available it can be used instead of cresol. This powder can be boxed, put in a dry place and kept for a long period of time.

To apply the powder, dust the birds thoroughly around the vent and in the dust under the wings. This application should be followed by a second in four to six days to kill the lice or nits from the unhatched eggs or "nits" present at the first treatment.

RETURN ALL INFERTILE EGGS

Disappointing to Customer Who Wants to Get as Many Chicks as Possible—No Fault of Buyer.

Infertile eggs are very disappointing to a customer who wants to get as many chicks as possible ont of the number he buys. Some owners advertise that they will replace all infertile eggs, while others guarantee a majority hatch.

If the eggs test out infertile after seven days' incubation, the purchaser should return them to seller, as evidence that they were not fertile, and receive fresh eggs in exchange. It is no fault of the buyer if the eggs are infertile.

PREVENT DISEASE IN FLOCK

Cause of Roup Can Always Be Traced to Filth of Soil, Kit, Kee, Houses and Yards Clean.

The fundamental cause of roup can be always traced to filth of some kind, which may be no fault of the owner, since the birds may eat putrid food at neighbor's premises, or when exhibited at some poultry show.

But usually the trouble lies in the home poultry quarters, and especial care should be exercised to keep the yard free from putrid food and the house and all vessels used for feeding and drinking purposes as clean as possible at all times.

Grit Is Necessary.

Don't forget that sharp grit for the hens is necessary at all times. Also brushed shell and either charcoal or coal cinders.

MAKING MONEY WITH CHICKS

Important Branch of Poultry Business Has Been Made Possible by Use of Incubators.

The general use of incubators has made it possible and profitable for many to engage in the day-old chick trade, which has become an important branch of the poultry business. This work may be done in the home in addition to the ordinary routine of duties, and is one way a nice income may be earned.

With proper precautions, hatching eggs may be safely sent journeys of a week or ten days' duration, but not so with baby chicks. At the close of an incubator hatch some of the chicks are one or two days old, and should not be sent more than a two days' journey. If properly packed, it is no cruelty to ship such a distance, for just before hatching the chick absorbs the yolk, which furnishes enough sustenance for three or four days, and additional food given during these first days of the chick's life is only injury.

On account of the limited distance chicks may be shipped, there is scarcely a neighborhood or town where one or more persons may not profitably engage in the hatching of chicks. Many people lack the time and equipment for the work, and prefer to furnish the eggs to be hatched for a stated sum or buy the chicks outright.

The purchaser must expect to pay a fair price for chicks from reliable strains of either bred-to-lay stock or from fancy exhibition breeders. Good sturdy chicks may be had for $15 per 100 and upward early in the season. Late-hatched chicks sell lower for they are not worth so much for winter layers, but may be used for a foundation flock if necessary. Conscientious breeders take pleasure in sending out chicks of real value, thus adding to the sum total of the poultry industry.

CAUTIOUS IN FEEDING BONE

May Have Appearance of Being Fresh When Inner Portions Are in State of Decomposition.

In feeding bone one should be especially careful. Bone may have all the appearances of being fresh when the inner portions and marrow are in an advanced state of decomposition.

The commercial article of beef scrap is never above suspicion. When made from fresh meat, cooked and stored properly, beef scrap will keep pure and sweet indefinitely. When spoiled meat is used, the cooking merely arrests decomposition, and such scrap, when fed to poultry, may cause trouble. Before feeding beef scrap or beef meal always test each bag. This is done by taking a small quantity, say half a pint, adding water and boiling. If, in boiling, it gives off a wholesome odor, the scrap is a wholesome poultry food. Commercial beef scrap that smells like fertilizer is fertilizer, and should never be used for poultry food.

Beef scrap that varies in color and is full of hard lumps should never be fed without testing.

GIVE FOWLS VARIED RATION

No Economy in Feeding Just One Kind of Grain—Provide Ample Supply of Pure Water.

There is no economy in feeding fowls only one kind of grain, for that compels them to eat more than they should to get a sufficient quantity of food elements.

A large part of the egg is water, which necessitates providing the layers with an ample supply of pure water. All of the fowls should have plenty of pure drinking water also.

Start Purebred Flock.

Elaborate preparations and much expense are not needed to start a purebred flock. Many a purebred flock had a beginning in one setting of eggs of two or three birds. The main thing is to start.

POULTRY FACTS

POPULAR BREEDS FOR MEAT

Brahmas, Cochins and Langshans Are Named as Being Among Best All-Around Heavyweights.

The best all-around heavyweight fowl for the production of large broilers and medium and heavy roasters and capons is the Brahma. The Cochins and Langshans are also excellent meat breeds. The Light Brahma has been the most popular, but the Dark Brahma at its best is fully as good. Both can be bred with the greatest amount of breast meat, because they have naturally long breasts with great width between the thighs.

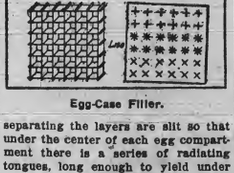
These qualities can be improved by carefully selecting breeding stock, using only hens that are of heavy weight, with great length of body, considerable width between the thighs and long breast bones. The males used should be cockerels of the same type, but with a little more length of leg.

Both males and females should be close feathered, with scant hock, leg and toe feathering. Brahmas of this type were great favorites a few years ago for market poultry. They were partly lost sight of for some time, but are again being bred to some extent in the poultry districts of New England.

TIME FOR PROPER HATCHING

Character of Range Must Be Considered—Confined Fowls Do Not Develop Very Rapidly.



Growing chicks that have, during the summer, been provided with an abundance of range, shade and green food will grow much more rapidly and more evenly than those crowded into small bare yards. The character of the range must, therefore, be considered in deciding on the time for proper hatching.

If the chicks are hatched too early they are apt to go into a fall molt after laying a few eggs in the summer, and are not likely to resume laying again until well into the winter, or after one or more of the most profitable laying months have passed. On the other hand, they should be hatched early enough to allow a sufficient time for normal maturity before the coming of cold weather in the fall.

PRACTICAL EGG-CASE FILLER

Much Loss Caused by Breakage Where Too Much Space Is Allowed —Defect Is Overcome.

It is said that the breakage is from 3 to 9 per cent when eggs are packed in the ordinary fillers, because too much space is allowed for each egg and the partitions are insufficiently elastic. In this scheme the flat sheets separating the layers are slit so that under the center of each egg compartment there is a series of radiating tongues, long enough to yield under ordinary shock, but stiff enough to remain in substantially the same plane. In the right-hand figure we show three different ways of making the slits.—Independent Farmer.

Keep Complete Records.

Keep a record of your flock the year round. It is only way to find how much money they are earning. Charge yourself a reasonable price for all the eggs you use.

Don't Mix.

Poultry of different ages and breeds. Eggs of different sizes, ages and colors.

The market pays from two to eight cents more for eggs of uniform size, color and quality.

Mating of Geese.

A mating of geese can be continued for seven or eight years without a change.

When Pullets Lay.

As a usual thing chickens do not lay until they are ten or twelve months old.

Apostolici Renounced Wine.

The Apostolici was a sect which first appeared at the end of the second century. The members renounced marriage, wine and flesh foods. A second sect, which sprang up about 1261, wandered about, clothed in white, with long beards, disheveled hair and bare heads, accompanied by women, called spiritual sisters, preaching against the church at Rome. The leader was burned alive in 1300, his followers were dispersed in 1307 and the sect died out in 1404.

Flattering Beaux.

Girls, don't listen to flattering beaux; for while as friends they always peaux, you will find in reality they are feaux. They flatter your eyes, mouth and neaux, and sing your praise from head to teaux. They take you to balls, parties and sheaux, and are adepts at concealing their weaux —although as fickle as the wind that bleaux.

Possibilities Are No More.

It used to be considered hugely humorous in the old home village to say of some bow-legged man that he could not stop a pig in an alley. But nowadays bow-legged men so vastly outnumber swine that it is impossible, as the experiment in more than a comparatively few cases.

Differ as to Earth's Age.

Scientists differ greatly as to the earth's age, estimates varying from 20,000,000 to 150,000,000 years. One of the first estimates was that of John Phillips, who in 1840 based on a study of stratified rock his assertion that the figure lay somewhere "between 38,000,000 and 96,000,000 years."

Eat Alligators' Eggs.

Alligators' eggs are eaten in the West India islands and on the west coast of Africa. They resemble in shape a hen's egg, and have much the same taste, but are larger. More than 100 eggs have been found in one alligator.

DISHES DAINTY AND DELICIOUS.

When serving a fruit cocktail of grapefruit, for example, use a French dressing combined with a mayonnaise, seasoning with paprika, tabasco sauce and chili sauce, and adding enough mayonnaise dressing to give the sauce a thick consistency.

Apple and Bermuda Onion Salad.—Cut in small dice two or three cupfuls of apples of good flavor, add a third as much of finely diced onion and a mayonnaise or any good boiled dressing. Celery may be added if liked, using the same amount of celery as onion. This is a salad particularly well liked, served with a pork roast or with chops.

Apple and Raisin Salad.—Pare and cut into small dice three choice apples, squeeze over them the juice of a lemon and add a cupful of raisins that have been soaked over night in orange juice, a cupful of the tender hearts of celery, cut in small pieces, season with salt and paprika and pour over a well-prepared French dressing. Serve on blanched lettuce well chilled.

Plum and Cheese Salad.—Select choice canned greengage plums. Drain and dry them and cut open from the stem to the blossom end on one side, removing the stones. Chop fine a dozen pecan meats and half a pimento, rinsed in cold water and dried; beat these into a cream cheese, adding cream if more moisture is needed, a little olive oil and lemon juice, any one, or a mixture of the three. Shape the cheese into balls and fill each plum with a small ball of cheese. Arrange the cheese balls and the plums in a nest of heart leaves of lettuce and serve with French dressing.

Crab Cocktail.—Take a half cupful of mayonnaise, a third of a cupful of catchup, a third of a cupful of olives, shredded, a stalk of celery, cut fine, and a can of crab meat. Mix and chill and serve in green peppers or in cocktail glasses.

Care should be taken when serving delicately flavored fruits not to over season the salad dressing and thus destroy the flavor of the fruit.

OUR "HEORIC SCRAMBLE."

At No Time In 1898 Did We Know What We Were Doing.

Eighteen years have passed since the Spanish-American war brought to a test the military preparedness of the U. S. The result of that test is not a very proud chapter in American history. The war was just "a heroic scramble. It lasted only 100 days, but we employed it in 58,688 regular troops and 223,235 volunteers, and it cost $322,000,000. The principal fact that stands out in history about it is that at no time did we know, in a military sense, what we were doing.

The embarkation of troops and material at Port Tampa resulted in confusion and delay that has been described by a military authority as presenting a "spectacle of unpreparedness sufficient to make the most boastful American blush for shame." When the transports finally got away a report that a Spanish torpedo boat had been sighted caused them to be recalled and they remained tied up for five days before it was discovered that the report was false.

Although it was known months before that the war was inevitable, so little had been done to recruit the regular army that at the Battle of San Juan the infantry regiments averaged only 556 men each, instead of 1,272. Congress had increased the regular army from 28,747 officers and men to 64,719, but this increase was made too late to produce anything like a trained force, nor were there any reserves to replace wastage. As a result some of the regiments were reduced by sickness to 300 men and were never thereafter brought to their full strength.

American military history had before amply demonstrated that volunteers to be effective must have trained officers, but Congress again permitted the Governors of the states to appoint the officers of the national guard even when it was known they were to be immediately drafted into the Federal service. Not only permitted but directed that "all the regimental and company officers shall be appointed by the Governors of the states in which their respective organizations are raised," and forbade that more than one regular army officer should be appointed in any single volunteer regiment.

There may have been method in this, for Congress probably knew it had done nothing to create a reserve of officers and there were not enough to supply both the regular and volunteer armies. As the commission appointed by President McKinley to investigate the conduct of the war afterward reported: "The War department had not the officers to send to each state to organize, muster, feed and equip them, nor had it officers of sufficient rank to command, drill and discipline the troops while in state camps."

The "heroic scramble" was successful. That is, Cuba was freed, useful in teaching the country the importance of military preparedness it probably was not, for after eighteen years of inaction the mobilization of the national guard again contains too much promise of a reputation of 1898. The state troops are made up of splendid young men, the best material in the world for soldiers. When they are ready to give up everything to fight for the country, the country owes it to them to make their services effective by proper measures of preparedness.—Kansas City Times.

Searching for Hidden Gold.

For past generations tradition has decreed that the Indians in the aboriginal days of Kentucky buried a pot of gold on the farm of Mr. John Williams, over the Boyle line in Casey county. A few days ago Mr. Williams decided to institute a systematic search for the treasure. His powerful team of mules was hitched to a strong plow and in the locality where the gold is supposed to be hidden he began going deep into the earth. It has always been claimed that the pot is of gigantic proportions. After considerable deep plowing had been done and numerous excavations made, Mr. Williams' mules came to a sudden standstill when the plow struck an object that could not be moved. So certain that he had found the traditional pot he was overjoyed and fainted. Passersby hurried to his assistance and he was revived and told those present what he was seeking. An excavation was made and it was proven the plow had struck a huge rock. However, the search is being continued. There are a number of farms in Boyle county upon which it is claimed large quantities of silver and gold are buried. In most cases it is believed to have been hidden by rebels or Confederate people during war times. Not a few people have lost their lives by keeping their money in their homes and attempting to hold it against the intrusion of robbers. That was one reason treasures were buried in other days. In this enlightened age with burglar-proof banking facilities, people are not subjected to these dangers. Some years ago some parties near Paint Lick in Garrard county in wrecking an old house found several thousand dollars which had been hidden during war times. The man who had hidden the money died without telling the secret.—Danville Messenger.

Federal Inquiry or Railroad Strike?

Faced by demands from the conductors, engineers, firemen and brakemen that would impose on the country an additional burden in transportation costs of $100,000,000 a year, the railroads propose that this wage problem be settled by reference to an impartial Federal tribunal.

With these employes, whose efficient service is acknowledged, the railroads have no differences that could not be considered fairly and decided justly by such a public body.

Railroads Urge Public Inquiry and Arbitration

The formal proposal of the railroads to the employes for the settlement of the controversy is as follows:

"Our conferences have demonstrated that we cannot harmonize our differences of opinion and that eventually the matters in controversy must be passed upon by other and disinterested agencies. Therefore, we propose that your proposals and the proposition of the railways be disposed of by one or the other of the following methods:

1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenue of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected, and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot, under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved; or

2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law" (The Newlands Act).

Leaders Refuse Offer and Take Strike Vote

Leaders of the train service brotherhoods, at the joint conference held in New York, June 1-15, refused the offer of the railroads to submit the issue to arbitration or Federal review, and the employes are now voting on the question whether authority shall be given these leaders to declare a nation-wide strike.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is proposed by the railroads as the public body to which this issue ought to be referred for these reasons:

No other body with such an intimate knowledge of railroad conditions has such an unquestioned position in the public confidence.

The rates the railroads may charge the public for transportation are now largely fixed by this Government board.

Out of every dollar received by the railroads from the public nearly one-half is paid directly to the employes as wages; and the money to pay increased wages can come from no other source than the rates paid by the public.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, with its control over rates, is in a position to make a complete investigation and render such decision as would protect the interests of the railroad employes, the owners of the railroads, and the public.

A Question For the Public to Decide

The railroads feel that they have no right to grant a wage preferment of $100,000,000 a year to these employes, now highly paid and constituting only one-fifth of all the employes, without a clear mandate from a public tribunal that shall determine the merits of the case after a review of all the facts.

The single issue before the country is whether this controversy is to be settled by an impartial Government inquiry or by industrial warfare.

MEXICAN FORAYS

On American Soil Will Soon Be Stopped By the Rushing of Troops to The Border.

El Paso, Texas, July 2.—National guardsmen by the trainload reached El Paso today. While many unloaded for stations in the vicinity, the great majority were rushed on to points westward, to complete concentration on the frontier.

The military men say that at the present rate of transportation all points along the border soon will be strengthened to a degree that will make impossible Mexican forays on American soil.

The Second Massachusetts Infantry, which detrained here yesterday, was ordered to the expeditionary base at Columbus, N. M., to re-enforce the regiment of New Mexico guardsmen and the 1,500 regulars there. A and B. batteries of the New Jersey Field Artillery were sent to Douglas, Ariz., presumably to relieve regular cavalry men.

It is reported that the cavalry will be ordered to the San Bernardino Valley, east of Douglas, to protect its large supply of cattle, horses and forage from possible bandit forays.

A regiment of New Jersey infantry, two troops of cavalry, and a signal company also left westward for an unannounced point along the border.

At military headquarters it was said the redistribution of the border patrol would be pushed as rapidly as possible. Following the new assignments of the organizations originally ordered here, only the Massachusetts militia remained in El Paso. It was reported that several trainloads of the Pennsylvania guard will arrive here soon.

General George Bell, Jr., announced today that he had employed a corps of local undertakers to go to Carrizal to bring here the bodies of the American soldiers killed in the engagement there. The undertakers will go into Mexico under personal guarantee of safety from Gen. Alvaro Obregon, Mexican Minister of War.

The terrible heat that greeted the arriving guardsmen today kept most of them under cover. The word went out that following their arduous trip from the cool Atlantic Coast region to the burning mesas of Western Texas, the soldiers should take things easy. The result was that there were few prostrations.

The mounts of the cavalry detachments suffered greatly from the long trip and the heat. It will take many days to get the horses in trim again.

The Next President.

The next President of the United States, it can be stated absolutely, will not be either Woodrow Wilson, Charles E. Hughes, or any other man mentioned for the office.

Unless death should intervene or changes in the Cabinet take place between now and March 4, 1917, the next President of the United States will be Robt. Lansing, now Secretary of State.

Lansing will become the President not by the votes of the people but by virtue of a law passed in 1886, and he will be President for exactly one and one-half days!

It happens that March 4, 1917, the day fixed for the new President to be inaugurated, falls on Sunday. For this reason, the inauguration ceremonies will not take place until Monday, March 5, at noon. The term of Woodrow Wilson expires at noon March 4. Consequently the U. S. will be without a President for 24 hours, until noon Monday, the 5th day of March.

But the presidential succession act of 1886, passed during the 49th Congress, provides that "in case of the removal, death, resignation or inability of both the President and Vice President, then the Secretary of State shall act as President until the disability of the President or Vice President is removed or a President is elected."

The other members of the President's Cabinet, named in the presidential succession act, are all eligible to become acting President except Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane, who is a Canadian by birth.

There have been only three times in the history of the United States since the adoption of the Constitution that the presidential inauguration date has fallen on Sunday. The first time was when President James Monroe took office in 1821, the second was the date of the inauguration of Zachary Taylor in 1849, and the third was when Rutherford B. Hayes took office in 1877.

We condemn all alliances and combinations of individuals in this country of whatever nationality or decent, who agree and conspire together for the purpose of embarrassing or weakening our government, or of improperly influencing or coercing our public representatives in dealing with any foreign power. We charge that such conspiracies among a limited number exist, and have been instigated for the purpose of advancing the interests of foreign countries to the prejudice and detriment of our country. We condemn any political party which in view of the activity of such conspirators, surrenders its integrity or modifies its policy.—From Democratic platform adopted by St. Louis Convention.

State News.

Virgil Weaver, the extensive honey producer of this county, has moved about 150 colonies of his bees to Harrison county. This was made necessary from the fact that the honey-bearing blossoms are rather scarce here this season. He says that the bees he took to Harrison county some time ago are producing a world of honey.—Falmouth Outlook

Simpson county farmers met with the fiscal court and employed county Agent Kelly for another year beginning December 1 at a salary of $1,500, a voluntary increase of $300. Since the county commenced to employ an agricultural agent waste land has been redeemed, production in many instances doubled, and the salary of the agent saved in the eradication of hog cholera.

Mr. Hub Simmons a prosperous farmer of this county, bought a cow a year ago and she has brought him two calves within that time and her first calf has a young one, making in all from this cow Mr. Simmons has four herd of cattle. This breaks the known. Mr. H. C Dodds, who was know, Mr. H. C Dodds, wh owas present when Mr. Simmons was reporting to the Citizen, stated the original cow is part goat. We do not know about this.—Scottsville Citizen.

The farmers of Pendleton county have lost no cattle from bloat by feeding on white clover, when the fields were used by the bees, but the fields shunned by the bees have proven fatal with the cattle. The farmers, now before turning their stock in on white clover, watch to see if the bees are working on it; if not, they keep their stock out of the fields, and since they have adopted this method they have not lost any stock from bloat.

Wilson Epigrams.

Epigrams found in President Wilson's address delivered before the Advertising Club of the World at its meeting held in Philadelphia on Wednesday of last week:

"I wish candor and truth might always be the standard of politics as well as the standard of business."

"You cannot understand the people of the United States without wishing to serve them."

"America is at a point where it is more than ever necessary that she should understand her own ideals not only but be ready to put them into action at any cost."

"It is one thing to entertain fine principles and another thing to make them work."

"I never have been interested in fighting for myself, but I am immensely interested in fighting for the things I believe in, and so far as they are concerned I am a challenger of all comers."

"I am in fighting mood—"

"America First' means nothing until you translate it in what you do."

"I believe most profoundly in the duty of every American to exalt the national consciousness by purifying his own motives and exhibiting his own devotion."

"You have not only got to be just to your fellow men, but as a nation you have got to be just to other nations."

"No small body of persons, no matter how influential, should be trusted to determine the policy and development of America."

"The only thing that ever set any man free, the only thing that ever set any nation free, is the truth."

"A man who does not love the truth is in the way of decay and failure."

"When you see a man wincing under criticism, you may know that something hit that was so."

"Business is all right so long as it is shot thru with ideals."

During Wilson's administration we have done more to build up an army and navy in three years than the Republican party did in forty years of its existence. More has been done to give the American people a navy and army in three months than Colonel Roosevelt and Mr. Taft did in eleven years. President Wilson acts, he does not rant; he builds, he does not bluster.—Chairman Ollie M. James to the St. Louis Convention.

Drowned in Ohio River.

Ghent, July 2.—Thomas Pierce Griffith and his wife were drowned in the Ohio River here this morning. They had just driven their automobile on a ferry boat when Griffith accidentally started the machine instead of stopping it. The auto, with its occupants, plunged into the Ohio.

Both bodies were recovered about one hour later. Mr. and Mrs. Griffith were enroute to visit their two sons, Ulie J. Griffith, teller in a bank at Lawrenceburg, Ind., and Wilfred Griffith, cashier of a bank at Greensburg, Ind. Griffith was about 60 years old and a leading member of the Masonic order.

Griffith had purchased a new car, and this was his first touring trip without a chauffeur.

The Electro-Gas Company, composed of Al Junker and associates, has rented the Kraas building opposite Zion church and engaged in the manufacture of a fluid called electro-gas, and which is claimed to increase the motor power of gasoline at least 25 per cent. Americanism and Peace, Preparedness and Prosperity—these are the issues upon which the Democratic party stands, and the heart of Democracy swells with pride that is more than the pride of party, as it hails the man who has asserted this Americanism, assured this peace, advocated this preparedness and produced this prosperity.—From Gov. Glynn's keynote speech at St. Louis Convention.

The Dog and The Bone.

When someone gives you a lot of gush about your self, be blind, deaf and dumb, remembering the old adage that "A dog that will bring a bone will carry one away." When someone gives you a song and dance about some other person the same one will give them the same about you. So beware of the dog carrying a bone, for you may be the subject for the vile tongue when it again meets someone who will listen. You have your short comings and if you are bright you know it, but you do not want someone with no more good qualities than you have to run about town airing your failings. And the way to prevent it is to give no credence to the bone carrying dog when it comes to you.—Cooper in Clipper.

A PITCH BATTLE

With Robt. Thomas Averted by Sheriff Cropper and Dpeuty Conner.

A Shot Gun and Two Pistols Ready for Action.

Thomas Takes Officers Advice and Surrenders, and Is Lodged in Jail.

Sheriff W. D. Cropper and his deputy Albert Conner had an experience, while on official duty last Friday, that they do not care to have repeated again soon. Although there were no serious results, yet the officers now realize the feeling of a fellow who looks into the yawning barrel of a shot gun while a man behind the gun, and not more than fifty feet distant, has nothing more to do than touch the trigger to make a job for a coroner.

The officers had been called to Verona to take charge of Robert Thomas, a tenant, who occupied the house with his landlord, one Mr. Kemper, and whose life had been rendered miserable Thursday night by Thomas who was drinking to an excess and among other acts of misconduct, had fired a shot through a door in the residence and which Kemper claims was fired at his wife.

When the officers arrived in Verona Friday morning they were informed that Thomas and a boy had gone out the road toward the Gallatin county line, nothing being said about the shot gun they had with them. Going some distance the officers overtook and passed the Thomas buggy on a hill, and stopped about 20 yards ahead of it. While the Sheriff was setting the breaks to hold his machine, the deputy got out when Thomas covered him instantly with his shot gun, and his every look indicated that he meant business. Keeping his head Mr. Conner began talking to the man, advising him not to shoot. In the shortest space of time possible Sheriff Cropper got out of the machine, and, profiting by the conversation in which his deputy was engaged, drew his gun, but even after he appeared, and both officers had their guns leveled on Thomas, it took no little parleying to convince him he had better surrender. Finally he took the officers' advice very much to their relief and lowered his gun and became a prisoner, and was brought to Burlington and lodged in jail. Besides the shot gun Thomas had with him two quarts of whisky that were calculated to keep him on the war-path so long as it lasted.

Thomas stated by way of an apology for his conduct that he did not know Cropper and Conner were officers, but they say he did not give them time in which to so inform him

Thomas' examining trial was set for last Saturday, when he waived examination and he was held over to the next grand jury, his bond being fixed at five hundred dollars, which he has not given yet.

FORTY YEARS AGO TOfDAX.

Crowd at court, Monday was very small.

It seems that the county abounds with thieves. Almost every day we hear of some petty depredations.

Stephen Gaines, of Louisville, has been spending several days in his old neighborhood.

For school purposes the Petersburg district has voted a tax of 15 cents on each $100.

Mr. S. B. Huey left here Thursday morning bound for Texas. His wife and children remained with her mother.

With the Democrats of this county the nomination of Tilden and Hendricks is satisfactory.

Joe Payne, colored, in the employ of Jacob F. Scott, near Union, was shot to death on the road near Jonas Delph's last Friday night. He was charged with having entered the room of Mr. Scott's daughter, and was under arrest and being brought to jail by Mr. Riley, town marshal of Union.

Preparing to Leave for the Front.

It has been reliably reported to the Recorder that Col L. H. Voshell, of Union, was at Ft Thomas, last Saturday, inspecting the Kentucky soldiers that are mobilizing there, and that he was not at all favorably impressed with the appearance of the boys It was further stated that the Colonel will organize a company at Union and march it to Ft Thomas as a genuine article of Kentucky soldiery

Making a Good Start.

Ross Conrad, the new carrier on the Burlington and Erlanger mail route, is making a very satisfactory beginning, and will endeavor to keep the service up to the point of excellency it attained under his predecessor, "Boss" Eddins. The young man has been raised to hustle, and will not depart from his training while in Uncle Sam's service.

Retains His Job.

State Senator George G. Speer, of Frankfort, will be appointed State Banking Comissioner to succeed Thomas J. Smith. Rankin R. Revill, who has been deputy under Commissioner Smith, and Rodes Settle, bank examiner, and V. V. Packwood, clerk, will be retained under the new administration, it is understood. J. Stone Walker, of Richmond, is tipped for one of the examiners.

THE HORSE WILL DISAPPEAR.

This is Prediction by Kansas State Highway Engineer.

That within ten years the horse will practically disappear from the public highways of Kannsas for both pleasure and business is the prediction by W. S. Gearhart, state highway engineer. The horse, he holds, cannot compete with either the auto or the motor truck any more than the old freighter with his ox team could with the iron horse driven by steam, and it really looks as though old Dobbin will soon have to stay home on the farm with the cows.

"These new methods of transportation require new and adequate systems of highway construction and maintenance," says Mr. Gearhart. "The system of earth roads which the counties and townships of Kansas built up and were maintaining during the last six years was probably the best and on the largest scale the world had ever seen, but the rains, snow and frost during the past year have given them the appearance now of European battlefields.

"Until recently many Kansans had begun to believe properly graded and constantly dragged earth roads would answer every purpose. However, it is now clearly evident that if the main roads those highways radiating out from the market centers and connecting the cities, constituting about 10 to 15 per cent of the total road mileage, are to be maintained in the eastern third of the state as 365 day highways which will carry modern traffic at all seasons it will be necessary to surface them with more permanent material then puddled earth secured by dragging the roads while they are wet."

CONVICTS AS ROAD BUILDERS

Warden Zimmer Reports Work of Illinoise Men Excellent.

Fifty prisoners are working in and around the new epileptic colony in Illinois this spring in grading and road building.

Warden Zimmer of the state penitentiary in a recent letter to the national committee on prisons reports great success in convict road work in Illinois. The laws of that state require that townships desiring to secure the services of convicts for road work must make application and enter into a contract with the institution. No work can be done until such request has been made and contract entered into.

The success of the work, Warden Zimmer states, depends upon the selection of the men for the work. Five camps have already been worked in Illinois and all carried out without friction or trouble of any sort. The warden also emphasizes the importance of selecting officers for the camp who are capable of supervising such a camp and having charge of the prisoners in the camp.

The national committee on prisons agrees with Warden Zimmer that too much stress cannot be laid upon the selection of the men and the choice of officers. The committee has brought before the Society For Highway Engineering the opportunity for the road engineer in convict road work and the need that engineers be specially trained for this work. Upon the men in charge of convict camps there is heavy responsibility, but to the right man success is assured.

A Lightning Change.

Last week Allen Goodridge, of Hebron, advertised for sale for $15 a high grade Holstein heifer. A Mr. Sparks, of Cincinnati, saw the advertisement and notified Mr. Goodridge that he would take the animal. Sunday he sent a colored man to the river at Constance to receive the animal, which was loaded into a wagon by Mr. Goodridge and others. Now you may imaline, if you can, Mr. Goodridge's surprise last Monday morning, when he was called up by Mr. Sparks and informed that instead of a Holstein heifer, the animal he got was a heavy bull calf. Mr. Goodridge and others avow that a Holstein heifer was delivered to Mr. Spark's man who declares he delivered the animal he received at Anderson's Ferry. It is a peculiar case to be sure.

Piatt Heirs File Claim.

Senator Pomerane of Ohio has introduced a bill in Congress for the payment by the U. S. Government of $517,510 to the heirs of John H. Piatt. The claim is for provisions furnished the Federal Government in the war of 1812. John H. Piatt is said to have put his entire fortune and credit amounting to more than a half million dollars at the service of his country wherewith to feed the hungry soldiers a small portion of which was repaid. Piatt later became a bankrupt, was imprisoned for debt and died in jail without funds wherewith to bury him. Among the heirs who expect to benefit is Reese Perry formerly a resident of Lawrenceburg.—Register.

It is a Good Proposition.

Those who attended the meeting of bankers at Walton, one day last week, mapped out a plan by which they hope the local banks will see their way clear to handle the road bond issue. It is the desire that the people of the county reap all the benefit that is to be derived from the bonds, and that they shall not be scattered broad cast over the country. The plan is entirely feasable and the bonds can be taken care of by the people and the banks at home without the least inconvenience and loss if they only think so. After a popular subscription is satisfied there should be left only a small slice for the banks.

FEEDING CHICKENS FOR EGG PRODUCTION

Hen Fed No Meat or Milk Laid 38 Eggs While 71 Were Being Laid by the Milk-Fed Hens and 72 by the Hen Fed With Beef Scrap.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For those who are favorably situated for raising turkeys, a more profitable side line can hardly be found. Given plenty of range where the turkeys can find grasshoppers and other insects, green vegetation, the seeds of weeds and grasses, waste grain, acorns and nuts of various kinds, the cost of raising them is very small and the profits large. Grain and stock farms are particularly well adapted to turkey raising, and it is on such farms that most of the turkeys are found. Little has ever been done in the way of raising turkeys in confinement, and where it has been tried the results have been discouraging. Plenty of range is essential to success in turkey raising.

Breeding.

In selecting turkeys for breeding, the most important factors to be considered are vigor, size, shape, bone, early maturity and color of plumage. The body should be deep and wide, the back broad, and the breast round and full. The head should be of good size and of a clean, healthy appearance. A strong, well-made skeleton is shown by thick, sturdy shanks and straight, strong toes. It should be the aim of every turkey raiser to have a flock of purebred turkeys, even though they are sold at market prices. The male at the head of the flock should by all means be a purebred of the best type obtainable. The male is one-half the entire flock, and by continually selecting the best females of a similar type and mating these with a purebred male, one can soon have a flock of uniformly large, early-maturing, strong-boned, long and deep-bodied turkeys of the same color.

Fifteen turkey hens can safely be mated to a vigorous tom. If 25 or 30 hens are kept, two toms should not be allowed to run with them at the same time, but one should be confined one day and the other the next. When two toms are allowed to run together during the mating season, they fight badly and the stronger does practically all of the mating.

Bronze Turkey Hen.

Laying.

Turkey hens are wont to "steal" their nests in hidden places, such as a patch of weeds, tall grass or thick brush and often wander a half mile or more from home before they find location that suit them. To find these stolen nests often proves to be a long and tedious task, the usual method being to follow each turkey hen as she separates from the flock and starts toward her nest, care being taken that she does not know she is being followed. A much easier and quicker method than this is to confine the hens early some morning soon after they have come down from roost and let them out late in the afternoon. Those that are laying will then head for their nests in order to lay the eggs they have been holding.

If many turkeys are kept, the use of a breeding pen will be found a great convenience. This pen should cover a sufficient area to allow the turkeys some exercise, an acre for 15 birds being none too large. A hog-tight wire fence three feet high will hold most turkeys, and if any persist in flying out, the flight feathers of one wing should be clipped. Nests should be scattered about the pen, those which turkey hens take to most readily being barrels turned on their sides and nests shaped in them with straw.

Incubation.

Turkey hens, chicken hens and incubators are commonly used to incubate turkey eggs. During the early part of the laying season it often happens that one has on hand a number of eggs that should be incubated before any of the turkey hens are through laying their first litter and become "broody." In such case, and also when it is desired that the turkey hens lay more than one litter, some of the eggs have to be incubated under chicken hens or in an incubator. About a week before the eggs are due to hatch, turkey hens should be allowed to sit on their full clutch of eggs hatched. They may be given a few eggs from the incubator or from under the chicken hens and allowed to hatch the poults themselves, or at night a newly hatched poult can be slipped under each turkey hen that is to be given a brood of poults and by morning she will be glad to take them.

Brooding.

If the weather is warm and dry no shelter is required, as the poults do better in the open. Should it be rainy, however, they need to be protected, for nothing is more injurious than for them to become wet and chilled. The most satisfactory plan is to confine the mother turkey hen to a coop and allow the poults to run in and out whenever rain does not prevent. This coop should be placed in a field where they can run out and find grasshoppers, green vegetation and other feed. The coop should be moved to fresh ground every day.

Improper feeding, combined with close confinement, has been the cause of many failures in turkey raising. Given free range on the average farm, the poults can easily pick up their own living, and one light feed a day for the purpose of inducing them to come in at night is sufficient. If the mother hen is confined to a coop and the poults allowed to run in and out, three times a day is often enough to feed and very little should be given at a time. The poults should always be ready to eat; if given all they will clean up several times a day, indigestion will be the result. If there is little or no feed outside the coop for the poults to pick up, then they should be fed about five times a day, feeding only a small quantity at a time. A good feed for the first few days is stale bread soaked in milk and squeezed dry. Corn bread crumbs and clabbered milk or cottage cheese is also quite often fed and with excellent results. Green feed and grit should be on hand at all times. As the poults grow older, the ration should gradually be changed to grain.

PROPER EGGS FOR HATCHING

Those From Old Hens Are Preferred to Ones Secured From Pullets—Have Them Uniform.

First of all, eggs for hatching should be from strong, healthy hens, says a writer in an exchange. A hen is not capable of producing a chick that will develop into a bird stronger than she herself was at the time the egg was laid. The eggs chosen should average in size, neither too large nor too small. I like for them to average about 24 ounces to the dozen. Eggs from old hens are usually to be preferred to those from pullets. When beginning to lay, and for a time afterward, pullets lay eggs that are under the average in size. When the eggs become normal in size, it is usually safe to use them for incubation, especially in the case of birds of the smaller breeds. The eggs chosen should be uniform in size, shape and color.

Eggs should not be older than ten days before they are placed in the incubator or under hens; in fact, much better results would be obtained if the eggs were no older than five days. While eggs four or five weeks old will sometimes hatch, the chicks from such eggs are usually disappointing—are hard to raise, and when grown, will likely prove to be weaklings.

White and brown eggs should never be incubated together for the reason that they need different heat and moisture requirements.

In holding eggs for incubation they should be kept in a room having a temperature of about 50 degrees F. If kept in a very low temperature, the germ may be killed or weakened. If subjected to a very high temperature, the germ will start to develop. Eggs being held for incubation should be turned daily.

CARE OF BROODER CHICKENS

Young Birds Must Be Watched Carefully for First Few Days—Guard Against Chilling.

Young chicks being raised by a wooden mother should not be permitted a very large yard at first, but they become "housewise" and know how to get back to artificial warmth. Many of them at first do not know enough to go back into the house when they become chilled, and it may be necessary at first to put them under the brooder a few times, after they have had a run outside, especially if they begin to huddle together outside.

They often will get chilled while ranging in the bright sunlight, and in place of going back to the brooder huddle together in a corner of the yard. After a few days of experience they do not have to be watched.

A hen mother calls them about her and broods the chicks quite often whenever she thinks they need warmth, but no one has invented an artificial caller for the wooden hens.

FARM STOCK

GIVE BOAR GOOD ATTENTION

As He Matures, Litters Will Be Stronger and Larger—Keep Him Separated From the Sows.

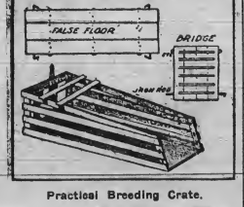
It is not best to let the boar run with the rest of the herd. It is too common a practice to sell the boar when the season is over. This is largely the cause of so many small litters and weakboned pigs. It is best to get a good boar, and keep him for a few years, and as he matures his pigs will be stronger and litters larger.

Have a small yard of grass if possible, hog-tight and away from the sows, so he will not be worried. A quarter of an acre will afford plenty of exercise in the open air. When grass is not available, give him cut clover or any other good green feed that he will eat.

Feed sparingly of fattening feeds, but give him feed that will keep him growing if he is not fully developed. Mill stuff, skim milk, clover, alfalfa or anything that furnishes protein is advisable. At all times keep a supply of ashes, salt and charcoal where he can obtain it at will. It will do much toward keeping him in good health.

RAISE RAPE FOR PASTURAGE

Splendid Feed for Sheep and Hogs—Good Use Can Be Made of the Temporary Fences.



Rape is a splendid feed for sheep and hogs as well. It is usually pastured, but when the acreage is small and one wishes to get the most from the crop, it is cut and fed to the stock and then when it grows up again, is pastured.

Rape is generally broadcasted in the early spring on well prepared ground at the rate of five pounds of seed per acre. When the plants are about eight inches high turn the sheep into the field. Most pasturage can be obtained if temporary fences are used to allow only a part of the field to be pastured at a time.

BREEDING CRATE FOR SWINE

Device Is Easily Transported and Is Splendid Combination for Carrying or Ringing.

A splendid crate for handling swine and for use as a breeding crate is made according to the accompanying drawing. Any ordinary light material may be used. It is easily transported and is a combination for carrying or ringing and adjustable to both large and small boar or sow in mating, writes George W. Brown of Hancock county, Ohio, in Farm and Home. It meets these demands with but slight adjustments.

The bridge serves as well to close up the rear end in confining an animal and by inserting in varied slots readily admits the use of different sizes of animals in breeding. The false floor which hangs upon hooks over the slats makes a support for small animals in the crate and also is used as a top in shipping. Hook and eye devices hold the top and rear bridges together in transportation.

FEEDING THE IDLE HORSES

High-Priced Feeds Should be Avoided in Order to Keep Animals in Best Condition.

In the feeding of idle horses the high-priced feeds should be avoided in order to keep them in proper condition at the lowest cost. It has been found that idle horses do very well on a winter feed consisting of all the hay, oat straw, cornstalks or sorghums they will consume, so that little grain is necessary. Idleness also permits of a more thorough mastication of the feed, thus insuring proper digestion.

FRST INDICATION OF SCOURS

Feed Should Be Immediately Cut to One-Half the Usual Amount—Give Dose of Formalin.

The first sign of indigestion scours is a foul-smelling dung. The feed should be immediately cut to one-half the usual amount. For two or three feeding periods add a tablespoonful per pint of milk fed of a mixture of one-half ounce formalin in 15.5 ounces water. After two or three feeding periods the milk may be again increased to the regular amount.

Avoid Tainted Food.

No animal is thrown off its feed so quickly by unclean or tainted food as a sheep.

LIVE STOCK

GOOD COLT-BREAKING HINTS

Young Animal May Be Accustomed to Harness and Trained to Rein After Broken to Lead.

After the colt has been broken to lead he may be accustomed to harness and trained to rein. A horse should never be hitched to a wagon or ridden before he is broken to drive in harness, to stop when he hears "whoa," rein to the right and left, and to back up.

To familiarize the colt with bit and harness the "bitting harness," consisting of an open bridle with snaffle bit, check and side reins, and surcingle with crupper, may be used.

Put the rigging on the colt, leaving the side and check reins comparatively loose, and turn him loose in a small paddock for an hour. On the second lesson the reins may be tightened somewhat, but not left on for over an hour. The third day driving lines may be put on. Let the assistant lead the colt till he is not frightened at the driver walking behind. Dismiss the assistant as soon as possible, and drive the colt for half an hour in a quiet paddock or lane where he will not see other horses. All that should be taught in this lesson is to go ahead. Cluck to the colt, or tell him "get up," and use the whip to let him know what is meant.

It is essential to train both sides of a colt. He may become accustomed to objects seen on the near side with the near eye, but when the same objects are viewed for the first time on the other side with the off eye he may be badly frightened. Driving in a right and left circle will facilitate this training.

BEST HOGS FOR FATTENING

Pigs Weighing From 130 to 150 Pounds Should Be Selected—Corn as Supplementary Feed.

For fattening, select pigs weighing from 130 to 150 pounds and, in good condition. They should be fattened for at least 60 days and perhaps 75, if it requires so long to bring them up to a weight of 180 to 200 pounds. This is the most desirable weight at which to put hogs on the market and animals of this weight in good condition will bring top prices.

In feeding corn as a supplement to pasture, begin with a daily feed of three pounds of corn for a hog weighing 150 pounds. When full feeding has been well begun, one may feed all the corn the hog will clean up. Kafir milo or feterita may be used instead of corn, but the amount required will be a little larger.

BEST SHEEP-PEN LOCATION

High Ground, Sloping or Rough, Is Preferable—Animals Do Not Thrive in Mud and Water.

The pens should be on high ground, preferably sloping or rough. If you have nothing but low, flat ground, do not buy sheep. They do not do well on low, level ground where they must be in slush, mud and water.

A sheep wants a hillside where it is clean, and where it will have dry bedding when it lies down. The feed and water must be clean. A shed is essential to keep off cold rains and snows and as a windbreak. A warm barn is not necessary until lambing time. One hundred ewes under favorable conditions should raise one hundred lambs.

CORRECT FEEDING OF SWINE

Scientist Gives Long Tables for Farmer to Follow—Another Allows Porkers Free Rein.

A well-known scientific research professor spent years in experimentation to ascertain the correct amounts of protein, carbohydrates and water to feed hogs of varying ages.

He formulated voluminous feeding tables for farmers to follow that would cause the average feeder to lie awake nights to decipher.

Now comes another investigator who produces better weights and better profits with hogs by simply allowing the porkers to feed and water themselves just as their tastes dictate.

WAYS OF COOKING RICE.

It is interesting to note the various ways common rice is served in the various countries.

Spanish Rice. — Fry one large onion, chopped with two tomatoes, add a cupful of stock and salt and pepper to taste. Cover and let simmer ten minutes; then add two cupfuls of boiled rice, mix with a tablespoonful of butter and serve very hot.

Another—Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan and when melted add half a cupful of rice and stir it for 15 minutes, occasionally; then add one chopped onion, one chopped tomato, a clove of garlic and cover with water or vegetable stock; season highly with salt and pepper, cover and let rice cook slowly for 40 minutes.

Dutch Rice Pudding.—Mix a cupful of rice, two cupfuls of milk, one tablespoonful of butter, the yolks of four eggs, the juice of a lemon, one cupful of sugar, a grating of nutmeg, a half cupful of chopped raisins, half a cupful of nuts and the whites of the eggs, beaten stiff. Bake in a buttered pudding dish until brown.

Milanaise Rice.—Put two tablespoonfuls of butter into a stewpan, and when hot add a slice of onion, chopped; cook without browning, then add a half cupful of rice and a quart of white stock. Cook until the rice is tender and the liquid absorbed; add two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese and salt if needed. Stir gently with a fork; turn into a serving dish and sprinkle the top with a little cheese, then serve as a vegetable.

Swedish Rice With Codfish.—Cook together a cupful of rice in a cupful of water and four cupfuls of milk for half an hour. Remove from the heat; add a cupful of rich milk, two well-beaten eggs and three cupfuls of shredded codfish. Season well and bake in a moderate oven 40 minutes. Serve with drawn butter sauce and lemon quarters, garnished with parsley.

A mixture of cooked rice, hard-cooked eggs, white sauce and cheese, makes a most satisfying luncheon dish.

Saving is like sewing—if it is well done the harvest will repay bountifully.

Life means not submission to, but mastery of, environment.

CARROT DISHES.

That vegetables are a necessity in the diet, there is no question. They furnish mineral salts (which they take from the soil) as well as cellulose and water, which are invaluable, giving bulk to the food, exciting peristaltic action and flushing the digestive tract. Carrots are vegetables which are not well enough valued; they contain many elements necessary to the blood, especially iron, which make them a most important addition to the vegetable diet.

Carrot and Nut Loaf.—To one cupful of boiled and mashed carrots add some well-beaten egg, half a cupful of chopped walnuts, one finely minced onion, a tablespoonful of butter, melted, a half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and bread crumbs to make a stiff mixture, a cupful will probably be sufficient. Form into a loaf and bake in a greased pan half an hour. Serve hot with tomato sauce.

Carrots Flamande.—Boil carrots until tender without scraping them, then rub off the skin and cut in strips. Into a saucepan put butter; when melted add lemon juice, turn in the carrots, season well with salt and a dash of cayenne and sprinkle with chopped parsley after they have become heated ready to serve.

Carrot Puffs.—To each cupful of cooked carrots add half a cupful of cream and a beaten egg, one teaspoonful of butter, melted, half a teaspoonful of sugar and a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Mix well, pour into greased custard cups and bake half an hour or until they are puffed up and light.

Delicious as well as attractive-looking soups may be made of carrots. Using the mashed carrot as a puree, put through a sieve and some of the liquor in which the carrots were cooked for additional flavor; add to a hot cream soup and garnish with grated cooked carrot.

Carrots With Lemon Butter.—Shred the carrots with a slicer in shoestring stripe, cook until tender in boiling, salted water, drain and season with butter, minced parsley and lemon juice.

July 1st, Woodford R. and H. C. Miller of Big Bone Springs, retire as the mail carriers on the Star Route from Hamilton to Walton after twelve years of continual service. W. R. Miller has been in the U. S. Mail service since he has been sixteen years old, having carried the mail from Hamilton to Verona three times a week until he established the postoffice at Big Bone of which he was the postmaster for 12 years. Messrs. Miller have been efficient and careful carriers and gave good service throughout this long period of time. They are succeeded as mail carrier by their nephew Chas. E. Miller.

Wm. Cotton, of near Verona, was before Squire John C. Bedinger's court Thursday to answer to the charge of evading the payment of toll on the Walton and Verona turnpike, the company making the complaint. The trial was by jury, and Mr. Cotton gave as his defense that the road was not in a proper condition to justify the payment of toll and at the time that he refused and went thru the gate without paying if it was proper to pay, for the gatekeeper to charge it to his Cotton's account, and this caused a verdict of not guilty. The turnpike company was represented by Atty. Jno. L. Vest and the defendant by D. B. Castleman of Erlanger.

On Friday night of last week a great treat was given the health loving people of Walton in hearing a masterly lecture at the Opera House delivered by Col. L. Mervin Maus, of Frankfort, representing the Anti Tuberculosis League of Kentucky. While the subject matter was mainly on tuberculosis, Colonel Maus dwelt on other contagious diseases of a virulent characttr, the criminal negigence of people by whose carelessness and negligent indifference propogate the most loathsome diseases. He pointed out how many of those dreadful diseases have been virtually stamped out by sanitary precautions. Yellow fever, smallpox, Bubonic plague, leprosy, typhoid fever, and many other diseases have been banished by the United States and municipalities, not only in a great many places in this country but in the Philippines, Porto Rico, Cuba, Hiawia, and other countries. The lecture was of such a character that all who have not only the welfare of themselves and their dear ones, but their fellow creatures at heart, should have heard this splendid address for humanity's salvation. He said that in ten or 20 years from now we will look back in horror, and wonder how we really existed under the unsanitary conditions that we now live in, as we, at the present, look back at the past when those terrible diseases were rife. It is to be regretted that more of our citizens did not hear this grand lecture for the general public benefit. Colonel Maus has been a government surgeon in the U. S. Army for over forty years, has been engaged in all kinds of sanitary work for the government and has been stationed in almost every State in the union and in almost every part of the globe where the most dreadful diseases have existed. He advocated the establisment of sanitoriums thruout the State by groups of counties where tuberculosis and other incurable diseases should be isolated. Boone county should do her part in this noble work.

LOCAL BANKERS MEET

To Make Arrangements to Handle County Road Bonds.

On the afternoon of the 29th ult., agreeable to an invitation to the banks to have a meeting at Walton, to be attended by the county judge and the county attorney, to discuss ways and means for the proper handling of the two hundred thousand bond issue of Boone county for road purposes, the invitation was responded to with a praiseworthy public spirit. Judge P. E. Cason of Burlington was elected chairman, and D. B. Wallace secretary. The entire matter was fully discussed, and finally on motion the secretary was ordered to communicate with the banks of Boone county and ask them to ratify a proposition to be submitted to the Fiscal Court of Boone county that the court call for a popular subscription for these road bonds to bear four per cent and to be non-taxable, and to have this popular subscription remain standing for a certain period of time that all of the people of Boone county who desired to take the bonds could do so, and after said popular subscription has been supplied, the banks of Boone county would take all that remained unsubscribed and divide the said bonds among the banks pro rata on the basis of the bank's capital stock and surplus. The bonds will be sold in lots of probably fifty thousand dollars as the county may need the money, as there would be no reason of having the entire issue sold at one time. Fifty thousand dollars will be needed in the beginning but in all probability twenty-five thousand dollar lots would be large enough to meet the requirements after that. The object is to save the county everything possible and this spirit was entered into strongly by all who attended the meeting. There will be very little of this money to go out of the county and it will come back into the banks, so there will be no hardship on any financial circle. There is nothing in the deal for the banks but it is their desire to show the right kind of a spirit in this matter especially for the interest of the county, and that the bonds shall not sell for over four per cent interest bearing. Those who attended the meeting were: County Judge P. E. Cason and County Attorney N. E. Riddell, Rev. E. C Riley, Sheriff W. D. Cropper, representing the banks at Burlington, Robert C. Green, president and cashier, J. D. Mayhugh and Wm. Senour, [illegible] and Prof. C. Cordo, of the Walton Bank and Trust Co. Dr. M. J. Crouch, president of the Union Depoait Bank, J. G. Tomlin, attorney, John L. Vest and D. B. Wallace, cashier of the Equitable Bank and Trust Company. It is believed all of the banks will respond in favor of the proposition as they will not lose anything as the money will not pass to a foreign quarter, and by this action the banks will demonstrate to the tax payers that they have their interests at heart.

Following is a copy of letter sent to all of the banks in Boone county:

Walton, Ky., June 28, 1913.

Gentlemen:

At a meeting of the representatives of various banks in Boone county held at Walton, June 26th, to which you were invited, the matter of handling the $200,000 bond issue for road purposes in Boone county was generally discussed. County Judge P. E. Cason was elected chairman of the meeting, and D. B. Wallace, secretary. The County Attorney, N. E. Riddell, was also present. On motion, and without a dissenting voice, the following resolution was adopted:

That the banks of Boone county request the Fiscal Court of Boone county, Ky., to issue a call for a popular subscription for these bonds to be issued in denominations of one hundred dollars and to bear four per cent interest, payable semi-annually, and to explain that these bonds are non-taxable; that the public will have the right to subscribe for these bonds for a given period, and that all the bonds not taken by the expiration of this time the banks of Boone county will take them on the same terms and conditions and divide the same among said banks, prorata, according to their respective capital stocks and surplus.

The bonds will not all be issued at one time, but it is supposed that the first issue will amount to fifty thousand dollars, and the balance in twenty-five thousand dollar lots as the money is needed. This will save unnecessary payment of interest by the county until the money is needed.

What we want your bank to do is to ratify this agreement before it is presented to the Fiscal Court, so there will be no misunderstanding or failure to do our part when the time arrives. Get your directors together and have them approve this agreement, and then send me a statement to this effect so we can present this to the Fiscal Court. Do this at once as the Fiscal Court meets July 11th and we want to present the matter at that time.

Very Respectfully Yours,

D. B. WALLACE, Secty.

If your bank agrees to the proposition sign the following:

We ratify the above agreement and bind our bank to take our part of the bonds as set forth on said terms and conditions.

A Misunderstanding.

Believing that they had a good pike from Verona to Walton in good condition which cost $1700 per mile, the stockholders of the Walton and Verona Turnpike Co., voted to turn it over to the Fiscal Court by the court expending about $700 per mile in making it four feet wider and resurfacing it. In that meeting all of the Verona stockholders voted in favor of doing this. The Fiscal court did not accept this proposition but offered to spend $500 per mile provided the surplus of about $900 be given the county. The matter was awaiting the meeting of the Fiscal court on the 11th of July for settlement. In the meantime some of the good people of Verona became impatient and refused to pay toll and lashed themselves into a frenzy on the supposition that Walton was trying to put something over on Verona. Now inasmuch as more of the pike is in Verona than in Walton, we are willing to turn the pike over without any contract for its improvement. Verona people use the pike to a much larger extent than we do and have the harder part to keep up because of the grades. It will there fore be perfectly proper and entirely satisfactory to us for the people of Verona to be the judge of how much improving shall be done on that road. Under these circumstances it is not particularly pleasant to have one's motives questioned in private by individuals and in public by a paid advocate as has been done. We thought we were doing the fair thing between the company and the county and between Verona and Walton, but we will accede to Verona's wish (at least I will) to turn the pike over to the county free of cost without any contract. It may not be amiss, however, to say at this time that the free pike system is as yet an experiment in Boone county and some people may be disappointed. Pikes are not going to be built nor maintained without the expenditure of money in larger and larger sums in form of tolls or taxes and some of the loud complainers on this pike will do well to exert their influence to maintain this road in its present condition with a few minor improvements. If the automobile gentry of both Walton and Verona, not one of whom contributed to the building of this pike, will do as much for this road as the stockholders have done, their complains would sound better. In fact when this pike was built, eight years ago, there was not a single auto at Verona or Walton. Welcome the automobile. I not only welcome the free pike but have contended for them for twenty years, but I never have countenanced spoliation in any form. To sum the matter up, the stockholders were willing to give up their pikes and glad to do so but they were not willing to have it forced from them by force.

One of the largest deals in hemp made in Kentucky in many years was closed Monday when E. R. Spears & Sons, Inc., signed a contract with the U. S. Government to furnish it over 100 tons of double-dressed hemp for a sum exceeding $75,000. All the hemp contracted for is now in the hands of the Paris firm and shipment will begin at once. The contending bidders were Winchester firms. It is claimed that this sale will not affect the future price of hemp, as it is said the demand for the coming crop which will be unusually large, will be the greatest in the history of the industry. The yield in Bourbon county alone this season will amount to over 1,200 acres.—Harrodsburg Herald

CANAL UNDER A MOUNTAIN.

France has recently added a remarkable canal to an already wonderful system of inland waterways. The members of the cabinet and other public officials recently formally opened the canal under the mountains between Marseille and the River Rhone. A waterway 75 feet wide and as many high, has been bored through five miles of mountain. The tunnel is said to be the greatest in diameter in existence. It will make possible the passage of barges, light-draft warships and other craft to connect Marseille with the Atlantic. Work on the tunnel and canal has been in progress 12 years and cost 100,000,000 francs. The fact that the project has been pushed to completion while the country is engaged in a great war indicates the financial and economic strength of the nation and the great importance attributed by the people to water highways, says Indianapolis Star. While the new canal will connect the Mediterranean with the Atlantic, it is not the first water route through France. The Bay of Biscay and the Mediterranean are connected by French inland water routes more than 200 years old.

The president of the American Forestry association voices a timely warning against wasting America's timber resources at the moment when other nations are sacrificing vast quantities of timber to the uses of war, says Cleveland Plain Dealer. Americans are proverbially careless of their natural resources, and this word of caution may well be heeded. Modern artillery has blasted great tracts of forest land with its deadly fire. Towns have been destroyed that must be rebuilt after the storm has passed. Great quantities of timber are used in the construction of trenches and temporary shelters. In many directions there has been created an abnormal demand for forest products. To meet the need in part, Great Britain is now denuding some of her famous old woodlands. France has adopted the same measure. In many directions there has been created an abnormal demand for forest products. In normal times the United States imports lumber from Germany and Russia, but war has stopped this process. Yet we continue to send American lumber to Europe. This makes a new tax on America's forestry resources.

What is the biggest port in the world? The answer used to be London; but on the basis of business during 1915 it is New York. According to a statement of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce at Washington, the combined exports and imports at New York in 1915 amounted to $2,125,000,000 — exports, $1,194,000,000; imports, $931,000,000. London's imports were larger, but her exports were much smaller. The aggregate business showed an excess of $200,000,000 in favor of New York.

COLT SHOWS.

Stimulates Interest in the Breeding of Better Horses—Should be Made Important Event at Fairs.

Colt shows are proving great aid in stimulating interest in the breeding of high class horses. Next to community horse breeders' associations and State stallion licenses law there is, perhaps, no other factor that so materially assists in the improvement of the horses of the country. It is only of recent years that impetus has been given to this very important feature in connection with the rapidly growing movement for better horses.

At the present time colt shows are an annual event in many districts in a number of the states, chiefly where stallion license laws are in effect. As an illustration of the popularity of these shows and the keen interest manifested in them by the people of the farming communities, it is reported that in 1915 no less than 25 colt shows were held in the State of Minnesota alone. In some sections these shows are held in the spring, but in a majority of cases the fall of the year is selected. The latter season appears to be preferable for a number of reasons. At that time the heaviest part of the farm work is over; and with time to spare, farmers will take a greater interest in the event and the object for which it is held.

These exhibitions are invarisbly held independent of the county fair, although there is apparently no reason why a show of this kind could not be made an important and outstanding feature of the annual county event.

In some instances these shows were inaugurated with simply one class for grade draft colts and have gradually grown until the classification is almost as complete as that of the State fair. However, such a classification is not possible in most localities, as the large amount of money necessary can not be raised. The best plan and the most beneficial one, perhaps, would be to hold an exhibition of weanlings and yearlings only. If the community or district has a fairly large number of pure bred horses, separate classes could be provided for pure breds and grades.

The question of having classes for both light and heavy horses will depend upon whether sufficient attention is being given to the production of both classes.

In securing the necessary funds to finance such an exhibition as a colt show an umber of different plans have been suggested. In Minnesota one show is financed by the stallion owners, each giving $25.00 in cash prizes, to be divided among the colts sired by his stallion. Another plan is to have the county horse breeders' association or the various farmers' clubs contribute sufficient money to finance the show, while still another scheme is for the local bank or banks to furnish the money for premiums and other expenses.

However, the most popular and common method is to go among the business men of the community and secure subscriptions in sufficient amount to pay all expenses of the show.

All premiums should be designated by neat, but inexpensive ribbons on which are printed the name of the show, the year, and the classes to which they belong.

While the premiums in the individual classes should consist of cash awards, it is suggested that the championship prize consist of a suitable trophy rather than money. This trophy need not necessarily be expensive. It should, however, be something lasting, to which the holder can point with pride. Any breeder would be glad to possess something of this kind, the true value of which is in what it represents.

The securing of competent men to act as judges is an important consideration. This problem probably can be solved comparatively easily by taking up the matter with the animal husbandry division of the State agricultural college or with the stallion registration board. Either of these bodies probably will be willing to cooperate with the local committee and furnish efficient judges for the show.

When once established, it will be found that the annual colt show will do much to bring about an improvement in the quality of the horses raised in the community. These exhibitions, held preferably at the county seat, will afford possible prospective buyers an opportunity to learn something of the class of horses being produced in the locality, and the community will thus be benefitted by the fact, that it will eventually have established itself as a market for horses that will readily sell at good prices.

There is every reason to believe that the practice of holding annual colt shows will become more general. The fact that they have increased considerably in the past few years is evidence that they have not only proved popular but profitable as well.

The movement thru the country today is not for more horses, but rather for better horses. Whatever the future demand may be, the man raising the better class of horses will receive the higher price.

POWER FROM MOLECULES.

Science May Find a Way To Use Unlimited Latent Forces.

Thomas A. Edison said recently that we are on the verge of great discoveries that will put all our present power and light plants into the discard. Enough is known of what Edison and other chemists and men of science are after to give us a hint of what may be coming.

Every one knows that our present methods of generating power and light are too wasteful and expensive. There is tremendous waste in digging coal from the earth, hauling it many miles and burning it beneath a boiler to turn water into steam. Scientists tell us that wonderful as steam has been in the development of power and all that has followed upon its use, yet the time will come when sources of power will be discovered so much more efficient than steam that humanity of the future will look back upon the age of steam as we look back now upon the age of the hand-rowed galley and the caravan.

At a recent meeting of the Society of Automobile Engineers, C. F. Kettering gave his associates some hint of what was just over the rim of the horizon in this field of laboratory research after better and cheaper sources of power. In Nature, there are no dead, unmoving solids. A piece of steel or granite is composed of molecules, not at rest, but moving and revolving about each other, and all held together by a cohesive force so closely that to use it seems a solid substance. Now, suppose we could find some way of harnessing the power latent in those molecules—some way of coupling it up to our motor cars and machinery. Suppose we could find means to let loose the energy which binds together the molecules of a piece of steel or a block of stone. Try to break or pull apart a piece of tough steel with a strength of many thousands of pounds per square inch, and one gets an idea of the latent power there. And Mr. Kettering says it is theoretically possible to release this cohesive force and utilize it and that it will furnish an inexhaustible source of power. As an example, the molecular forces holding together a grain of corn would provide over 2,000 horse power for 24 hours if we could find means for letting these hidden molecular forces loose.

The farmer of the future, about to plow a forty acre field will drop a grain of corn in the "molecular disintegrater" of his traction machine and go to it. The city man instead of filling his tank with gasoline will chuck in a grain of corn and get power enough to ride all day.

Well, if radium was unknown today and a person should tell how he had a little pin point particle of stuff that continually threw off atoms of itself with such incredible velocity that their bombardment caused the warming of the surrounding container, and that there was so much of this energy in the tiny piece of radium that it would keep on doing this for centuries [illegible] appreciable finish, the world would shake its head and say:

"Poor Bill, he has studied over them contraptions in his lab'tory till he's got teched in the head."

The white clover crop in its density, while destructive to many cattle, was a great boon to the bees, the busy little fellows making the finest honey made by them in several years, which is as clear as crystal and of superior sweetness. The honey crop of Robertson will realize hundreds of dollars to our bee men, of whom there are now a large number in the county.

INSECTS THAT PREY ON THE APPLE TREE.

There 176 Different Varieties Capable of Making Them Entirely Fruitless.

It's almost a miracle that we have any apples at all, for there are 176 different varieties of insects which attack apple trees and are capable of making them fruitless. To fight this horde of pests the apple producing states spend as much as $3,000,000 a year for spraying trees, remarks Philadelphia Inquirer.

Scientists now say, however, that it would be much better if fruit growers spent less money in covering their trees with poison and did more to encourage birds to make their homes in the orchards. Birds devour almost every kind of insect which threatens fruit, and enough birds will accomplish wonders in freeing orchards from this danger.

Farmers often object to birds because they eat so much fruit. There are, however, numerous ways in which the amount of fruit birds destroy can be made trivial compared with the number of insects they eat.

Robins, for instance, are extremely fond of cherries. But they will leave the cherry trees quite neglected if one or two trees of Russian mulberries, which ripen at the same time as cherries, are placed within reach.

Other things which will retain the robin's useful services as a forager without any serious loss of valuable fruit are chokeberries, holly, elder, sour gum, shadeberries, wild cherries, wild grapes, greenbrier and smilax.

The planting of some such trees and shrubs in the vicinity of orchards serves a double purpose. It furnishes food for the birds and make them more inclined to make their homes in the orchards. One reason why birds often avoid orchards is because the shrubbery has been cut away and they can find no suitable nesting places.

Beginning the New Fiscal Year.

The corporation, the financial institutions, including the savings banks of the United States, have just closed a semiannual period which has surely brought the great majority of them record-breaking prosperity.

They have been prosperous during this period because the great masses of the population of this country have been prosperous and their prosperity, in most instances, has not been achieved at the cost or at the expense of those masses of the population.

The relations of the public and these corporations and these financial institutions have been much more amicable during the past fiscal year than in prior periods of our national history, and the beneficial effects of these more friendly relations are seen in the households of the people as well as exhibited upon the profit and loss accounts of the corporations and the banks.

However much Republicans may now regret their own 30 years' failure to revise and improve the then existing financial system of this country, they must concede to the Democratic party the credit of the admirable system of Federal finance which is now exerting such a benign and beneficent influence upon the domestic and foreign commerce of this country.

The Federal reserve banking system may not be perfect—nay, we may say that reforms could be made that would still further advance the interests of the majority of the people of the United States—yet it has proved itself so far superior to that which two Democratic and six Republican Administrations maintained that not a majority of the voters in any state in the Union would support those who would favor its overthrow.

It was exceedingly fortunate for our country that this Federal Bank legislation was operative at the beginning of the European war, else moratoriums would have been as fashionable among the banks and business men of the United States as they have become in European countries. It has been the Federal reserve banking system that has made possible the extension and expansion of our industries and enabled the country to transact such a colossal foreign trade without strain or tension. It has been the Federal reserve banking system that has enabled this country to absorb the billion or more of American securities which Europe has disposed of here, and which absorption has done more than many other thing to change this country from a debtor nation to the position of a creditor nation.

During the present fiscal year the Federal reserve banking system and the rural credit system will combine to make this fiscal year a red letter one in the records of American business. They will unite to vastly increase the prosperity of the masses of the people.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Louisville, July 6.—Captain J. B. Graves, of Woodburn, Warren co., committed suicide by shooting himself through the temple. Captain Graves was one of the oldest residents of the county. His act is believed to have been prompted by the news of the death of his sister, Mrs. A. E. Layman, as he had just finished reading an account of it.

NEITHER LIFE NOR DEATH

Marvelous Results of Experiments in Suspended Animation Made Upon Worms and Microbes.

One of the most extraordinary manifestations of life is a condition quite common among the lower animals and known as anabiosis or suspended animation. The creature is to all appearance dead. The most refined means of observation cannot detect a sign of life. The blood has ceased to flow. The nerves no longer respond to any stimulation. There is neither respiration, elimination nor sensation. This state may last a long time, but given the proper conditions the creatures will come to life again.

The lower we go in the scale of life the more pronounced in this state of neither life nor death.

Some remarkable experiments recently conducted by E. Shuitz and A. Singol of Petrograd are described by the Berlin correspondent of the Scientific American. The experimenters dried roundworms till they were as thin as paper strips, then cut them into thin slices. When placed in water the tissues swelled to their normal proportions and the pieces of worm resumed their life just as do those of any worm that is cut up.

They took some threadworms, rotifers and microbes, dried them thoroughly, kept them thus for eight months, then locked them in an airtight box through which a current of pure hydrogen flowed for two weeks. Thus they were not only dried but effectually deprived of oxygen. Yet on being moistened they "came to life again" quickly. Strangest of all, those that had been locked in the hydrogen chamber revived in 15 minutes, while those that had merely been dried needed 40 minutes.

START FIGHT ON MOSQUITO

Small, Troublesome Insect Must Be Recognized as Deadly Enemy of the Human Race.

Malaria is said to have hastened the downfall of Rome. The mosquitoes which transmitted it were more deadly to the inhabitants of the imperial city than their barbarian enemies. Much has also been written of similar injury to Greece in earlier times.

At least two diseases are carried by certain species of mosquitoes—malaria and yellow fever. All species are disagreeable pests that often make nature's most attractive spots untenantable.

Have you unwittingly permitted mosquitoes to breed about your house or grounds? Even one old tomato can half filled by the spring rains makes an ideal breeding ground. It is surprising how many hidden pools one can find around a place if you really go on a hunt. Not infrequently drain pipes become clogged, and then the roofs and gutters afford an unsuspected breeding place for thousands of mosquitoes.

Communities that suffer from these pests should co-operate to campaign effectively against them. Even the smallest adjacent pools should be filled up or ditched and drained. If these are too large to be filled they should be treated with petroleum. This floats atop the water and kills the mosquito larvae by shutting off the atmosphere. When the wind causes a movement of the water which breaks up the oil coating it must be reoiled. Swamps can be similarly treated.

A survey should be made of all premises. Rainwater barrels should be covered. Tin cans or discarded vessels on rubbish piles should be perforated, smashed flat, or buried.

Family Inherit Oddly Slit Eyes.

H. P. Stuckey, horticulturist of the Georgia experiment station, reports to the Journal of Heredity his discovery in the mountains of northeastern Georgia of a family that is marked by a strange hereditary trait. This is eyelids narrowed to a small slit. The eyes are normal and the sight good, but the persons with this trait have difficulty in getting clear vision unless they throw back their heads or turn them to one side.

The great-grandfather had the restricted eyelids. His son also had the trait well marked. The latter married a normal woman, and they became parents of nine children, six of whom had the slit-eyes, while three were normal. Among the children with the affected eyes were both boys and girls. One of these children married a normal woman, and they have four children, three boys with slit-eyes and a normal girl.

The Needful.

"What's the use of all of these here ologies and folderols?" demanded the old man as he looked over the list of subjects his son had been studying at college. "Why don't they learn you somethin' useful—somethin' you can make money out of?"

"Money isn't the only thing in the world, father," said the young man reprovingly.

"Mebbe it ain't, son. Mebbe it ain't. But I notice it's the only thing you ever asked for in the letters you wrote to me and your ma while you was in college."

Shea Tree Cuts Butter Cost.

One shea tree beside each man's back porch would cut a big slice of butter off the monthly food bill. In Africa vegetable butter is made from the fruit of this tree, and it is said to be of richer taste than any butter made from cows' milk—added or actually scraped from a churn and squeezed into the wooden mold which leaves a yellow rosebud on top of the cake. The Arabs used it in early times, but the Greeks and Romans did without it, used oil, and consequently wore purple silk togas.

To Be Taken Literally.

The curtain had dropped on the first act of the amateur play. "Ladies and gentlemen," said the youthful stage manager, stepping to the front of the stage, "you will observe that the program says that there is an interval of two years between the first and second acts. This will be fully carried out. The leading lady has just swallowed the powder puff under the impression that it was a marshmallow, and I think it will be about that time before she will be able to go on."

Riches in Honduras.

Honduras is a rich country and its resources remain in almost a virgin condition. It possesses a climate that varies with its topography, the temperature on the coasts being hot, in the lowlands of the interior it is warm, and in the mountains it is temperate and in some places cold. Its mountains abound in minerals, and its tablelands and valleys are especially adapted for raising cattle and for agriculture.

"West Not New."

It will never do to talk about the "new" West. Dr. Charles D. Walcott says that near Helena, Mont., are found the oldest animal remains now known, and also the oldest authentic vegetable remains. Some years ago he discovered the remains of crablike animals, suggesting in form fresh water crabs found the world over.

Prevention for Preventers.

There are now in existence so many societies for the prevention of so many different things, and so many more being formed all the time for the prevention of other things, that it would be a good idea to inaugurate a few societies for the prevention of societies for the prevention of things.

At the End of Forty-Eight Hours.

"Papa certainly didn't manage this European trip very well. He said we'd be in Rome two days, but he made a mistake and it's three—and now we've seen everything, and there's absolutely nothing to do for a whole day."—Lippincott's.

Misfit.

Ad in a New York paper: "Wanted—Bookkeeper and salesman. Must have one leg shorter than the other." We were about to telephone this opportunity to a friend, when we suddenly remembered that what he had was one leg longer than the other.

Importation of Birds.

The department of agriculture issues about 500 permits annually for the importation of birds; the number of birds imported amounts to about 500,000, and as many as 17,000 birds arrive in a single day.

Why They Succeed.

Perhaps you think that a lot of successful men won success because they had nerve, whereas their success probably is due more to good, hard work while you were standing on the street corner arguing politics or religion.—Atchison Globe.

No Hurry at All.

"Your wife has a muscular affection which renders her speechless. I can cure her, but it will take time." "Take all the time you want, doc," responded the mean man.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Provides for Pure Air.

Only filtered air is permitted to enter a large German electric plant, which protects its machinery from dust with cloth screens.

Worth Thinking About.

But if a man turned over a new leaf every time his wife wanted him to he would have but little time left in which to earn the price of her bonnets.

Sawed-Off Sermon.

It might be a good idea for some people to hold their tongues occasionally and give their thoughts a chance to catch up.

Optimistic Thought.

There is a thousand times more goodness, wisdom and love in the world than men imagine.

Destroying Optimism.

Some of us try so hard to be optimistic that the nervous strain makes us irritable.

Arrangements are being made to nicely entertain the visiting brothers with a lunch and other attractive features, and a most cordial invitation is extended to all of the members of neighboring lodges.

Chas. C. Carroll and John D White have returned from Fort Adkinson, Wisconsin, where they purchased thirty Holstein cattle of the best grades that could be found there, and as Wisconsin is the leading State in the Holstein industry these cattle have about as good blood as can be found anywhere. W. H Metcalfe had two cows in the lot whose records are respectively, seven and eight gallons per day. In the shipment were also three young bulls, registered and from a record producing strain, and these are offered for sale at reasonable prices. Kenton county is fast coming to the front as a dairy county, and is improving the stock rapidly. The county has the honor of having the second best producing cow in the State whose official record for the last year was about twenty thousand lbs., of milk, the cow being owned by M. M. Lucas of Bank Lick

Early on the morning of the 4th a party of five in an auto going toward Cincinnati, with all intents and purposes to beat the time of the fastest train on the Q. & C. railroad, when near the toll-gate north of Walton, were unable to make the turn to cross the bridge without upsetting the machine, the bend in the road being very abrupt at that point, and therefore went straight thru the fence breaking off fence posts like pipe stems. Fortunately the machine did not upset nor was any of the party seriously injured, Dr. B. K Menefee patching up their bruises and scratches, and they were soon able to resume their journey. Over 50 per cent of the casualties pertaining to the running of automobiles is caused by the high rate of speed with which so many thoughtless people run their machines, and the attention of the Walton officers has been called to the practice of the numerous autos passing through town to the disregard of all thought of human safety much less the respect of the law, and they have promised to prosecute the offenders of the speed limit in the future, and where the parties are intoxicated to insist on the judgment that is rendered by the Louisville judge in such cases; jail sentence every time. This will soon break up the high speeders and cool off some of the drunks operating automobiles and who by the way should never be permitted to run a machine. Make these people have a regard for the public safety.

The enterprising and public spirited citizens of the Brachi neighborhood have a Farmers' Club that is one of the most up-to-date business clubs to be found in an agricultural community, and the members have had regular monthly meetings on the first Saturday in the month co-operative principles and matters to the general interest of the members are discussed and acted upon. The gentlemen and ladies attend, and the young ladies and young gentlemen, and boys and girls are always on hand and take great interest in all of the proceedings, and the department is such that there is never any occasion to make any criticism, perfect order being observed. The meeting last Saturday night was very largely attended, the house being filled to its capacity. John G. Adams, the president, called the meeting to order and made a nice talk to the members, and then introduced D. B. Wallace who made an address of a general nature and particularly "The Relation of the Banker to the Farmer" showing how each depended on the other. Judge J. G. Tomiln followed with a very entertaining address, and Jno. L. Vest made a brief speech, promising to come back again and make an extended address. Dr. R. S. Crisler of Burlington, who is an attache of the State Agricultural Department at Lexington, delivered a lecture on "Hog Cholera," illustrating it with stereopticon views and it was very interesting and instructive. The meeting was a great success as is every meeting held by the club. It has been a money making and a money saving institution for the members, who by the way are showing results on their farms and general welfare. More cream and milk is shipped from Bracht than from any other station on the Q. & C. Railroad.

Walton Lodge I. O. O. F. elected and installed officers as follows for the ensuing term: Noble Grand—Bruce Dudgeon; Vice-Grand—W. F. Dudgeon; Secretary—S W. Bevarly; Treasurer—Henry C. Diers; Warden and Host—C. W. Moxley; Right Supporter Noble Grand—N.T. Walsh; Left Supporter—D. B. Wallace; Conductor—J. G. Pennington; Right Scene Supporter—A. M. Edwards; Left Scene Supporter—Flinell Peak; Right Supporter Vice-Grand—A. H. Smith; Left Supporter Vice-Grand—John Allen; Inside Guardian—E. W. McElroy; Outside Guardian—Walter Robinson; Chaplain—J. M. Bowlington. The lodge is in fine working condition.

Looking to Peace.

Early resumption of friendly diplomatic relations with the de facto government of Mexico to the end that peace and order may be restored in Northern Mexico and along the border is expected to be the next step of the United States in relations with its southern neighbor.

The crisis precipated by Villa's raid in Columbus, N. M., and culminating in the fight at Carrizal, Mexico, between American and Mexican troops, appeared Wednesday night to have been dissipated by an amicable note from General Carranza presented during the day by his ambassador in Washington.

The note proposes that the differences between the governments be settled by mediation or by direct negotiations. It is remarkable for its brevity, its restrained and friendly tone and for the absolute lack of any of the strong, even insolent language which characterized the last two communications from the de facto government. It treats as a closed incident the exchange of unfriendly communications which brought war almost within sight.

THE COUNTY ROAD ENGINEER

Finds a Pistol Instead of Stakes That Mark the Route of the Proposed Union and Frogtown Turnpike Road.

The Pistol's Owner Draws a Fine.

Last Wednesday morning about 9 o'clock County Road Engineer C. W. Goodridge very unexpectedly found himself looking into the business end of a pistol. Mr. Goodridge, Mr. Arnold, the State Roadman and Walter Brown, went to Richwood to look over the route that had been engineered and staked off for the proposed pike leading from the town of Union to the Covington and Lexington pike near Richwood. Mr. Goodridge was locating the stakes and had gone upon the land of John Darrow and sister, when unexpectedly he was confronted by Mr. Darrow, who drew a pistol on the engineer and ordered him to get off of his land. The engineer was disposed to discuss the matter with Darrow but he was soon satisfied that his withdrawal was the only way to avoid what seemed to be impending danger of a very serious nature, consequently he retired to the public highway only a few yards distant. When Mr. Goodridge returned home in the evening he swore out a warrant for the arrest of Darrow on the charge of pointing a deadly weapon at another person. Thursday the sheriff served the warrant and the trial was set for Friday. At the trial Friday, Darrow was represented by Attorney John O'Neal, when the charge was reduced to a breach of the peace and Darrow fined $10 to which trimmings to the amount of $4.75 were added, making the fine and costs amount to $14.75. Darrow maintained that he did not point the pistol at Mr. Goodridge, but admitted he had a pistol in his hand.

Col. T. B Robinson showed a Messenger reporter a home-made rocking chair which, is indeed, a wonderful piece of workmanship. It was made by W. E. Naylor, of Garrard county, who is nine-three years of age. Mr. Naylor was six months completing the job and it is perfect in detail. The main body, or posts, are made of bent hickory, the other portions being likewise constructed of substantial material. The design is very unique and the chair makes a beautiful piece of furniture. Col. Robinson is a great friend of "Uncle Billy" and prizes the present very highly.—Danville Messenger.

In the Government's crop report for June there is for the first time an official estimate of the new crop of wheat. Another billion crop—last year's was 1,011,505,000 bushels—could not reasonably have been expected, for the enormous yield in 1915, exceeded the greatest of preceding crops by 120,000,000 bushels, and the average for eight years by 300,000,000. But it is disappointing to learn that only 715,000,000 are promised this year. There, is, and will be for some time to come, an exceptionally good market for all the wheat that can be spared by this country.

RAISING TURKEYS IS MOST PROFITABLE

Breeding Flock of Bronze Turkeys o n Range.

(By PROF. H. L. KEMPSTER, University of Missouri, College of Agriculture.)

The hen is an economical transformer of food into a finished product. A hen laying 200 eggs in a year is not at all unusual. A four-pound hen laying this number will produce six times her weight in eggs. To do this she will require from seventy to eighty pounds of food. For economical production it is necessary:

1. That the food be properly selected.

2. That it be fed in correct proportion and in a judicious manner in order that her digestive organs may be kept in good condition.

3. That she be fed enough so that she has plenty of surplus for egg production.

Food is taken into the body to furnish energy and to build up tissue. In feeding for egg production the purposes for which food is supplied are:

1. To supply the body needs.

2. To produce eggs.

The problems of poultry feeding require good judgment and keen observation. Hens fed for egg production should have food high in the food elements which are found in eggs. Those fed in the fattening pens should have the foods which most economically produce fat. The best ration, then, is the one which supplies most economically the food requirements of the bird for the purpose for which it is kept.

It should be remembered that one of the principles of poultry feeding is that the hen cannot do well if fed on a whole grain ration. Not only does a ration of grain fail to furnish the proper food nutrients, but such a ration is difficult for the bird to digest properly. The great fault with the farmer in his poultry feeding is that he attempts to feed a whole grain ration, and generally only one grain at that. Such a ration results in poor egg production, and also causes digestive disorders, liver and kidney troubles. Complaints of this kind frequently come to the department of poultry husbandry and a suggested change in the ration has usually resulted in the elimination of the trouble. Efficient digestion demands a combination of whole and ground grains. A ration should consist of grains and ground feeds. Generally speaking, twice as much grain should be consumed as ground feed. This depends, of course, upon the nature of the foods fed. Whole and cracked grains are designated by poultry feeders as scratch foods. Combinations of ground feeds either wet or dry are called mashes.

Adaptability of Feed Stuffs.

Wheat is probably the most popular poultry food. It is a safe food, greatly relished by the fowls; it runs high in its protein content; and it has a large amount of ash. Shrunken wheat can be fed to advantage and can often be obtained cheaply. Wheat screenings, if of good quality, can be used. Salvage wheat is often found on the market. It should be used with caution. Grain burned by fire makes satisfactory poultry food; there is, however, a large amount of salvage grain that was never in an elevator fire. The wheat has spoiled by molding, and has been charred so as to hide this fact. Moldy grains of any kind should never be fed. The molds not only set up digestive disorders, but cause a certain disease of the lungs.

Bran is a by-product of wheat. It should always form an important part in any poultry ration. Bran is high in ash content, and also renders the mash ration of such consistency that digestive disorders are not so likely to arise. This is the chief value of bran as a poultry food. Only a small portion of it is digested by chickens, so that for the most part alone it would be an [illegible] are lower in protein content and higher in starch content than bran, but because of the relative cheapness should be used. A mash too high in middlings is pasty, and when used, middlings should be mixed with other foods so as to be easily handled by the digestive tract.

Corn should form a large portion of the ration. It is liked by the fowls. Because of its high starch and fat content, it is fattening. It should be fed in combination with other grains. Cracked corn is in a form more easily assimilated than whole corn, and better results will come with the use of it. Feeding immature or green corn in the fall often results in digestive troubles.

Cornmeal should be present in all rations. It may be used in the mash, but should be mixed with other feeds so as to lessen the liability of crop impaction. One danger in handling cornmeal is its liability of heating or fermenting in storage. Sour or moldy feed should never be fed. A good practice is to mix the cornmeal with bran in proportions desired, and store mixed rather than attempt to store separately. One of the reasons why cornbread is better than cornmeal as a chick food is that baking destroys the ferments or molds.

Oats can be used successfully in the ration. When fed whole they should be fed in limited quantities, not more than one-third of the grain ration, because of the high percentage of hull. Chickens are able to digest but very little crude fiber, and for this reason one must limit the amount of foods with hulls, such as buckwheat, oats, sunflower seed, etc. The ration should not have more than 3½ to 4 per cent of crude fiber. Ground oats make an excellent mash for chickens, while pinhead or steel-cut oats make excellent chick feed, as do rolled oats.

The hen requires some food high in protein. All our grain foods so far considered do not furnish enough protein. It is necessary, then, to supply something which will balance the ration, or equalize the relation between the proteins and the carbohydrates and fats. Of the vegetable protein foods, oil meal is perhaps the most popular. It is high in protein, containing 30 per cent, and makes a valuable addition to the mash during the moulting season. It should never form more than one-fifteenth of the ration. Cottonseed meal is not considered as palatable and it is slightly constipating. If fed, it should be in very small quantities. Gluten meal is also used for the same purpose and is greatly relished.

Meat foods are considered essential for efficient egg production. In fact, it is poor economy not to feed meat food of some kind. Increased returns from feeding it more than make up for the expense. Beef scrap is perhaps the most common meat food. This is a commercial product which comes in ground form, will keep indefinitely, and can be mixed in the mash. Beef scrap runs very high in protein and in addition contains ash, which is beneficial. It is a useless expense to feed too much. One-twelfth beef scrap in the ration is as much as necessary, provided no other food unusually high in protein is fed. If oil meal, gluten meal, etc., are fed, this proportion can be reduced. At the Missouri agricultural experiment station a pen of 25 Leghorns was fed beef scrap and produced 869 more eggs from November 1, 1914, to July 1, 1915, than a corresponding pen which was fed the same ration but without the beef scrap. The two pens ate practically the same amount of food, so that $2.10 worth of beef scrap produced 869 more eggs.

Green cut bone is popular as a meat food. It is greatly relished by hens. The preparation of it is laborious unless one has a power cutter. It must be fed almost as soon as prepared, for it spoils very quickly in warm weather. A small amount daily increases materially the egg production. When one meat food is fed there is no need of supplying others.

Tankage is not so satisfactory because the hens do not like it so well. Fresh fish, infertile eggs, table scraps, etc., can also be used in the supply of animal food.

For farmers the use of sour skimmed milk or buttermilk is urged. At the Missouri agricultural experiment station it was shown that by the use of sour milk the cost of producing eggs was reduced ten cent a dozen. A pen of 25 Leghorns which was fed milk produced in eight months 850 more eggs than another pen fed the same ration, but without sour milk. At the rate of 20 cents per 100 pounds for milk, $2.50 worth of milk produced 350 more eggs. The pen consumed 100 pounds less feed during that time. Sour milk is better than sweet milk. In feeding milk one should keep the pails or pans clean. When milk is fed it is unnecessary to feed beef scrap or green cut bone.

ONLY NEED MAKE UP MIND

"Where There's a Will There's a Way" Is True When It Comes to Owning a Home.

When a city is crowded by increasing population and when property valuations and taxation rates are rising, rents advance, not gradually, not always proportionately to either demand or to increasing expenses of the landlord, comments the Detroit Free Press. Presently the renter finds himself paying a sum in monthly rent entirely disproportionate to his total income. Usually this brings a domestic financial stringency, all the more felt when necessaries in food and clothing are also advancing in price.

The renter in such circumstances finds himself on a three-pronged dilemma: He can go on paying high rents and expenses, thus using up his income and failing to lay anything for emergencies, sickness or old age. Or he can buy a home on the popular contract plan if he possesses enough in savings to make the first payment of 10 or 20 per cent of the purchase price. Or he can buy a cheap lot far out and begin building his home piecemeal, a room or two at a time.

Most persons prefer to buy the ready-made home. Building one's own home is labor and tribulation and expenses, seen and unforeseen. And modern folk are content to avoid tribulation by as wide a margin as may be possible. But the person without available funds to make a first payment of 10 or 20 per cent must be content to see income consumed by outgo or turn to the task of creating a home a bit at a time.

And this can be done. It is being done. Success is more frequent than failure in these attempts, too. The man without a nest-egg of money can get a lot, can build a kitchen, then a bedroom, then another room, until he at last possesses a home of his own if he will endure hardships with patience, if he will arouse the spirit slumbering within, the spirit which led his forefathers to wilderness conquests. "Where there's a will there's a way"—even though it sometimes is a way beset with thorns. And he who conquers hardships has something real on which to congratulate himself.

TOUCHED HEARTS OF SEAMEN

Sailor Tells of Deep Regret Felt When German Cruisers Were Forced to Sink a Ship.

Mucke's account of the manner of sinking a prize is exceedingly graphic, with all its Teutonic exactness. "It is a queer feeling for a seaman to see a ship sinking, and we who were used to helping each ship in need were always touched by it. The destroying was usually done in this way: We went down to the engine room and removed the covers of pipes leading outside. In rushed the water in jets as high as a man. The water-tight door of the boiler room was then opened, to allow that compartment to be flooded. If there was cause for haste, other holes were opened by explosives. For a time the ship would rock back and forth as if it did not know exactly how to behave. Always deeper and deeper it sank, until the upper deck touched the water.

"Then it acted like a body taking its last breath. The bow went down first, the masts struck the water and the screws were raised in the air. The funnels blew out the last smoke and coal dust; for an instant the ship stood on end, and then shot down to the depths like a heavy stone. After half a minute greetings from the depths would begin to arrive. Long pieces of wood came up vertically, like an arrow, jumping several yards in the air. In the end the place where the ship sank was marked by a large oil spot and a few smashed boats, beams, life preservers and the like. Then it was time for the Emden to make for the next masttop."—Lewis R. Freeman, in the Atlantic.

Burning Gas Through Ice.

An interesting scene was witnessed on a skating lake near a western city. White spots resembling air bubbles were noticed in the ice, and one of the skaters bored a hole into such a bubble and applied a match to it, whereupon a flame burst out at the surface.

Further experiments showed that when a small hole was bored down to the bubble a long, thin jet of flame could be obtained, which would last for a considerable time. The bubbles were due to accumulations of marsh gas, formed by the decomposition of vegetable matter at the bottom of the lake.

Great Britain and France have spent more than a million dollars for 18,000,000 feet of spruce wood from Washington and Oregon for making aeroplanes, according to Robert B. Allen of the West Coast Lumbermen's association in an address to the students in journalism at the University of Washington.

If you rise superior to your disappointments, whatever they may be, you are adding 100 per cent to your power to conquer future difficulties.

The sure way to catch success is to catch the opportunity.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

When preparing cranberry sauce try this combination, to be served when cranberries are out of season. Add a cupful of seeded raisins to a quart of cranberries that have been cooked and rubbed through a sieve. Cook five minutes after adding the raisins, then turn into a mold and chill.

Graham Cookies.—Take a beaten egg, add a cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of butter, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, one cupful of sour milk, or buttermilk, one teaspoonful of soda, two cupfuls of graham flour and a cupful of chopped raisins. Drop on a greased pan and bake in a moderate oven.

Maple Walnut Dessert. — Dissolve one package of peach or orange gelatin in half a pint of boiling water. Add a half pint (one cupful) of maple sirup and when nearly cold a cupful of walnut meats, cut rather fine. Set away to harden and serve with whipped cream.

Berlin Cabbage.—Slice red cabbage very thin; let stand an hour in cold water to crisp. Drain and put into a saucepan, using two tablespoonfuls of butter, a half teaspoonful of salt and one tablespoonful of chopped onion, a grating of nutmeg and a dash of pepper for each quart of cabbage. Cook until the cabbage is tender, then add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, half a tablespoonful of sugar; cook five minutes and it is ready to serve.

Amber Marmalade.—Now is the time to prepare this delicious concoction. Cut in thin slices one grapefruit, orange, and lemon, cover with twelve cupfuls of cold water, let stand over night. Cook until the peel is very tender, four or five hours, let stand again over night, then add ten cupfuls of sugar and cook until thick.

Curried Eggs.—Melt two tablespoonfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful of curry powder, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of paprika, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, when mixed add a cupful of rich milk and when well blended add three hard-cooked eggs cut in eighths lengthwise. Reheat in the sauce.

Carlisle, July 6.—All of the cedars are fast being cut from the famous battle field at Blue Lick, in this county. A purchase of 2,000 of the cedars for poles has just been made by a Louisville telephone company.

Bowling Green, July 6.—Bose Graves, 75 years old, ended his life at Woodburn, near here today by shooting himself when seated in front of the postoffice. Despondency over long illness is said to have been the cause.

Carlise, July 6.—Guy Linville, of Carlise, under indictment for murder, escaped from this city during the night. He was charged with having killed his wife. He attempted suicide and his serious condition necessitated leaving him in his room.

Lexington, July 6.—R. A McDowell, of Louisville, this morning succeeded former Governor Jas. B. McCreary, resigned, as President of the Kentucky Rural Credit Association. The new president stated that the suit for a receiver filed a few days ago by T. W. Henderson, of Tennessee, can not be maintained in the face of the financial showing which the Association is able to make.

Some of the tobacco growers of Madison and Shelby counties have reported a small worm working on their tobacco. It seems to enter the stalk of the plant just beneath the surface of the ground and work upwards, eating the entire center away, which causes the plant to die slowly, and one hardly notices their presence until after the plant has withered.

Filled With Memories.

The tourist through the little Boone county town of Florence sees today what he could have seen 50 years ago—the same buildings, few in number, grace the single-street community. A possible few new structures, built back in the '70's and '80's, alone, mar reminiscences of the old-timer, who goes back to boyhood scenes and looks for what his youthful eye saw.

The blacksmith shop is there, unchanged. The general store, with a department devoted to Government business, and the dwellings—all abutting Banklick-st, as John Uri Lloyd branded the thoroughfare—greet the home-comer. The Methodist church, where fathers of many Covington merchants attended, occupies a conspicuous spot in the corporate limits as in days gone.

But there is a stove in the edifice now. Thomas Rouse, uncle of Congressman Arthur B. Rouse, of Burlington, sat thru many a sermon with near-frozen feet, while the minister was obliged to exercise to facilitate speech. Too, sermons in 1808 were of greater duration than at present, the oldest resident says.

Then, the old Herndon House, the pride of a country of wide radius, is commencing to become a matter of history as being razed. Here, battles of the War have been won and lost many times since the end of the strife, in September, 1865. Later about 1870, the structure was devoted to the dry goods business of Crigler & Swetnam, and today stands on "half a leg," changing the memorable caste of a noteworthy, yet little known town.

George Washington commissioned John Filson to draw a map of Kentucky, which was then a county of Virginia. A few years later Filson was asked to establish and lay out a town opposite the mouth of the Licking river. This commission was given by the John Cleves Simms Land Syndicate, owners of practically the entirety of Northern Kentucky and Southern Ohio during the late eighteenth century.

Filson, with a marvelous drawing of the "county," and a concise chart of a city where Cincinnati now stands, settled—then alomst immediately settlers started coming to the center of things, For Losantiville, as the spot was named, became an attraction to residents of the Cumberland Gap region and along the upper Ohio River.

Those coming from the Tennessee line were unlike those who trudged the plains and the hills from Virginia toward the Mecca; they followed the crest of the mountain, which tapers down and down until the foothills are but within eyesight south of Covington. These very backhills, John Uri Lloyd says, are really the low descent of the Cumberland Mountains.

So these people who followed the crest route came upon the present site of Florence and there settled.

History points to the conclusion that these first settlers did not perpetuate their families at this location, since the oldest resident does not link his relationship with any of the little band who came from the southern part of the "county" and Tennessee.

From best knowledge it cannot be learned that any but temporary dwellings were erected by the pioneers, altho some of the buildings now standing there are ringed with an age of three-quarters of a century.

Homes of sturdy construction on a single street or "way" took their places until several graced "Banklick-st.," as called by Lloyd in his immortalizing "Stringtown-on-the-Pike."

Why "Florence?" This was a question uppermost in the mind of Lloyd during the writing of his novel and a matter he discarded as unanswerable. Might the town have been named for some fair one—a daughter or perhaps a mother or a sweetheart of a first settler?

And today Florence continues with her handful of people, knowing not why she is so named, but forever to exist in a state of immortalization because an author chose to find his boyhood home worthy of characterization and called the loved spot "Stringtown."—Kentucky Post.

Storm's Damage.

New Orleans, July 8.—At least seven persons have lost their lives and property has been damaged to the extent of more than four million dollars, according to the reports today from the storm swept regions of Alabama and Mississippi. Crops and timber suffered heavily.

Rains that assumed proportions cloudbursts followed the tropical hurricane in Alabama, causing serious flood conditions at Prattville and Birmingham, where the creeks overflowed their banks and invaded stores and factories.

The death list consists of one white man and six negroes.

[illegible] County.

The large number of automobiles parked at the Chautauqua grounds at each meeting would indicate prosperous times in this section.

The large motor car on the C. & W. railroad jumped the track at the Barker curve Saturday, but Stanley Jameson, the motorman, was the only one injured, a large trunk falling upon him.

We cannot recall another season when tobacco grew more rapidly. Plants set three weeks ago have leaves so large as a dry goods box. But don't make the box too large, as the leaves are only 6x16 inches.—Carrollton News.

ANIMAL FOOD FOR CHICKENS.

Sour Milk Exerts Beneficial Influence on Digestion of Young Fowls, Account of Its Acid.

The best animal food for chicks is sour milk. On account of the acid it contains sour milk exerts a beneficial influence on the digestion of the chick. Sour milk can safely be kept before the chicks all the time. Milk should always be supplied in fountains that will not permit the chick to get its down wet. A chick stuck up with milk is a sorry sight. Vessels in which milk is supplied should be scalded and aired daily.

Some poultrymen still practice and advocate the feeding of eggs tested out of incubators to baby chicks. A hard boiled egg, when of known quality, makes a rather indigestible food for the chick's tender organs, but when eggs are fed that come from an incubator that has subjected them to a temperature of 103 degrees for a week, one is courting danger. Not all eggs that are tested out of incubators are infertile.

If you feed tested-out eggs to baby chicks be quite certain that they are infertile. Eggs containing blood spots or red streaks should be discarded, as they were fertile and the germs are in a state decomposition. The infertile egg, when held before a strong light, is perfectly clear.

Mexico and the Yaquis.

Allowing for exaggeration it seems probable that the "Broncho Yaquis" massacred a considerable number of Carranza soldiers and camp followers in Lower Sonora.

The frequency of Indian outbreaks in Mexico and the gravity of results serve to illustrate the incapacity of the civilized Mexicans to cope with the problems of Government their large and peculiarly rugged country presents.

Our own experience with Indians in times comparatively recent are not forgotten. The Sioux and the Apaches prosecuted warfare against the U. S. much longer than they could have done had not the East failed to realize the necessity for an early and thorough suppression of savagery in the West. The duration of Geronimo's leadership as the war chief of the Apaches has decidedly discreditable to the United States—to the Government which undertook the campaign half heartedly rather than to the portion of the army engaged in the campaign—and the Yaquis are as resourceful fighters as the Apaches. But in the long history of the opposition of the Yaquis to Mexican authority and to assimilation by Mexican civilization no little progress has been made by Mexico that the Yaquis, all things considered, appear the stronger race.

The truth is that successive Governments in Mexico have been mere military dictatorships exercising authority in a restricted area and creating no national sentiment. There has been nowhere in Mexico the steady advancement of moral progress which marked the advance of white settlement in the American West. There has been no moving forward of a frontier with civilization law and order behind it and barbarism or savagery losing ground before it. There has been no unity of sentiment or continuity of purpose among Mexicans. The Yaquis are not altogether wrong in preferring their tribal government, aboriginal customs and comparative freedom and prosperity to peonage under unstable but always vicious and exacting Mexican authority, but their methods of warfare seem to be about the same as those of Geronimo's Apaches, mere murderous forays followed by rapid retreat to inaccessible strongholds or trackless wastes.

State News.

Lancaster, July 6.—The price of spring chickens is higher in this section than ever before. They sold for 35c per pound until recently. Now they cost from 23c to 25c per pound.

Mayfield, July 6.—The grand jury has indicted many firms on charges of violating the local option law by shipping whisky and beer in too large quantities into "dry" territory.

Crab Orchard, July 6.—Clarence Doan, 5-year-old son of LaSalle Doan, was instantly killed by being run over by a wagon driven by his brother. The child had lain down on a bridge and fallen asleep.

Hopkinsville, July 6.—Dr. J R. Paine, 70, years old, a prominent south Christian county physician, was seriously injured near Trenton today when his buggy turned over. He was thrown to the ground and his right hip broken.

Island, July 6.—McLean county farmers are preparing to commence harvesting the wheat crop this week. The crop is not up to the standard, as much of it is small and full of cockerel. The hay harvest is in full swing, with only a fair crop. Corn planting was continued until the heavy rains of the last few days which destroyed all hope of planting more corn. Many of the lowland farmers failed to get more than half their land planted.

Franklin, July 6.—The four flouring mills and the new elevator company make Franklin one of the best grain markets in this section. Competitive bidding on the new wheat crop has advanced the price from $1 per bushel, the opening price, to $1.10, which seems to be several cents higher than the general market justifies. It is thought the yield in Simpson county will fall far short of an average, but the quality, tho below the average, will be an improvement over last year's crop.

Lexington, July 6.—The Fayette county fiscal court, at its meeting today, decided to postpone for six months payment of the $125,000 of outstanding county warrants, on which the money was borrowed from the Cleveland Reserve Bank six months ago at 5 per cent. It was found that a comparatively small portion of the county taxes has been paid and that, therefore, it will be necessary to wait till the end of the year to take up the warrants.

The Tobacco Crop.

A heavy crop is expected in Clark county.

The crop is Powell county while small, looks fine.

The crop is growing fast in Woodford county.

In Bracken county prospects are good for one of the best crops in years.

Tobacco in Bourbon county, is growing well and promises a large crop. The acreage is normal.

In Virginia the weather has continued very wet and unless dry weather comes soon the crop will deteriorate very rapidly in both quantity and quality.

The stand in Nicholas county is rated at almost one hundred per cent. and the acreage is in excess of the average, thus the prospects are the most promising in years.

According to District Agriculture Agent Collins, who recently made a tour of the State, the tobacco crop on the Cardome farm in Scott county, is the best in the State.

In Fleming county every grower secured a good stand and with the ideal weather conditions the crop has made rapid growth, and prospects now indicate an increase of from one-fifth to one-third over the average crop.

Practically every field in Montgomery county is in fine shape and you can almost see the crop grow. Many of the fields are far advanced over 1915 and with seasonable weather promises to yield an extraordinary crop.

Early in the season plants were scarce in North Carolina on account of the dry season, but rains came about 75 per cent. of the usual crop was planted in the old belt of the State. In the eastern bright belt the crop is large and promises to be good.

From present indications the 1916 crop will be a record breaker. The high prices paid for the weed during the past few months has stimulated great activity among tobacco growers. As yet it is most impossible to predict what effect this will have on the market next season. If shipments abroad can be continued there is every reason to believe that good prices will be realized.

That the burley crop for the Bluegrass region will be fully an average on both as to quality and quantity if the present prospects should be carried out, is the opinion of J. D. Clark, one of the managers of the Burley Tobacco Company's warehouses, who has but recently made a tour of Fayette, Scott, Grant, Woodford, Jessamine, Bourbon and Franklin, the large burley producing counties.

For a while after the Democrats revised the tariff the Republicans apologized for prosperity by saying that it was merely a continuation of republican good times. Then they said it was the war. And now they are saying that business is good merely because the country knows that Democratic rule is nearing the end. Their excuses are pitifully pleaded in every part of the land, but fortunately the Democrats may ignore them. Facts fight for Democracy.

CHICKENS RUNNING AT LARGE

Unlimited Range Is Nuisance When Fowls Are Given Privilege of Stables, Sheds, Etc.

Unlimited range has its advantages, but if unlimited range means that the fowls have the privileges of the stables, wagon sheds and roosting on the wheels and machinery, then the unlimited range is a nuisance. To give poultry plenty of room does not imply that the fowls should go where they please. A hen has no place in a stable any more than a cow has the right in a poultry house. Little by little the droppings accumulate during the season until everything is too filthy to handle, and the work of cleaning will be more than the real value of the fowls. Keep poultry away from other stock.

GUINEAS AS SUMMER LAYERS

Egg Is About Two-Thirds as Large as That of Chicken—Has Decidedly Better Flavor.

There are two different breeds of guineas, the white and the pearl. Both breeds are excellent summer layers, and the eggs are of superior quality. The guinea egg is about two-thirds as large as the hen egg, and has a decidedly better flavor. The guinea hen begins to lay as soon as the weather gets warm in the spring. If they are well fed during the winter they will begin to lay earlier than if they are only half fed through the winter.

If there are as many male birds in the flock as there are hens they will mate off in pairs, but if only a few male birds are kept several hens will mate with one male and all or nearly all of them will lay in the same nest. Most guinea raisers recommend keeping one male bird for every five hens; we kept only two male birds with 20 hens last year and the eggs hatched as well as they did when we kept more males. The fewer male birds that are kept in the flock, the less quarrelsome they are.

HEN IS THE BIGGEST EATER

Fowl Turns Out More Food, According to Weight, Than Best Dairy Cow—Marvel of Efficiency.

The hen is the biggest eater of all domestic animals. A three and one-half pound hen, according to Doctor Rice of Cornell, will eat 110 pounds of food in a year. She will lay 30 pounds of eggs, or perhaps more. Eggs are highly concentrated food, and this hen that transforms a hundred pounds of bran, grass, grain and gravel, and other scraps into one-third their weight of fresh eggs, is a marvel of efficiency. The hen therefore turns out more food, according to her weight, than the best dairy cow.

TO BREAK HENS FROM SITTING

Wait Until She Gets Well Settled Then Place Her in Open Coop—Soon Forgets Desire.

To break a hen from sitting let her sit a day or two until she gets well settled, then put her, preferably with two or more other hens, into an open coop in full view of the poultry yard, where she can see her free sisters scratching around enjoying themselves. Hens are jealous creatures and a sitting hen placed in such a position and well fed, soon forgets her desire to sit, and when given her freedom on the morning of the fourth or fifth day she will happily resume the duties of hen life.

Special Notice.

The Farmers' Mutual Telephone Directory says, I handle any kind of rubber tires; and that I have the exclusive agency of the Republic Rubber Tires. That contract just cost me $200 of which of some of my customers will attest. I guaranteed those tires and I filled same to the letter. Now, right here I do most solemnly promise and swear that I will never again change the old and tried for any new thing whatsoever. Furthermore, that I will not use any Rubber Tire except Kelly's Springfield—the first rubber tire ever made and the best. I ought to know for surely I paid last year to find out. It is just like a boy changing the old girl for the new or a man leaving his ash and [illegible] for a new one. Now, isn't it a fact that they always go back to the old and tried love, is it not so boys? That's what I have done with Kelly's Springfield Rubber Tire—gone back to my old love. While they cost me more money they will cost my customers $12.00 per set or $3.00 per tire: these tires I give a guarantee on for being as represented. They will not stuff out nor will they peel, but will wear smooth like a good tire should.

Now, in regards to repainting: I have tried to get a quick system and do good work, but I find it a failure so I give it up and must stick to the old system. All my work I guarantee to be as represented. I do anything in the carriage line. Bring me your work if you want it done right. I solicit your trade.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

"The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After the doctor seemed to do me any good I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

"At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of wonderful success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

The Chautauqua.

Burlington's first Chautauqua began Monday under rather unfavorable condition—the farmers being in the midst of their harvest, but notwithstanding this the attendance in the afternoon and in the evening was fairly good, while the program was received in a most appreciative manner by the audience.

This being Burlington's centennial year Rev. Edgar C. Riley read in the afternoon and also in the evening a paper giving a brief history of the town in which considerable information was given that was new to the greater part of the audience.

The attendance at Tuesday's sessions was considerably larger than that on Monday and put those who composed the guarantee committee on easy street, with two more sessions to be held. Each number so far has been received with enthusiasm, and there is no doubt but what a Chautauqua will be held in Burlington next season.

Boys' Baby Beef Clubs.

Changes in the beef industry have resulted in the organization in various States of boys' baby beef clubs. A number of State agricultural colleges are now arranging in cooperation with the department, baby beef shows and contests to be held in the fall. This movement originated in Texas, where it has proved so successful that the Texas Baby Beef Club now has a membership of more than 1,200.

This pioneer club was organized to encourage the fattening of more cattle in Texas. For many years Texas had raised feeder cattle, but instead of fattening them on home-grown milo, kafir and feterita, the farmers of the State had sent them to the feed lots of the corn belt. This, it was felt, was a mistake. By the efficient use of economical feed to produce rapid gains in weight and by pushing high-grade calves without loss of milk fat into highly finished, maturely formed yearlings, known as baby beeves, it was believed that profitable returns could be secured in Texas cattle feeders.

In order to popularize the production of baby beef, therefore, a prominent breeder in Coleman co., started a baby beef contest among the farm boys. The boys purchased their calves by giving notes payable when the calves were marketed as baby beef. The idea proved successful from the first, and the Annual Boys' Encampment and Baby Beef Contest, held at Fort Worth under the auspices of the National Feeders' and Breeders' Show, has increased each year in attendance and exhibits. Last March 300 boy feeders of pigs and baby beeves gathered to receive instruction and to show their stock. Over 100 well finished baby beeves of excellent type were exhibited.

In a number of the classes the boys compete with their calves against older and more experienced feeders. Twenty ribbons were won in these classes by club members. Three brothers from Clay county won two firsts and two seconds, and one of these brothers also obtained the grand championship in the competition among club members only.

According to the custom at fat-stock shows, the cattle were sold in the open market. The boys' stock brought a price averaging above the top of the regular market for the day, the price being justified by the quality of the carcasses. The calves in the fifty-weighed group, for instance, were bought by the pound, and the average weight was 80.3

Bulletin No. 5

The Bethlehem Steel Company's Offer to Serve the United States

At a time when the expenses of the Government are so enormous—

Isn't it worth while finding out the actual facts before plunging ahead into an expenditure of $11,000,000 of the people's money for a Government armor plant?

To clear up the whole situation, and to put it on a basis as fair and business-like as we know how to express it, we now make this offer to the Government:

The Bethlehem Steel Company will manufacture armor plate for the Government of the United States at actual cost of operation plus such charges for overhead expenses, interest and depreciation as the Federal Trade Commission may fix. We will agree to this for such period as the Government may designate.

The House of Representatives voted down a proposal to empower the Federal Trade Commission to determine a fair price for armor, and allow private manufacturers opportunity to meet that price before the Government built its plant.

Isn't our proposition fair and ought it not to be accepted?

The measure is now before the United States Senate.

Who Am I

I am more powerful than the combined armies of the world.

I am more deadly than bullets, and have wrecked more homes than the mightiest of siege guns.

I steal in the U. S. alone over $300,000,000 each year.

I spare no one, and find my victims among the rich and poor alike; the young and the old; the strong and the weak; widows and orphans know me.

I massacre thousands upon thousands of wage-earners in a year.

I lurk in unseen places, and do most of my work silently. You are warned against me, but you heed not.

I am relentless. I am everywhere; in the home, on the street, in the factory; at railroad crossings and on the sea.

I bring sickness, degradation and death, and yet few seek to avoid me.

I destroy, crush and maim, I give nothing, but take all.

I am your worst enemy.

I Am Carelessness.

Watch the Fruit Trees.

Notice the fruit trees carefully. See which tree bears heavily, ripens on time and matures a high grade of fruit. Notice the trees that are shy bearers, the tender trees, susceptible to disease and insect injury.

It is highly desirable that the fruit grower become thoroughly familiar with the tendencies of the various trees so he will know how to treat them. Trees are much like animals. A person can always get better results with animals if he understands their peculiarities.

Furthermore one always wants to know the good trees and the poor trees. The poor will need to be replaced as soon as practical. The desirable trees bearing large crops of highly desirable fruits may be reproduced. Propagation should be from the best.

OLGA KIRKPATRICK DEAD

A Gloom Cast Over the Town When The Sad News Was Received.

Miss Olga Kirkpatrick, who went to Indianapolis, Ind., (two years ago where she accepted a position in the waterworks of which her cousin Clarence Kirkpatrick is president, died in a hospital in that city last Monday at 1 p. m. She had been ill for about three months, most of the time at the home of her cousin, from which she was taken a few weeks ago to a hospital when it became apparent that an operation for a stomach trouble was the last resort, so decided by the very best medical and surgical skill it was possible to secure. The operation was performed last Friday and death ensued the following Monday.

The deceased was the youngest of the three daughters of Benj. S. and Annabelle Kirkpatrick and was born and reared in Burlington where she was held in the very highest esteem by every citizen of the town. She made her home with her widowed mother, whose comfort and pleasure was the first of her thoughts at all times, and as a devoted and loving daughter none excelled her, there never being a sacrifice too great for her to make if it redounded to mother's welfare. From every standpoint she was an ideal daughter and a charming lady whose demise cast a gloom in every home in her native town and its vicinity, while the aged mother, who is deprived of the one upon who she depended and idolized, has the sympathy of all, but nothing that can be said or done will heal the wound, nor dispel the sorrow that the death of this noble woman has caused in the home and among those with whom she was acquainted.

"Miss Olga," as she was called by everyone, was postmaster at Burlington for many years, and made a very efficient officisl, and it was shortly after her term of office expired that she went to Indianapolis to take a position that she might support herself and mother. She is survived by her mother and two sisters, Mrs L. L Ware, of Rossdale, Indiana, and Mrs. H. W Ryle, of Erlanger.

The remains arrived from Indianapolis, Monday evening in charge of Undertaker John Allison, of Covington, and after a brief service at the home by Rev. Edgar C. Riley, of the Christian church, the burial took place in the family lot in the Odd-Fellows' cemetery at 2 p. m., Wednesday.

Miss Besse Hall sang sweetly, "Face to Face" and "Lead Kindly Light," as part of the services, these being favorite numbers of the departed one.

The pallbearers were the following who were associates of the deceased in past years:

Mrs. Susan Martin, Mrs. Artie Walton, Mrs. Lottie Shearer, Mrs. Essie Gurney, Miss Nellie Martin, Miss Sheba Roberts.

The active pall-bearers were H W. Ryle, Floyd Ryle, L. L Ware, Howard Kirkpatrick, N. E. Riddell, William Hughes.

Those who came from Indianapolis to attend the funeral were Mrs. Leible, Mrs. Cress, Mr. and Mrs. L. L Ware, Mr. Stanley Chastene, Mrs. Clarence Kirk, Miss Helen Kirk. Mr. Clarence Kirk, who had been equal to a father to the deceased during her illness was too sick to make the trip to Kentucky.

Quite a crowd attended the session of the fiscal court, Tuesday, being composed of men who wanted certain pikes built or were interested in pikes which they desired to dispose of to the county.

The Big Bone and Hamilton pike was taken over by the county at $500 per mile.

The Walton and Verona Turnpike Company gave its road, $700 in money and all its property of whatsoever kind to the county.

All other propositions made or pending in regard to turnpikes were continued, and the justices will look the properties over.

Gave Bond.

Robert Thomas, who had been in jail several days as a result of his trouble with his landlord, a Mr. Kemper of Verona neighborhood, was bailed out Tuesday, Elden Rose, of Hebron, Owen county, signing his bonds, one for $5C for Thomas' appearance before the grand jury and one for $300 to keep the peace.

ERADICATE WEED PEST

Canada Thistle Was Introduced Here by Means of Seed.

Only Effectual Way of Killing Is by Starving to Death Underground Stems—Another Method Is by Cutting It Close.

There is probably no weed pest in the land that has been more heartily condemned than has the Canada thistle, says Wisconsin Agriculturist. It is one of the weed scourges of Europe, and was introduced here by means of seeds. It is different from the tall thistle or common thistle on account of its deep running perennial root stalks, which usually lie below the reach of the plow. This thistle also has more slender stems and small compact heads. From the root stalks below the surface, there are being constantly sent up branches which form young plants, as shown in the illustration. These young shoots will push up through two or three feet of heavy clay soil. The raw plants produce only leaves the first year, dying down to the surface in the winter, and producing flower stems the second year.

Canada Thistle

Where Canada thisties get a bad start they soon possess the ground, smothering out native grasses, and covering an area which is avoided by grazing stock. The only effectual means of killing out this pest is to starve out or kill the underground stems. The starving method is the most successful. No plant can live long if the leaf stalks are kept cut off at the surface and mowing or close cutting three times in June, August, and September will be a good way to begin the battle. Salting and sheep grazing for two seasons afterward has been known to finish the work. In cultivated fields, cut the thistles when in bloom, close to the ground, then plow deeply and sow to millet or Hungarian. Harrow thoroughly and seed thickly. Cut the hay in September and seed to rye. The next May plow under the rye and plant to corn or any hoed crop. The field can be cleaned up by this method.

IMPORTANCE OF PURE WATER

Large Amount Is Required by Average Dairy Cow for the Upkeep of Bodily Functions.

A large amount of water is needed by the average dairy cow for the upkeep of bodily functions. In addition to this, much more is needed in the production of milk, as the latter contains 87 per cent of water. Practical dairymen have found that it is a good policy to provide the cow with plenty of good, clean water. This is especially true during extremely hot weather. That flowing through a muddy ditch it not suited for a dairy cow.

It is also important that the water be of a mild temperature, especially in cold weather. Ice water taken into the stomach of the cow causes a shock to the system that is not conducive to high milk production. The tempering of this cold water in the cow uses some of the energy that might be applied to other purposes. In the winter, freshly pumped water is much better than the cold water in the tank. Tank heaters aid in overcoming this trouble. A cow will drink a much larger quantity of warm water in the winter time than of ice water.

OVER-PASTURING IS COSTLY

Field Robbed of Growth of Grass and Abundance of Feed Taken From Live Stock.

By over-pasturing we rob the field of its growth of grass, and we rob the stock of the abundance of feed they need. A good practice is to pasture three head of live stock where we ordinarily keep four, says Guy E. Morrow, extension specialist in live stock, South Dakota state college.

In England, where we all look to see better live stock and where pasture rentals run as high as $30 per acre per year, we find the cattle knee deep in a mixed grass pasture. In places the beef type of cattle has disappeared, being replaced by the dairy type.

We Americans can draw a lesson from this. It gives us the idea that if we will use discretion in the pasturing of our fields and manuring them, we would have limitless possibilities, for the growing of a

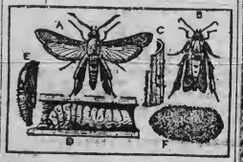
MANGE IS ERUPTIVE DISEASE

Horse Is Kept in Constant State of Irritation, Soon Causing Him to Lose Flesh.

Mange is an eruptive disease common with horses that is very contagious. It is caused by repeated attacks of minute insects which burrow into the skin and can be seen easily by means of a magnifying glass. A horse troubled with mange is kept in a constant state of irritation which soon causes him to reduce in flesh. He rubs his head and neck against the stall or manger, small pimples appear, the hair falls off and the skin is dry and hard. Treatment for mange consists in separating the affected animal from the other animals and thoroughly washing it with soap and water every second or third day. Afterwards dress the animal with this application: Four ounces of linseed oil, four ounces of oil of tar and three ounces of sulphur. Mix and rub into affected parts. All clothing, harness, etc., which have been used on a horse affected with the mange should be cleansed good before they are used again.

WAYS OF HANDLING MANURE

Easy to Figure Out How Spreader Will Pay for Itself in Comparatively Short Period.



Here is the way three farmers handle manure: One hauls his manure and dumps it in piles to save the washing. Another spreads it on the wagon, while the third uses a manure spreader. It takes Farmer A and B 21 minutes to put on a ton load of manure. It takes Farmer C 18 minutes. In unloading, Farmer A requires 32 minutes; Farmer B, 28 minutes, and Farmer C, two minutes. To take a load of manure to the field and unload requires 64 hours for A, 60 for B and 29 for C.

Considering labor, teams and tools, the cost for A is 44 cents a load, or $88 for 200 loads; B, 40 cents a load, or $80 for 200 donds, and C, 20 cents a load, or $40 for 200 loads. One can soon figure up the value of a manure spreader and how quickly this tool pays its cost. These figures are actual facts and they may be verified by any farmer in his own vicinity.

CONTROL SQUASH-VINE BORER

Cut Out Affected Parts of Vines and Harrow Infected Fields Lightly in the Fall.

The squash-vine borer, which destroys melons, cucumbers, squashes and pumpkins by boring through the stems of the plants, and through the leaf stalks, is a hard pest to control. Spraying does no good. About the only way to get rid of it is to cut out the affected parts of the vines. If your crop is injured this year, plant vines in a different place next year. Harrow the infected fields lightly in the fall, and then plow at least six inches deep in the spring. Or you may cover the vines with earth here and there, while growing, so that new roots will put out, and if the borer cuts off the plant from the original root it will still live.—Farm Life.

KEEP HORSE STABLES CLEAN

Practice of Removing Litter Only Once Every Week Is Worthy of Strong Condemnation.

The custom on many farms of cleaning the barns, especially the horse stables, only once every week, ten days or two weeks, is to be condemned. It takes but a very few minutes to clean the horse stable each day, and benefits received from so doing are far in excess of the labor involved. Not only do the animals have cleaner, healthier and more comfortable quarters, thus minimizing the likelihood of disease, but there is an actual saving in bedding, and in time used in making the horse presentable by use of the curry comb and brush. An up-to-date litter carrier is a fast time and labor saver and a stable thus equipped is much more likely to be kept clean.

GOOD MILK COWS ESSENTIAL

They Provide Cheapest, Best and Most Wholesome Food for Family—Value a Hard to Estimate.

The first reason for having good milk cows on the farm comes from the fact that they provide the cheapest, best, and most wholesome food for the family. Their value is hard to estimate when we consider the amount saved on the bills. Their produce is a superior substitute for many foods necessarily purchased at high prices. In fact, there is no economic way of doing without plenty of good milch cows on the farm.

Chilling Causes Trouble.

Chicks that get wet are almost invariably chilled and chilling is likely to be followed by digestive troubles.

BIRDS AND MEN.

None of the wild birds in New England is as nearly domestic as the robin and no other bird fits into the scenery better or is more welcome in spring. It is a bird of unconquerable courage or it would not arrive here before the snow leaves, and it develops a fine sense of ownership. No millionaire surveying his private park can look the part of the proprietor better than the robin when it revisits a lawn with which it was familiar the summer before. It expects to find a worm exactly where it found one last year, and, as a rule, it is not disappointed. It looks at the human who may own the lawn and, possibly, remarks: "There's the man who was here last year," just as the man tries to think that the robin is the one he saw in 1915. After all, the bird and the man are much alike; the bird has a brief period of love-making and nest building, and then it works from sunrise till sunset to care for the family. So does the man, if he is the right sort, says Hartford Courant. Fall comes and the bird faces the possibilities of starvation or of sudden death from some of its enemies, and the man faces the increasing possibilities of pneumonia or apoplexy. Next spring comes and finds another robin and another man, the only thing remaining unchanged being the land. Both the robin and the man dream that they possess it, and yet, after all, it acquires them.

"There are gains for all our losses." The high price of chemicals consequent upon conditions arising out of the European war has been the subject of much bewailment. But so far as the general public is concerned it is the cause of benefits as well as disadvantages. A New York trade publication observes that manufacturers of catchups and canned goods who used to buy benzonte of soda at 35 and 40 cents a pound are likely to shy at using it very freely when it is quoted at $6 a pound, as it is now, and mighty hard to get at that. One large user of benzoate refused to buy a lot of 1,100 pounds, which was discovered in a New York warehouse and held at slightly over $5. It is probable, therefore, that a good deal of the catchup next season will be highly spiced, says Milwaukee Wisconsin. There are millions of consumers who will prefer it that way and be glad to escape the risk which they believe to be attendant upon introducing unpopular chemicals into their systems along with their food.

A correspondent of the New York Sun calls attention to the fact that the "glory vine" otherwise generally known as the wisteria, was named after Caspar Wistar, a Pennsylvania botanist, who propagated and improved it from a rank stock that grew wild. The correspondent contends that the proper spelling is "wistaria," and argues that in fairness this should be commonly used. He seems to have the right notion, but the outcome will depend upon makers of dictionaries.

A New York specialist says that neglect of the eyes will some day result in a race of blind men. And if all the men go blind there will not be so much said about the style of women's clothes as there is at present, and perhaps with all the men blind the styles wouldn't amount to much, anyway.

Five hundred thousand rabbits have been shipped from this country as food for the allied armies. If men are what they eat, as one theory asserts, so much rabbit in the system will lend to disastrous results when it comes to a showdown in the fight.

This is the time of the year when a disinterested man differs from woman in the respect that he would rather hear a two hours' conversation about good fishin' holes than gabble ten minutes about some coupie's honeymoon.

Algernon wishes to know whether a crash of thunder is a weather report. Not exactly, Algernon, but a man struck by political lightning sometimes experiences a boom.

If the European belligerents really want peace why don't they stop the roar of cannon so they can hear themselves talk about it?

The average publicist's idea of scathing sarcasm is to put a praiseworthy designation, such as "patriot," in quotation marks.

However, turning back the hands of the clock won't postpone the inevitable day when that note falls due.

Anyhow, the poor man doesn't have to mortgage his means of locomotion to buy gasoline.

FISCAL COURT

Propositions to Build and Reconstruct Roads Considered.

SEVERAL SURVEYS ORDERED

At a special term of the Fiscal Court held on the 11th inst., the following business was transacted:

The proposition to pay $600 a mile for the turnpike from Beaver to Big Bone was continued until the next term of the court, and the court will inspect said road and other turnpikes in the county.

The proposition of the Walton and Verona Turnpike Co., that was accepted was as follows: That the road bed of said turnpike be turned over to Boone county, together with all the money left on hand after the liquidation of the company, with the condition that Boone county expend not less than $500 per mile in addition to the money in the treasury of said company.

The Big Bone and Hamilton Turnpike Company filed written proposal to accept the county's offer of $500 a mile for its road, and the proposition was continued until the next term of the court.

The East Bend was ordered surveyed from Burlington to Ezekiel Rice's corner.

The Road Engineer was ordered to have prepared plans and specifications for a bridge across Mud Lick creek between Walton and Beaver.

County Engineer was ordered to secure right of way around slip by lands of W. Hodges in Rabbit Hash road.

County Road Engineer is ordered to go over road surveyed and estimate of costs of road from Kelly's corner to Gunpowder creek and on to Hathaway and Union pike.

The road from Hamilton to Fish Trap is ordered surveyed and estimate of cost of construction made.

Ordered that the road from Verona to Galiatin county line and from Verona to Mudlick be surveyed.

Ordered that the county pay for the moving of the fence over Judge Stephens' land for right of way for Frogtown road, no charge to be made for the land.

Ordered that the road from J. L. Huey's corner to T. A Huey's corner, and the Willis pike from T. A. Huey's corner to Big Bone Lick be surveyed and bids advertised for for its reconstruction.

Ordered that the road from Berkshire to where it intersects the Big Bone and Hamilton pike be surveyed and estimates of the cost of construction be made.

Ordered that the members of the court on the 17th of this month go over the roads that are intended to be purchased and taken over by the county and inspect them for the purpose of fixing their value.

The following communication was filed:

Grant, Ky., July 10, 1916.

To the president and board of directors of the Rabbit Hash and Big Bone Turnpike Company:

As a committeeman to interview Mr. W. H. Hodges in regard to making a change of the road through his farm will say, that the only change that he would consent to would be to locate the road up a branch thru Mr. Hager and him to his pasture and then down with the branch to the Lick creek bridge. He thinks that it would damage him to the amount of ($700) seven hundred dollars, and that is what he would expect before the road could be built on the above location.

He would not consent to building the road thru his barn lot under any condition.

HUBERT RYLE.

The Fiscal Court, all the justices present, was in session again Tuesday, working on the road propositions it has.

C. H. Youell's bid of $8,106 for the construction of 2.13 miles of pike from Limaburg to the Anderson's ferry pike was rejected.

The Big Bone and Hamilton turnpike company was offered $500 a mile for its road.

The court offered to take over the Beaver and Big Bone pike and put not less than $500 a mile thereon.

The court on motion duly seconded and carried offers to take over and accept the Beaver Lick and South Fork turnpike and put same in repair as this court sees fit, the acceptance and this offer subject to confirmation by this court at its next meeting.

No bids have been made on the Burlington and Petersburg pike.

Louell's bid for the construction of the Limaburg pike to the Anderson Ferry pike was not complete and was rejected.

The proposition of the Union and Hathaway Turnpike Co. for the court to take over its road and pay an indebtedness of $850 was rejected.

The propositions heretofore submitted to the Covington and Lexington pike, the Union and Florence pike and the Bullittsville and Dry Creek pike to be withdrawn if not accepted by the next term of the court.

The construction of the Burlington and Waterton pike is in statu quo because of the State road man refusing to recommend State Aid on the proposed pike unless a change in the route is made, beginning on the Jas. Barlow land and run straight to Mrs. Charles Stephens'.

ERLANGER ON MAP

Says Judge, Giving Citizens First Round in Car Fight.

Judge Tracy overruled a demurrer offered by the Green Line Company of the action of Louis Bentler and other citizens of Erlanger against the company to compel it to extend the Ft. Mitchell line to Erlanger.

The plaintiff asked for a mandatory injunction against the company and the latter demurred, claiming that such action should be brought by an official representing the State of Kentucky, under which they hold their franchise.

Judge Tracy held that the citizens of Erlanger are a part of the State and have a right to bring the action; hence he overruled the demurrer.

Judge Tracy further holds that although the charter draft defines Erlanger as an indefinite location for the car line terminus, it was known then there was a town of Erlanger and that operation of a railway would be a service to the people residing there.

The petition stated that the Covington, Cincinnati and Erlanger Railroad Company, a subsidiary company of the Green lines, had entered into a contract to build the line to Erlanger when certain right-of-way were granted them several years ago. The citizens charge that the company failed to fulfill the contract.

The Happy Farmer.

Is the boy who was born on a farm, but goes to the city and becomes a banker, to be considered always a farmer, or as a member of that class to which other people of his class belong? Is he a farmer-banker because he was born on a farm? Of course he becomes reminiscent at times and thinks lovingly of his happy days in the country, but he is a banker, not a farmer or a farmer-banker. Does not the same thing apply to those who are born in a foreign country and later take the oath of allegiance to the United States, and become naturalized citizens of this country? A man born in Germany, after he comes to America and swears allegiance to "the United States, is an American citizen and owes his allegiance to this country and not to Germany. He has a right to remember lovingly the country of his birth, just as the banker does of the farm on which he was born. There is no such thing as a German-American. There are Germans and there are Americans, but the German who leaves his country and comes to America and voluntarily becomes a citizen of this country is no longer a German nor is he a German-American. He is an American, and as such is entitled to all of the privileges that may be enjoyed by those who were born in this country.—Shelby Record.

Confederate Medical Inspection

A friend was talking to Bazil W. Duke yesterday about the rejection of so many Kentuckians who enlisted in the Kentucky National Guard, and expected to be received in the United States Volunteer Army. The General said:

"When I went into the army I weighed 120 pounds and was five feet nine. When Castleman enlisted he weighed 128 pounds and was six feet two. Both of us would have been thrown out under the present standard. My custom was to ask the young man ambitious to enlist in the army, 'can you ride a horse?' and if he said yes, I had him sworn in and that was the end of it. We never had a hospital, we rarely had anybody sick—our ranks were only thinned by the enemy's bullets."—Courier-Journal.

$10,000,000 Damage by Flood

Atlanta, Ga., July 16.—Serious floods in North Carolina, South Carolina, West Virginia and Virginia today caused five known deaths, rendered hundreds homeless, damaged property and crops to the extent of more than $10,000,000, according to first estimates, and demoralized railway, telegraph and telephone communication.

Following the hurricane that struck the South Atlantic Coast Thursday, unprecedented rains have fallen, driving rivers and smaller streams from their banks and imperiling many lives.

Four Straights.

The Hebron ball team came over last Saturday afternoon and took its fourth straight game from Burlington, 8 to 0. The score was as follows:

Burlington no runs, six hits, 12 strikeouts and 9 errors. Hebron 8 runs, 7 hits, 10 strikeouts, four errors.

Rogers pitched a splendid game considering the rotten support, there not being an earned run on his delivery as shown on the score book which is an emphatic rebuke to the team for which he was working. Hebron has a strong team but did not have to do much playing to win the game last Saturday.

In the list of names of pall-bearers at Miss Olga Kirkpatrick's last week, the name of Mrs. Hettie Rankaker instead of Mrs. Susan Martin, and Earl Walton instead of Wm. Hughes should have appeared.

TO AVERT

Any Possible Epidemic of Infantile Paralysis in Kentucky

State Board of Health Has Ordered a State-Wide Clean-up.

A State-wide clean-up to avert any possible epidemic of infantile paralysis in Kentucky has been ordered by the State Board of Health. The proclamation follows:

"Whereas, infantile paralysis, essentially a disease of cities and towns and of childhood, although sometimes occurring in country districts and in adults, in a severe epidemic form exists in New York and has already spread to other sections, eight positive or suspicious cases having been reported in this State within the last twenty-four hours, the disease having an average death rate of about 25 per cent. and a large portion of those surviving being more or less completely paralyzed and, whereas, everywhere the tendency of the disease is to break over official control and spread, especially in the presence of filth and flies in and about the home, yards, alleys and streets, unless every case is rapidly isolated and all discharges from the throat, nose and bowels are promptly burned or disinfected until complete recovery, and the assembling of children is prevented in really infected districts, now, therefore,

Be it known, that the State Board of Health, in the exercise of authority vested in it by law, and in the discharge of a public duty, hereby urges and directs that the health and civil authorities of every city and town in Kentucky take immediate steps to clean all alleys, streets, tenements public places and vacant lots, and by rigid systematic inspection, to require the cleaning and liming of all back yards, cellars and premises and the thorough screening of homes, although in the presence of this emergency no good citizen should wait for the law to force him to an evident duty for the protection of his family and community. In the existing emergency visits of children under 15 years of age from infected or suspected cities should be discouraged, and, when permitted, the names and addresses of all such children should be recorded in the health office. Upon the occurrence of a suspicious case it should be immediately reported to the health officer, and, without fear or favor so rigidly isolated that no one can enter the room except the nurse and physician, and the house placarded, or, preferably, sent to the hospital, and all discharges burned or disinfected as in a case of diphtheria and scarlet fever. All of this should be most thoroughly done or it will do harm by giving only a false sense of security. In the event of the disease in any city or town, except it be an imported case which can be cared for as above indicated, the local authorities are asked to consider the advisability of restricting the assembling and travel of children in places of amusement, schools, on street cars and trains, and, so far as practicable, on the streets. All health officers are required by law to report this disease to this board and they are hereby requested to do so by wire at its expense.

NOT DUE TO WAR

Is High Cost of Living Say Federal Experts—A Downward Trend During Year 1915.

Washington, July 12.—The cost of living, after rising steadily since 1907, except in 1911, took a downward trend during 1915. A report by the Bureau of Labor, issued today, analyzing retail prices of twenty-nine articles of food shows that relative retail prices during 1915 averaged 1 per cent lower than in 1914. Meats, lards and eggs averaged from 1 to 9 per cent lower, while potatoes were 22 per cent lower. Wheat, flour, cornmeal and granulated sugar were higher than in 1914, flour being 20 per cent and sugar 11 per cent higher.

Commenting on statement that the European war is the dominating influence now controlling price changes of all commodities, the report says:

"It is true that retail food prices increased greatly immediately after the outbreak of the war, and it seems probable that they have been maintained at a higher level ever since as a consequence of the increase demand abroad for our foodstuffs. A study of the retail price statistics of the bureau, however, will convince anyone that with the exception of sugar, flour and possibly cornmeal the prices of the principal articles of food since October, 1914, have been mainly governed by local and seasonal conditions.

Warren county had a fine rain Sunday 8th, just in time. Farmers had about finished cutting one of the finest hay crops ever grown there. Corn and tobacco never looked more promising as the season has been ideal for cultivating the crops.

SLANG IS UPHELD BY COURT

"Fly Cop" and "Bonehead Stunt" Both Perfectly Proper, Judge Says.

A recent decision by the supreme court of Louisiana holds among other things that "as newspaper accounts of police court proceedings and detectives' escapades are not required to be written in a dignified style, it is not slanderous per se for the report to call a detective a 'fly cop,' to characterize his ruthless and unwarranted arrest of a man as 'spearing' him, and describe the officer's blunder as 'pulling off another bonehead stunt.'" Upon this point the court said:

"It is in evidence that the term 'fly cop' does not mean an officious policeman, as might be inferred from the ordinary meaning of the slang adjective 'fly.' We are informed that a 'fly cop,' sometimes called a 'shadow bull,' or a 'tec,' means nothing more nor less than a 'plain-clothes man,' a sleuth, detective.

"It also appears that to 'spear' a person, in the figurative or metaphorical sense in which the expression was used in the article complained of, means to catch a person ruthlessly, by throwing a harpoon or gaff into him; and we understand that to 'pull off a bonehead stunt' means nothing more nor less than to commit a blunder.

"The newspaper reporter, in this instance, credited the plaintiff with a keener sense of humor than he possessed, but we are not convinced that there was malice in the publication. Stories of detectives' escapades are read by men who enjoy a little nonsense now and then, and it would take much of the flavor out of the newspaper accounts of such proceedings if we should require that they be written up in the dignified manner of the opinion and judgments of this court.

"For example, although we might deem it more appropriate to say, in commenting upon what we considered a mistake, that a reversible error or an abuse of discretion had been committed, a newspaper reporter might well say of a more or less serious error, without intending any disrespect, that a bonehead stunt had been pulled off."—New York Sun.

DIFFER OVER NAME OF TOWN

"Muscle" or "Mussel" Shoals Is a Question That Is Agitating the Minds of Tennesseeans.

The name "Muscle shoals" is going to be decidedly an important one if the government nitrate plant is located there, says the Nashville Tennessean, and, in any event, it is certain to be a much-used name during the next several months. We should agree, therefore, on its spelling. As matters stand, one newspaper spells it one way and another the other way.

It is a well-known fact that the place received its name because of the abundance in that region of a certain fresh-water bivalve. The common name of that bivalve is spelled both "mussel" and "muscle," the former being given the preference. But, in spelling the name of the place, the latter got the ascendency. The United States government spells it "Muscle Shoals." The Century Dictionary spells it that way. The Standard dictionary spells it both ways, but gives the preference to "muscle." Five or six years ago the cities of Florence, Sheffield and Tuscumbia solemnly eliminated themselves, and then as solemnly reincarnated themselves as Muscle Shoals. And they spelled it "muscle."

That is the generally accepted spelling of that great water-power site. Why stickle for the preferred spelling of the name of the mollusk from which the place took its name when practically everybody from Andrew Jackson on down has spelled it the other way.

Libraries of Nish.

Whether German or Bulgar be responsible for the destruction of the libraries of Nish, it is an act of unpardonable vandalism, which leaves the world the poorer. For Nish is rich in traditions and historical associations. As Naissus, the capital of ancient Moesia, it played a large part in the making of history. It was here that the second Claudius defeated the Goths in the third century with slaughter as great as is recorded today of the Germans at Verdun; and it was here—for all authorities are now agreed in disregarding the rival claims of Nicomedia and an unnamed place in England—that an innkeeper's daughter, Helena by name, gave birth to a royal infant who was to be known throughout all time as the powerful Emperor Constantine the Great.—London Chronicle.

Wait Till the Road Is Dry.

W. H. Reed, president of the Washington State Association of County Commissioners, told a recent convention of road builders at Seattle that our roads are generally so poor in comparison with those of Europe because we are in too great a hurry to put them to use and will not wait until the surface is dry and hard on a settled foundation.

Had Cause for Pride.

Traveler—"I say, what are you people so proud about? Last time I came here everybody was very friendly, and now I can hardly get a person to speak!" Uncle Eben—"You'll pardon us, but it's our town pride. You see, Joe Summers picked up a guidebook that fell out of a motor car last week, and we found that the old tannery swamp is a mountain tarn, Simmons' stone quarry a precipice, Bill Moodier's beerhouse a wayside inn and the whole blooming country chock full of historical antidotes and delusions."

Restrictions on Wills.

In Argentina the laws provide that a father must leave his children four-fifths of his fortune, and a husband, if he has no children, has to leave all of his property to his wife. An unmarried son is compelled to leave his parents two-thirds of his property, and only unmarried persons without parents or descendants can make wills disposing of their possessions as they see fit.

Ventilation Experiments

Experiments conducted by the New York commission on ventilation demonstrate that as long as the temperature is kept down the vitiated air of an unventilated room where the humidity is kept constant has no direct effects on the pulse, blood pressure, body temperature, respiration or metabolism, though the desire for food is appreciably diminished.

Wit Always Welcome.

Wit makes its own welcome and levels all distinction. No dignity, no learning, no force of character can make any stand against good wit. It is like ice, on which no beauty of form, no majesty of carriage, can plead any immunity; they must walk gingerly, according to the laws of ice, or down they must go, dignity and all.—Emerson.

At Least Had Him Thinking.

"Don't you feel that you are called on to do something for your fellowmen?" asked the indefatigable philanthropist. "I don't know whether I am or not," answered the practical man, "but the unanimity with which my fellow men seem to expect it sometimes makes me think that I am."

Experiments by the Japanese government of producing camphor by distilling the leaves and branches of camphor trees have reached a stage at which 317 gallons of distillate are produced from each 400 pounds of leaves.

CROP REPORT

For Kentucky as Of July 1st. Seasonable Weather

From Now On Will Make This Year a Profitable One to The Kentucky Farmers.

The last of June found everybody busy on the farm. The late corn is scarcely laid by, the early corn needs cultivation, threshing has begun in many localities, rye, wheat, barley and hay harvest is on hand and length of no day is sufficient for the Kentucky farmer at this time.

Excessive rainfall over a large area of the State during June has prevented the proper cultivation of the crops, and in consequence the growth of same is retarded by weeds and grass. Pastures are in good condition. This month's reports show great contrasts as to weather and crop conditions from different sections of the State.

Threshing is in full sway, and while only a part of the wheat has been threshed, it is estimated that a very small yield will be the result. This yield is estimated at 10 bushels per acre. Oats have done much better and show a yield of 20 bushels per acre, rye is given at 11 bushels and barley at seventeen bushels per acre as a State average.

Corn is reported as looking well and with seasonable weather this crop bids fair to be a good one. Condition of same is given at 87 per cent.

Tobacco as a whole is doing well though some complaint is made of blight on the plants. The condition of burley is given as 87 per cent, while dark tobacco shows at 90 per cent.

A large increase in acreage of hemp is reported this year and the condition of this crop is given at 97 per cent.

Garden conditions are good and the estimate on same is given at 94 per cent.

Soy beans show an increase of 87 per cent and condition of 87 per cent, while cow peas show acreage of 86 per cent and condition of 87 per cent.

The condition of live stock is good. While hog cholera is reported as being prevalent in some localities, no heavy losses have been sustained, due to the fact that anti-hog cholera serum is being more generally used and more attention is being paid to the feeding of hogs and the sanitary conditions surrounding them. The average condition of live stock is as follows: Horses, 94 per cent; cattle 96 per cent: hogs 93 per cent; sheep, 95 per cent; chickens, 93 per cent; turkeys, 84 per cent; ducks, 94 per cent.

A shortage of Blue Grass seed is reported. The condition of Blue Grass is given at 81 per cent: clover, 92 per cent; orchard grass 91 per cent, and alfalfa, 94 per cent. The first cutting of alfalfa gives an average yield for the State of 1.17 tons per acre. In some localities much of the first cutting was lost owing to the heavy rains immediately after cutting.

Conditions of fruits are not satisfactory with the exception of the blackberry crop, which is said to be the largest in years. Apples are falling off badly. Condition of apples is given at 71 per cent; peaches, 71 per cent; pears, 68 per cent; plums 78 per cent; grapes, 92 per cent, and blackberries, 99 per cent.

In summing up the report there is every probability of good crops of corn and tobacco. Farmers are urged to continue the cultivation of the growing crops. Seasonable weather from now on will yet make this year a profitable one to the farmers of Kentucky.

Some individual reports show as follows:

Breckinridge county reports too much rain; corn backward; complaint of small green bugs in corn fields.

Hardin county, good hay harvest but too wet to be seasonable.

Webster, apples and peaches are very good.

Henderson, wheat threshing begun; only about half a crop expected.

Pendleton, wet weather has retarded growing of crops; fruit crop short.

Henry, crops bid fair to be good complaint of clover meadows being taken by white-top; corn and tobacco doing well.

Grant, weather has been unfavorable until lately for growing crops.

Lewis, corn is late; tobacco is doing well.

Carter, corn is late; tobacco is doing well.

Mercer, increased acreage in hemp, cow peas and soy beans pastures fine.

Trees Along the Roadway.

When the glare of a white water-bound macadam road is relieved by a patch of shade, or the heat and odor of an oiled highway lessened by the spreading branches of roadside trees, the traveler is delighted. But he thinks of shade as something for which to be thankful when it is found, and not as something which ought to be provided, and to which he has a right.

Tree planting along every public road could be done at moderate cost. The return upon the investment would be certain. It would be large. The highway would be beautified. Travel in summer would be made much more agreeable. A drive in the shade is comfortable at any time of the day and at any time in summer. But driving over a shadeless road in midsummer often is all but intolerable.

The Philippines Review publishes a full page picture of the newly constructed "Naic-Indang road in the province of Cavite." At regular intervals and not far apart are shade trees well protected by tree boxes. Setting them out and protecting them was a part of the construction plan. That should be the case wherever a road is built. It should be part of the plan of improvement wherever a road is improved. But before we get shady roads we must abolish by law and by enforcement of the law the ruthless cutting of the branches of roadside trees by telephone companies.

"Automobiles rides of hours and days over first-class roads and first-class bridges and through varied scenes of great natural beauty" add to the joy of living in the Philippines, according to the Review. And trees are planted along the roads to add to the natural beauty, and for the comfort of travelers.

There are thousands of miles of roads in Kentucky leading thru scenes of natural beauty. But where the road is oldest there is no evidence of systematic tree planting. And one of the commonest and most regrettable spectacles is the mutilation of the trees which chance to stand where they spread welcome shade upon the road.

Trees are needed along Kentucky roads as much as they are in the Philippines. There is not a great deal of perceptible difference between midsummer sun in tKentucky and the sun of the blazing tropics. Road making under American auspices is only a few years old in the islands. It has been a boasted evidence of culture in Kentucky for a century. —C. J.

The Latest Submarine Triumph

Ever since the beginning of the war, the submarine has been interfering with accepted theories about sea power and accepted interpretations of international law. But the submarine has done nothing more spectacular than the trans-Atlantic voyage of the German under-sea fighter "Deutschland."

The arrival of this submarine merchant ship in an American port is a striking advertisement of German enterprise, German efficiency and German determination. If the Deutschland proves to be the first of a fleet of similar vessels engaged in the Atlantic carrying trade, the moral and material advantage to Germany must be considerable.

Germans, and not a few German-Americans, have complained bitterly because the Allies were able to purchase munitions and raw material in the United States, while Germany was shut out from our markets. They claimed that our attitude was in violation of the spirit of neutrality. The American Government and probably a majority of the American people, on the other hand have held that the Allies were able to trade with us because they had won control of the sea; that they had won it without our assistance; and that the Germans, if they could break the sea power of their enemies, would find our markets equally open to them.

The sending of a German submarine to the United States is in effect a tribute to the real neutrality of our position. If these undersea vessels are able to carry from American harbors cargoes of rubber and nickel, and later on of powder and shells, it will be out of the question for Germany to say that she has had less than a square deal from Uncle Sam.—Editorial Cincinnati Times Star, Republican.

Meet After 54 Years.

We take the following from a Spencer county, Ind., exchange:

Fifty-four years ago April 6th two tired soldiers sat on a log on Shiloh battlefield and ate crackers. The smoke had lifted, the Johnnies were skedaddling—thoroughly whipped—and these two friends who had not met since enlistment, sat and talked and ate crackers. They were A. N. Jett and C. A. Hutchinson.

Tuesday they met again, Capt. Jett having come from Carrollton, Ky., to see Capt. Hutchinson And "Hutch," as a reminder, served crackers and water as the first course, the crackers being served on pieces of bark. The two were working in a mill at Carrollton at the outbreak of the war. Jett enlisted in the 13th Ky. and Hutchinson crossed the river and joined the 52d Illinois.

Not till Shiloh did they meet again after the second day's fight, Jett was with Buell's division and on Sunday, April 5, they marched 40 miles to reinforce Grant. When they met on the field Hutchinson said he was half starved and Jett fed him crackers. Since then they had not met, though they corresponded.

Capt. Jett, 13th Ky., and W. S. Mead and the late J. W. Anderson, of the 6th Ind., were in the same brigade and participated in numerous battles together. The meeting of these old comrades this week was in the nature of a reunion.—Carrollton Democrat.

Want to Connect Two Counties.

Atty. R. B Brown, of Warsaw, headed a delagation of Gallatin county citizens who attended the Boone Fiscal Court, last week, seeking to have Boone county join with Gallatin county in building a bridge across South Fork creek near Berkshire. They claim that the bridge would connect the two counties roads at that point, each road being an important thoroughfare accommodating a very large inter-county travel. The proposition will doubtless be taken up by this county in due time and the necessity of the bridge decided upon. There is no question but the bridge would accommodate a considerable section of the lower part of this county as well as being a great convenience to a large slice of Gallatin county territory.

No Harm in Blackberries.

The death of a boy in Louisville is attributed to "eating wild black berries." All of which is the met oet nonsense. No blackberry, wild or tame, ever was known to harm a boy, and millions of boys have eaten them in quantities which no mathematician could number. As a matter of fact there is no more healthful fruit than the black berry and the average boy cannot eat enough of them to make him sick. There may have been something on the blackberries that made the boy ill, or he may have eaten something else that was poisonous. There is nothing fatal or even harmful about the pure unadulterated blackberry. — Frankfort Journal.

Fine Crop of Tobacco.

Fred Stucy has a patch of five acres of tobacco at his home ajoining Ghent that is ready to top at sixteen to eighteen leaves. J. B. Young drove through from Verona, Monday, in his machine and says that in the seventy-five miles drive his obcervations were taht the acreage of tobacco is not as much as last year, and the condition is, as a general thing, poor, poor as it lacked the proper cultivation, and some patches looked as though they had been given up to grass and weeds.—Carrollton News.

The Lost Was Found.

When Elmer Kirkpatrick was taking a load of calves, eggs, etc., to the city, last Friday, he happened to discover one of the calves had got out of the truck, going over several crates of eggs without doing any damage. Retracing the journey a mile or two the calf, uninjured was found quietly grazing on the road side. It took some time to capture the animal and reload it in the truck.

SUBMARINE SCHOOL OPENED

Great Increase in Fleet of Undersea Boats Makes It Necessary to Have New Training Institution.

Because of the great increase that is being made in the number of submarines in the U. S. navy, Uncle Sam has established a new school of navy officers. In this school, which is located at New London, Conn., officers will be given instruction in the theoretical and practical working of submarines.

There were only 18 submarines in active service in the United States navy in 1913 and assigned to these boats there were only 19 officers 13 of whom were ensigns, who had been out of the naval academy less than three years.

It is planned that officers when they graduate from the submarine school, shall be appointed to subordinate positions on board boats and be placed in command only after they have been trained and have proved their aptitude for sub marine work in subordinate positions. It is believed that this arrangement will assure the best handling of the submarine engines and betteries now existing and perhaps aid in the development of the machinery which is far from perfect.

The Horses Point of View In Summer.

If a horse could talk he would have many things to say when summer comes.

He would tell his driver that he feels the heat on a very warm day quite as much as if he could read a thermometer.

He would say: "Give me a little water many times a day when the heat is intense, but not much at a time if I am warm; if you want me to keep well don't water me too soon after I have eaten."

He would say: "When the sun is hot and I am working let me breathe once in a while in the shade of some house or tree; if you have to leave me on the street leave me in the shade if possible. Anything upon my head, between my ears, to keep off the sun is bad for me if the air cannot circulate freely underneath it."

He would talk of slippery streets and the sensations of falling on cruel city cobblestones—the pressure of the load pushing him to the fall, the bruised knees and wrenched joints, and the feel of the driver's lash.

He would tell of the luxury of a fly net when at work and of a fly blanket when standing still in fly season, and of the boon to him of screens in the stable to keep out the insects that bite and sting.

He would plead for as cool and comfortable a stable as possible in which to rest at night after a day's work under the hot sun.

He would suggest that living through a warm night in a narrow stall neither properly cleaned nor bedded is suffering for him and poor economy for the owner.

He would say that turning the hose on him is altogether to risky a thing to do unless you are looking for a sick horse. Spraying the legs and feet when he is not too warm on a hot day he would find agreeable.

He would say: "Please sponge out my eyes and nose and dock dock when I come in tired and dusty at night, and also sponge me with clean, cool water under the collar and saddle of the harness."

KY. LAWYERS URGE REFORM

Bar Association Holds Annual Session in Louisville.

Louisville, Ky.—A new law, looking to the abolition of "the twin evil of ambulance chasing and settlement chasing in personal injury cases," was proposed at the annual meeting of the Kentucky State Bar Association, in the report made by the Law Reform Committee here. Another recommendation of the same committee calls for changing the system whereby law students who do their reading in Louisville and neighboring cities are permitted to go to LaGrange, in Oldham co., to be granted to practice after farcial examinations. Repeal of the so-called "Hickman practice act" is urged in the report which was submitted by Chairman T. L. Edelen, of Frankfort.

Provisions of the proposed new statute to end ambulance chasing leave it to the court to determine whether contingent fees fixed by attorneys accepting damage cases are just and reasonable and prevent attorneys from suing to collect such fees when it is shown the contract was solicited by the attorney or his agent.

In Bourbon county dry weather last week had a good effect on the tobacco and wheat crops, but the truck gardens have suffered slightly. KEEP LITTLE CHICKS CLEAN Cleanliness Must Be Observed Before Youngster Leaves Nest—Use Insect Powder.

Without absolute cleanliness and plenty of sunshine it is impossible to obtain perfect success in raising young chickens. Cleanliness must begin before the young chicken leaves its nest, in fact it should begin with the making of the nest and the placing of the eggs therein.

The nest boxes should be filled about two inches deep with loose earth or sod and new, clean straw should be used for the top filling. Before the hen is allowed to sit on the eggs she should be thoroughly dusted with powder, care being taken that the powder reaches every portion of the body, particularly under the legs and wings. This process should be repeated every ten days, the last dusting to be given just before the chicks are to come out.

As soon as the young chicks appear —before they are two days old—a tiny bit of vaseline should be rubbed with the finger on the head and under each wing. Care must be used not to smear them too much as it will work an injury to the tender chickens.

Young chickens should never be allowed to run in an old yard, that is, one that has not been thoroughly renovated either by growing a crop of grass, oats or rye, or one that has been thoroughly spaded up, raked and rolled down. Of course very few chicken raisers go to this trouble but nevertheless if one is to have perfect success this is absolutely necessary.

If young chickens have been treated as described above and are given the run of a clean yard and the opportunity to get out into the garden and in the grass they will not be troubled with gapes or vermin. When young chicks once become infested with lice it is almost impossible to rid them of the pests. If the large head lice are allowed to get a start on young chickens they will kill them in a very short time.

GOOD TREATMENT FOR COLDS

Equal Parts of Zenoleum and Kerosene Are Recommended—Give Epsom Salts in Mash.

Labored breathing, wheezing, rattling in the throat, gaping and sneezing, are symptoms of colds in the flock. When birds showing these symptoms are discovered they should be removed from the flock and treated. Use equal parts of zenoleum and kerosene or equal parts of kerosene and sweet oil, immersing the heads of the birds in the mixture or injecting small amounts of it into the nostrils and mouth. Epsom salts should be given in a moist mash also, while the birds are under treatment.

FATTEN FOWLS FOR MARKET

Shut Up Early Hatched Cockrels and Commence Feeding Them Some Fattening Ration.

It is the fattened cockerel that brings the most on the market, and cockerels running on range develop bone and muscle first, so if you have some early hatched cockerels that you plan on marketing, get them shut up early and commence to feed a fattening ration of ground corn and buttermilk or sour milk.

MAXIMUM GROWTH OF GEESE

Best Development of Fowls Secured by Feeding in Addition to What They Pick Up.

While it is true that under especially favorable conditions young geese will make fair growth if compelled to forage for their living, they will do [illegible] better and be more profitable all [illegible] of the season if they are fed [illegible] can make their [illegible] secure their [illegible] coal.

HINTS FOR TURKEY RAISERS

One of Greatest Difficulties In Successfully Handling Fowls Is Lack of Hardiness.

(By A. BASS, Minnesota Experiment Station.)

Lack of vitality and hardiness in the stock is one of the greatest difficulties in successfully handling turkeys. Bronze turkeys are the largest and hardiest of all domestic varieties.

Here are some pointers for turkey raisers:

1. Llce cause great loss in turkeys. Kill them on the hens and on the young turkeys with insect powder, applying once a week when cooped up.

2. Turkeys do best when kept separate from chickens. If the two are kept together the turkeys are likely to take chicken diseases.

3. The growth of turkeys is rapid. Give plenty of nutritious and easily digested food. For the first five days feed four quarts of bread crumbs and one part of boiled eggs. Feed one meal a day of rolled oats and give all the sour milk they will drink. Change gradually, and in three weeks feed six parts of wheat and two parts of corn, with rolled oats once a day. From the time the birds are ten weeks old until maturity give: Wheat, ten parts;

Healthy and Active Type.

whole oats, two parts, increasing to ten parts in two weeks; cracked corn, ten parts.

4. Access to fine gravel, crushed shells and broken charcoal is necessary.

5. Give plenty of green food. It prevents digestive troubles.

6. Black or red pepper and ginger in food or drinking water aids in overcoming chills and prevents bowel trouble, especially on cold, damp days. Plenty of grit and oyster shells, together with well-selected, wholesome food, eliminates this necessity in most cases.

7. If young turkeys get wet, take them to a warm room until thoroughly warm and dry.

8. The more exercise the better. Always give free range in dry weather if possible.

9. Dampness, lice and filth are deadly foes to young turkeys.

TIME TO SELL THE BROILERS

Surplus Cockerels of Quickly Maturing Breeds May Be Marketed to Good Advantage.

(By A. C. SMITH, Minnesota Experiment Station.)

Surplus cockerels, particularly those of the higher and more quickly maturing breeds, may be marketed now to advantage. Poultry raisers, particularly those not largely engaged in the occupation, market their surplus cockerels sooner or later. All realize that cockerels of the lighter breeds become a nuisance very early in life and for that reason it is very desirable to get rid of such at the broiler age. This is comparatively easy to do, as broilers are used at all seasons in the larger cities. So active, in fact, is the demand for chicks under two pounds that often a price of at least two cents a pound above other quotations is offered for them.

While chicks of the broiler size are always salable, it must be borne in mind that they will not always bring the same prices, and that the present is the time of high prices, which—at the top about July 1—drop soon afterwards, and with accelerated rapidity at the season advances.

BEST FEED FOR YOUNG BIRDS

Ducklings and Goslings Should Be Given Mashes Mixed Crumbly, but Not Too Wet.

Don't try to raise ducklings and goslings on dry feed, but give them mashes mixed crumbly, but not wet. A good mash for those more than a week old is one part cornmeal and two parts wheat bran, mixed with milk or water and containing a little grit and a little finely granulated charcoal.

PIGEONS SELECT OWN MATES

Breeders Should Be Selected With Definite Object—Inbreeding Is Not Desirable.

Pigeons usually mate in pairs and remain constant through life, although the mating may be changed if desired. Unmated pigeons, especially males in the loft, are a source of much trouble, and usually prevent profitable results. Pigeons are usually mated at from five to nine months of age. There are two methods of mating, natural and forced. Under natural mating the pigeons usually are allowed to select their own mates, which is indicated by the male billing and driving the female. Experienced breeders, however, are occasionally deceived by their actions in selecting sex. In forced mating, as in natural mating, the breeders should be selected with a definite object, using males strong in points in which the females are weak. It is sometimes advisable to break up the mating between old pigeons and young birds, although these pairs often give good results. Where matings produce undesirable qualities, it is necessary to remate or cull ont the flock. Continued close inbreeding is not desirable and many try to avoid any inbreeding. Where pigeons are banded, the female on one foot and the male on the other, it is fairly easy to regulate inbreeding.

MOST POPULAR MARKET DUCK

Pekin Is Favored for Marketing While Indian Runner Takes Lead for Egg Production.

Duck raising is one of the most profitable branches of the poultry business.

For market purposes alone the Pekin duck is popular. For eggs the Indian Runner takes the lead.

Ducks are never troubled with lice neither do they have cholera or roup.

Pekin Duck.

They lay a large egg. These eggs have a very fine flavor.

You will find the eggs not as fertile if you let the ducks grow thin.

Give the ducklings plenty of air and stuff them with feed. Sprinkle sand over their feed as this will be a sure way of them getting as much as they need.

Watch that the ducks have suitable attention and regular feed. A few well cared for pays better than too many that are slighted.

CHICKS RELISH GREEN FEED

Fresh Vegetables Should Be Supplied to Youngsters—Composition of Good Mash.

The little chicks must be supplied with a quantity of green feed or fresh vegetables after they are a few days old. A good rule would be to have one-third of the ration green feed, one-third cracked grains and one-third mash.

Ground oats, bran and middlings in equal parts, make a very good mash for chicks. There is nothing magic or medicinal about the prepared chick feeds.

Chicks that become injured, and especially if in a manner to become bloody, should be promptly removed from the brooder. Chicks are strongly cannibalistic if once started, and will quickly tear to pieces an injured chick if they once get a taste of the blood. Smear tar over any injured or bleeding spots.

A woman who can laugh outside when she is crying inside, has a great accomplishment.

It's the songs ye sing and the smiles ye wear
That makes the sunshine everywhere.

JUST COMMON THINGS.

The ordinary vegetable may by a little manipulation, and combining with other foods, make a dish quite ont of the ordinary. Here is one worth trying:

Pumpkin Scrapple.—Take a cupful of pumpkin pulp, stir it into a quart of boiling water with a half cupful each of cornmeal and hominy, well mixed, and a half teaspoonful of salt. Cook slowly one hour, stirring frequently, then add a cupful of broken hickorynut meats, pour into a shallow pan, making the scrapple about two inches thick. When cool and hard, cut into half-inch slices and fry in hot fat. Serve with maple sirup.

Turnip Soup.—Mix together a pint each of hot mashed turnips and potato, add a quart of scalded milk. In another dish place four tablespoonfuls of butter, and when melted and bubbling hot add two tablespoonfuls of flour, cook and add to the milk with three tablespoonfuls of scraped onion, two teaspoonfuls of salt and a few dashes of cayenne. Cool 20 minutes in a double boiler, then strain and serve. Sprinkle with grated cheese over the top.

Turnips, like cabbage, should be cooked in an uncovered vessel to make them less strong and more wholesome to eat.

Diced turnips, cooked until tender, then served with melted butter and lemon juice, makes a most tasty dish.

Peas With Peanuts.—Mix a pint of black peas with a pint of peanuts, chopped fine. Season well with salt, pepper and sage and place half the mixture in a buttered baking dish. On top place four slices of toast which have been softened in hot cream. Place the rest of the pea and nut mixture on top and ponr over a half cupful of cream. Bake slowly an hour and a half. Serve with cranberry sauce. This will be a good meat substitute.

Salsify makes a most delicious soup, so do carrots. Cook them until tender, put through a sieve and then add to any stock or hot milk thickened with butter and flour cooked together.

THE STATE PRESS.

Henderson, Ky.—County Judge Young has appointed seven road inspectors, who will begin inspecting the county roads.

Bowling Green, July 15.—Allen county is rapidly developing its oil fields. Within the past few days two new wells have been brought in, one, it is said, proving a gusher of 400 barrels in 24 hours.

Carlisle.—A lively fight for the position of road engineer of Nicholas county is expected. Road Engineer Joseph W. Williams resigned and the county judge will have to appoint and the Fiscal Court confirm his successor. It is reported that there are six candidates for the place.

Franklin.—Perhaps never before in the history of Simpson county was the grower offered $1.25 a bushel for wheat, at threshing time. The market opened at $1, but has advanced gradually until now $1.25 is being offered. At least half a dozen buyers are on the market for the crop produced in this county.

Carlisle, July 9.—County Attorney W. R. Darragh reports that he has received a message notifying him that the Rev. Dr. J. O. A. Vaught, a Methodist minister of this city, is seriously ill in Los Angeles, Cal., where he is spending his vacation with his family. Dr. Vaught is pastor of the Methodist church, South, here.

A total gain of 2,410 in the scholastic population of Kentucky is shown by the census of 1915, the 1915 census of Louisville included. The white scolastic population increased, accrding to the census 2,242, while the colored population decreased. The rural and graded schools outside of cities gained 2,015, the whites increasing 2,269 and the colored losing 1,224. The opposite was true in cities, Louisville not included, no census being taken there this year, and the white scholastic population of the independent cities dropped 27, while the colored census increased 365.

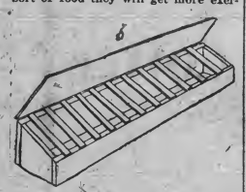
MIXED POULTRY FEEDS

Best Results Obtained by Studying Needs of Flock.



One Essential to Laying Hens Is Exercise—Many Methods Resorted to in Addition to Scattering Grain Among Straw.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

Hens will do better on mixed feeds than on any other. A quart of cornmeal alone will not give as good results as a pint and a half of cornmeal mixed with some other food such as cooked potatoes.

A great variety of chicken feed is manufactured, consisting of mixtures of various grains, dried ground bone, dried blood, beef scraps and such matter, but the best results can probably be obtained by studying the needs of one's flock and supplying them at first hand.

Exercise is of course very essential to laying hens when confined during the laying season. To obtain this many methods are resorted to in addition to scattering grain among the straw as for instance suspending a cabbage or a bunch of beets about two feet above the floor in order to induce the hens to jump up to reach it. If the hens are very hungry for this sort of food they will get more exercise by jumping after it, but our experience is that when fed a moderate amount of clover or ground alfalfa they have no taste for any other kind of green food.

Dry Mash Hopper.

Nothing equals cut clover for feeding the chickens. Alfalfa comes next, but clover stands at the head and if this is fed regularly and in moderate quantities it will take the place of all other green feeds.

Wet versus dry mash is a question that has received much attention from experimenters during the past few years. The general consensus of opinion at the present time is that the dry mash is the most desirable. Many practical poultrymen, however, still prefer the wet mash. Labor is one of the greatest problems that the poultry raiser has to consider, consequently, if he can find a method which will be labor saving and yet give results, it is worthy of consideration. Dry mash fed in hoppers is easier to handle than any kind of wet mash. Hoppers are now made which are rat-proof, sanitary and convenient. These can be filled once a week and are found satisfactory. Experiments have proved that eggs produced by hens fed a dry mash are more fertile than those laid by hens fed a wet mash. Wet mash is slightly more forcing, is inconvenient to feed, and requires more care in keeping the feeding vessels clean.

HORSES ALWAYS IN DEMAND

Time Is Not Recalled When Farmer-Breeders Were So Well Cleaned Up on Draft Animals.

Like old wheat in the bin are good draft horses of salable age. Both are ready money whenever the farmer wants to cash them in. Reliable advices from all sections of the horse-breeding country state that the time is not recalled when farmer-breeders were so well cleaned up on their market horses, nor at such satisfactory prices to the producer.

It is highly significant that some of the big firms of the cities are again in evidence about the horse markets. The man in the country who already enjoys a ready market for the good ones should prepare himself to supply a still greater demand and at still more remunerative figures.

ADVANCE MADE BY TRACTORS

No Other Piece of Farm Machinery Has Adjusted Itself So Quickly to Farm Conditions.

Probably no other line of agricultural machinery has made such marked advance and adjustment to actual farming conditions during the past few years as have the tractors. It is now possible to purchase tractors of practically any desired size, weight and power, adapted to all classes of farming, from the 80-acre field to the farm or ranch comprising many thousand acres. The price of the smaller machines is within reach of farmers of moderate means, and it is, consequently, in this direction that the greatest improvements are being scored.

WORLD'S RECORD FOR MILK

Present Production by Improved Dairy Cow More Than Thirty Thousand Pounds Per Year.

The wild cow gave only enough milk to support its young. Proof of what man has been able to do in improving dairy cattle is found in the fact that the present world's record for milk production is more than thirty thousand pounds per year.

USE CARE WITH STRAWBERRY

Easy Matter to Grow Crop, but Another Thing to Sell—Pack in Attractive Manner.

It is an easy matter to grow a crop of strawberries, but quite another thing to sell them profitably. Strawberries to sell must be packed carefully in boxes and placed on the market soon thereafter.

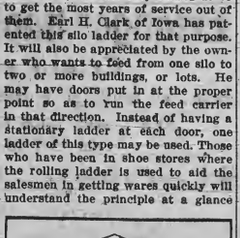
Few towns are well supplied with strawberries during the strawberry season. Any individual who will plant one to five acres will find a ready market for all his product at home. For home market strawberries should be very nearly ripe when picked; but for shipping they should be picked a little greener.

It is an easy matter to pick a small area, but when several acres have to be picked over every day, it is not so easy. Shortage of help is the main trouble.

When picking for shipping a field should be picked every day, if possible, but for home market to pick over the same ground every other day is often enough. It is well to see that the boxes are well filled.

LICE KILLER IS INEXPENSIVE

Rope Saturated With Kerosene and Fastened Around Post Will Prove Quite Effective.



A Washington farmer has found the following a good scheme for killing lice on hogs. Set a round post in the ground and leave it three feet above the ground. Fasten a tin can on top. Fasten a large rope in the can and let it run out over the top down the post and run it round and round the post at the right height for the hogs to rub. Fill the can with kerosene. Soak the rope first with kerosene. The kerosene will follow the rope out over the can, and the hogs will do the rest.

A good plan is to make a large shade near the oiler. This should be large enough so that the sun will not shine on much of the ground and high enough so that a man can walk under. It can be made cheaply by setting posts in the ground and covering them with brush and old hay or straw. You won't need any "hog wallow" with this arrangement.

LADDER BUILT AROUND SILO

Arrangement Will Be Appreciated by Farmer Who Wishes to Get into Various Doors at Top.

Silo owners often want to paint their silos; at least they should do so to get the most years of service out of them. Earl H. Clark of Iowa has patented this silo ladder for that purpose. It will also be appreciated by the owner who wants to feed from one silo to two or more buildings, or lots. He may have doors put in at the proper point so as to run the feed carrier in that direction. Instead of having a stationary ladder at each door, one ladder of this type may be used. Those who have been in shoe stores where the rolling ladder is used to aid the salesmen in getting wares quickly will understand the principle at a glance at the picture. Rollers and a round track at the top and bottom of the silo permit the ladder to be slid around the silo.—Farming Business.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

A well-grown tree lasts a lifetime.

A change of food is better than mixing it.

There is no color of horse so insensible to heat as the sorrel.

Manage the sheep and the pastures so the flock can have a fresh, short bite.

• • •

Don't let your supply of insect powder run short. Use it regularly and liberally.

• • •

When cream is not ripened evenly, the full amount of butter is not recovered from it.

If a separator is used, do not let the cream stand around just anywhere to absorb all sorts of odors.

If more than one ram is kept they may run in a pasture by themselves. Never let them run with the flock.

• • •

Ducklings and goslings should not be allowed to swim, for they will do better if they have no water except to drink.

• • •

Plan a systematic crop rotation, and be sure that some legume is a part of it. Business farming requires that a good crop rotation be practiced.

PRODUCTION OF THYMOL FROM HORSEMINT

Bed of Horsemint Grown for Seed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The production of thymol from horsemint may be, under favorable circumstances, a profitable commercial undertaking, according to a recent publication of the United States department of agriculture, Bulletin 372. Thymol, which is extensively used in medicine, was formerly imported from northern Europe where it is manufactured from seed grown in northern India. The European war, however, has reduced the importations of this substance from 18,000 pounds in 1914 to a little more than 2,000 in 1915. To make up this deficit it is believed that thymol might be manufactured from improved horsemint plants with which the department of agriculture has been experimenting for some time.

Horsemint is found wild on light sandy soils over the entire region from southern New York to Florida, and westward to Wisconsin, Kansas and Texas, and it is probable that it will thrive under cultivation over the same area. From 20 to 30 pounds of oil per acre should be obtained from a planting, according to the investigations of the department, and a little less than 70 per cent of this oil will be thymol. The yield of thymol per acre of horsemint, therefore, is estimated at from a little less than 13 pounds from first year plantings to a little less than 20 pounds for subsequent years. The average price of thymol for a number of years prior to the European war was about $2 a pound.

The cost of producing the thymol will depend to a great measure upon whether the horsemint is grown in connection with other oil-yielding plants for which a distilling apparatus is maintained. Unless this is done, it is said, it is not probable that the profits will be sufficient to warrant anyone engaging in the industry. Excluding such items as land rent, taxes, depreciation, upkeep and interest on the distilling plant, it is estimated that thymol can be produced at an approximate cost of $23 per acre the first year, and $19 per acre thereafter. These figures include the growing of the plants, fertilization, cultivation, harvesting and distilling. A plantation of horsemint will not have to be replanted oftener than once in five years at the most, and by returning the distilled herb to the soil, a material reduction in cost of fertilization can be made after the first year.

Fuller information in regard to methods of cultivation, harvesting and distilling are contained in Bulletin 372 which has already been mentioned.

LONG LIFE OF FENCE POSTS

Osage Orange Leads With Thirty Years—Cement Will Last Forty-eight Years.

The average life of fence posts from the following kinds of woods is: Osage orange, 30 years; locust, 23¾; red cedar, 20½; mulberry, 17½; catalpa, 15½; burr oak, 15 1-3; chestnut, 14¾; white cedar, 14 1-3; walnut, 11½; white oak, 11½; pine, 11¼; tamarack, 10½; cherry, 10 1-3; hemlock, 9; sassafras, 8.9; elm, 8¾; ash, 8½; red oak, 7; willow, 6¼. The number of years that a fence post will last should be considered in the price paid for it. Oftentimes for a few cents additional a much longer-lived post can be secured, making it much cheaper in the long run.

If the bark is left on a fence post, it will rot much faster than if it is removed.

It is estimated that the average life of a cement post is 48 years and of a steel post 30 years.

ENEMIES OF ALFALFA PLANT

Not Worth While for Farmer to Waste Expensive Seed on Sour or Alkaline Soils.

Sour soil and alkali are enemies of alfalfa. Most sour soils are sandy soils where the drainage is too good and the lime has been leached out. They can be sweetened by adding ground limestone where this process is not too expensive and leaching lessened by incorporating plenty of humus in the soil. This can be done by applying stable manure or plowing under green manure in the form of growing crops, etc.

Alkali soils usually are badly drained and can be corrected by supplying this factor. It is not worth while to waste alfalfa seed on sour or alkaline soils. If they cannot be corrected, raise some other crop.

ALFALFA AND WHITE GRUBS

Excellent Crop to Alternate With Corn, as It Clears Soil of Aphis and Other Insects.

It is claimed that the corn-root aphis, white grubs and other insects which caused so much damage to the corn, will not feed upon alfalfa roots. For this reason alfalfa is considered a very excellent crop to alternate with corn, as it clears the land of corn enemies.

Improvement Possible.

Any man who will read and work can double his milk and butter yield if it is below 150 pounds of butterfat a year, and it is possible for him to do it in a surprisingly short time.

EXPERIMENT NOW AND THEN

New Crops and Methods Should Be Given Thorough Trial—Try a Little of Anything New.

(By BREEZE BOYACK, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

Why not try a new variety of your main crop? Do not wait for someone to do your experimenting for you. The successful business man is the one who is first in the field. He tries out carefully, new methods or new products. The successful farmer is first in his field.

If you have never raised a forage crop, try one. If you are growing Defiance spring wheat why not try a macaroni wheat? Perhaps another common variety such as Marquis or Red Fife would do well.

Of course, if your community has settled upon a variety as a community enterprise, as is done with peas, potatoes, apples, alfalfa, etc., it is not wise to depart from it.

Wheat Field in Colorado.

Always try just a little of anything new—a quarter acre, a half acre, or even an acre. Give it just average ground—it is better right alongside the standard crop. Don't baby it. Make it prove its worth, if it has any.

The pleasure of trying out for oneself the value of a crop is the best return. Do not make your whole farm an experiment farm or you will surely fail. But a little experiment now and then is relished by successful men.

Proper Feed for Pigs.

Feed the pig all he can eat without squealing. This can be done only by watching him eat and knowing just how much he needs.

Special Notice.

The Farmers' Mutual Telephone Directory says, I handle any kind of rubber tire; and that I have the exclusive agency of the Republic Rubber Tires. That contract just cost me $200 of which of some of my customers will attest. I guaranteed those tires and I filled same to the letter. Now, right here I do most solemnly promise and swear that I will never again change the old and tried for any new thing whatsoever. Furthermore, that I will not use any Rubber Tire except Kelly's Springfield—the first rubber tire ever made and the best. I ought to know for surely I paid last year to find out. It is just like a boy changing the old girl for the new or a man leaving his old and tried wife for a new one. Now, isn't it a fact that they always go back to the old and tried love, is it not so boys? That's what I have done with Kelly's Springfield Rubber Tire—gone back to my old love. While they cost me more money they will cost my customers $12.00 per set or $2.00 per tire; these tires I give a guarantee on for being as represented. They will not stuff out ner, will they peel, but will wear smooth like a good tire should.

Now, in regards to repainting: I have tried to get a quick system and do good work, but I find it a failure so I give it up and must stick to the old system. All my work I guarantee to be as represented. I do anything in the carriage line. Bring me your work if you want it done right. I solicit your trade.

LATCHSTRING IS OUT

For Moose, New Kentucky Democratic Chairman Writes.

Lexington, July 5.—In accepting the Chairmanship of the Democratic State Campaign Committee Congressman J. Campbell Cantrill today addressed an open letter to the State Central and Executive Committees. Parts of the letter follows:

"I will not be the Chairman of any faction or division of the Democratic party in managing the campaign. I expect the full and hearty support of every citizen in Kentucky who desires the re-election of President Wilson, and I will so conduct the campaign as to be worthy of that support.

"It would be an insult to the intelligence of the Progressives to say that they will go back to the Republican party, and we cordially invite them into the Democratic household. We will put some fresh logs on the fire and give them a comfortable seat at the hearth and make them feel at home.

"The Republicans in Kentucky are in high glee because they expect the support of the voters of German extraction. This is an open insult to the intelligence and patriotism of the voters in Kentucky of German descent. I know many of these men, and they are as patriotic as any class of our citizens, and I certainly expect the support of those who have been Democrats heretofore and of those who love the flag of the Stars and Stripes better than any other flag."

Party In Bad Shape.

The democratic party in Kentucky is not in her old time trim for making a hard political fight for the presidential candidates, Mckeering and backbiting has caused many good, substantial democrats of the State to become disgusted with the doings of many of the socalled party leaders and it will be harder than ever before to interest the rank and file in the coming election. The great common people have gotten tired of listening to the pie hunter and the professional grafter who comes around every campaign to whoop the boys up for the ticket, and, who, immediately after the election, folds his arms and says to the powers that be, look at me, see what I did. I am a political wonder, I carried my county for the ticket.

Kentucky is largely democratic and the spirit of true democracy is stronger with the boys in the trenches than it is with the fellow who carries the torch in the procession to attract attention in order that he may run for office or be appointed to some moneyed position.

The State will go democratic but it will be carried by the democratic boys, who expect no bouquets and ask no reward. It will be carried by the gallant democrats who love and admire Woodrow Wilson and Marshall for the work they have done for the masses and the stand they have taken in the interest of the laboring class. The party politician of the State had better die himself to the woods and hide out for his days are to be few and full of trouble. The people of the State are going to relegate him to the shades of oblivion, unless they get together and cut out their cindictive, slanderous assaults upon oneanother, which is running the democratic party in this State.—Owen County Democrat.

Having Her Troubles.

Breckinridge county is a very large county, a rather rough county and a poor county in taxable property. It has, perhaps more miles of public roads than any other county in the state. We have been working our roads by taxation for nearly twenty years, and while it is more equitable than the old system of working altogether by free labor, it has been clearly demonstrated that with the amount of available money raised for this purpose we can never materially improve the roads by relying on taxation alone. Taxation is much better for the farmer than all free labor because all of the corporate wealth and all of the wealth in incorporated towns bear their proportion of the burden, while under the old system only certain males between certain ages living in the country did the road work. So road tax is a fixture and should be. But it is unreasonable and unfair to expect our little mite of a road tax to keep the road in repair, to say nothing of constructing or improving them. In fact such an idea does not make good nonsense.—Record-Press.

Bees in a Buggy.

Mrs. Fred Donaldson, of the Ogdon neighborhood, made arrangements Saturday to come to Mt. Olivet shopping, and when ready to get into her buggy heard a strange buzzing sounds under the seat of the buggy. Close examination was made and finally under the seat of the buggy a swarm of bees was found. Mrs. Donaldson secured another buggy in which to complete her trip.—Mt. Olivet Democrat.

Conserving Efforts.

In nothing the frequent formation of associations to promote the welfare of some phase or phases of commercial, civic or social life it would seem that perhaps there were getting to be too many of these movements for the best efficiency and that it would be worth the while to pause and consider if there are not already enough of these organizations to take care of all the problems present and probable.

In no direction is the tendency to start new movements more apparent than in the business world. Every week or so announcement is made of the formation of some new club or the like, with the object of aiding business. The wonder is how business men keep track of the many clubs and associations dealing with different features of commercial activity. And then the cost of maintaining all these organizations is no inconsiderable item.

The motives behind these organizations are not questioned. No doubt practically all of them spring from a desire to do good. But there does seem to be too great a tendency to take up new "fangled" ideas and it is reasonable to believe that progress would be made if there were fewer movements and more concentration of effort.

We already have numerous strong associations covering practically every field of business endeavor. In the Board of Trade, a merger of the old Board of Trade and the Commercial Club, we have an organization sufficiently comprehensive to cover the objects sought by many of the new movements being started and with the ground covered by the other organizations the field is well taken care of. The formation of so many new clubs and organizations detract from the strength of the larger ones. These too, the small organizations are not infrequently of short life and fail of their purpose, though under certain conditions they grow to be strong rivals of them.

This is the day of co-operation among business men and of greater efficiency. We are bidding for first place as the business nation of the world. If we are to attain to the best we must work together and we must begin at home.—C.-J.

What is Needed On the Farm

A house which is adequate to the needs of the family and equal to any house in the community as a home, if not a house.

A barn that looks pretty good to the neighbors who pass by and feels pretty good to the stock that pass into it.

A few shade trees that hide some of the hot sun and hard winds, but none of the beauty, of the place.

A cow that is worth her weight in butter and is not for sale.

A bunch of hens which do a lot of cackling and laying and the rest of the time are scratching for themselves and their owner.

A dog that will bark at strangers and sometimes at the moon, and will wag his tail when the neighbor comes up the walk.

A well that never runs dry, a family horse that never runs shy, and a bill at the grocer's which is never allowed to run high.

A garden which has something growing in it all the year around besides weeds.

A mail box that is seldom empty when the carrier comes around and is never empty when he leaves.

An orchard that will bear all kinds of fruit and any kind of inspection.

A father whose sons will lend a helping hand in solving all of the problems of making the farm pay.

A mother whose daughters will relieve her of the hard work in the house and will see that she takes a vacation once in a while.

A daughter whose mother sees her in the kitchen oftener than in the parlor.

A growing boy of whom it may be said that he is putting the arm into his dad's farm.

Some good farm tools to do with and some good farm rules to go by.

Some cats and very few mice.

Some flowers; yea many of them.

Farmer an Independent Man.

A certain class of newspaper men assert that a farmer is the most independent man on earth and that he has nothing to do but to enjoy life. That when winter comes and the blizzard's on the wing he toasts his feet in the oven and reads the local newspaper and the only thing that disturbs him is a call three times a day to a banquet of mince pies and other luxuries. It is a mistake. The industrious farmer begins work long before the sun thinks of getting up. With his soul shrouded in gloom he proceeds to build a fire and soften his boots with a sledge hammer. He then takes a lantern and starts his way to the barn and feeds the hogs. It is then time to feed the newly arrived calf, which delights in butting a pail of milk over the tiller of the soil until he only needs to be stamped to pass for a package of oleomargarine. He crawls thru a barbwire fence and digs the hay off the snow, feeds the cows, cleans the stable, gathers up the frozen chicks, chases a pig worth 25c for four miles and does not catch it, doctors a sick horse, freezes his fingers, gets kicked by a one eyed mule and when the gloaming come s and quietness broods over all the earth, he has a single half hour to meditate and wonder how he will pay his taxes.

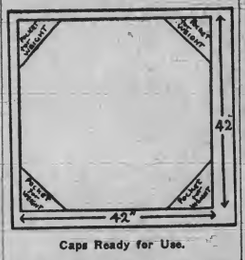
MAKING CAPS FOR HAY

Covers Arranged So That Weights Will Not Get Tangled.

Ingenious Arrangement of Expert of Wisconsin Agricultural College Tried and Pronounced Extremely Practical.



L. J. Wright of the Wisconsin Agricultural college has discovered an ingenious way to make haycock covers so the weights will not get tangled up. Here are the directions:

Take 10-ounce ducking and cut it into squares 42 inches on a side. Now take one of the squares and cut it into 32 pieces, as shown in the first picture. Then sew the triangles on the corners of the large squares, using No. 24 thread, on a sewing machine. But before sewing the long side of the triangle put in stones (one or more) weighing about a pound at each corner. Then sew up the long sides with the stones in the pockets. These caps can be made at a total cost of about 22 cents each for material, and after a two years trial have been pronounced extremely practical.—Farm and Fireside.

CHEAPER SPRAY FOR SUMMER

Fruit Growers and Gardeners See No Profit in Using Copper Sulphate —Use Lime-Sulphur.

The cost of copper sulphate is so high this season that many fruit growers and gardeners cannot see any profit in using it as a spray material, at the same time realizing the danger of not spraying at all. It has been found that a solution of lime-sulphur solution, diluted to 1 to 40 is fully as effective as bordeaux mixture, and in many orchards it has given even better results than the bordeaux. Many apple growers will use the summer spray of lime-sulphur this year who have never used it before.

CROPS REQUIRE RICH SOILS

Greatest Value of Sweet Clover Will Be Found In Its Use as Green Manuring Plant.

It, may not be advisable to grow sweet clover on land that will produce good crops of red clover and alfalfa. These, crops require rich, well-fertilized soil; but sweet clover will grow on the poor soils. It is a poor-land crop, and probably its greatest value will be found in its use as a green manuring crop. It will enable the farmer to fill his unproductive soils with humus and bring the land to a condition that will enable the crop to utilize the fertility it contains.

BIG VALUE OF FARM MANURE

Not Fully Appreciated Until High Prices of Potash and Acid Phosphate Woke Up Farmer.

The high prices of potash and acid phosphate at this time are causing much concern among farmers who depend upon commercial fertilizers to supply these constituents for the successful production of their crops.

If the farmers of this country had always fully appreciated the true value of farm manure, and used it on their land, the present situation would be much less acute.

TURNING HORSES ON ALFALFA

Plant Contains Relatively Large Percentage of Bone and Muscle-Making Elements.

To obtain the best results from pasturing work horses on alfalfa, they should be turned out every night. Turning out one night and keeping in the next is bound to derange the digestive tract quicker than pasture every night. The alfalfa plant contains a relatively large percentage of bone and muscle-making elements, and hence its value for young stock, either as a grass or cured hay.

LIVE STOCK

PREVENT DISEASE IN FOALS

Majority of Cases of Navel Trouble Caused by Neglect to Provide Sanitary Quarters.

One colt in five dies of navel disease, also called navel ill, joint ill and joint disease. The majority of cases occur through neglect to provide sanitary quarters for the mare at foaling time.

Navel disease comes from germs that are nearly always present in dark, dirty, poorly ventilated stables. Sometimes these germs are present in adjoining paddocks and fields, but pastures distant from stables and highways are usually free.

The germs get into the body of a new-born foal through the navel — usually a short time after birth. The foals do not always die at once, but may linger for weeks or months with swollen joints and other parts.

Care should be taken to provide a clean stall with plenty of bedding for the mare several days before foaling and to disinfect the floor and walls with a 5 per cent solution of carbolic acid or some other reliable germicide. Cleanliness and sanitation used with intelligence will lessen the losses from this disease. Disinfection of the navel with iodine immediately after birth is recommended by most veterinarians. It might pay to protect the navel with antiseptic bandages until it heals.

A cheap movable board house, large enough for one sow and her pigs, makes a satisfactory shelter.

A good style is an A-shaped building, 8 feet wide, 8 feet long and with each side of the roof 8 feet in length. It takes a little over 225 feet of lumber to make such a house. There should be doors in both front and back, 2½ feet by 2½ feet, fastened at the top with leather hinges so that they will swing both ways. The north door should be closed in winter. Such a house can be moved from field to field easily. It will shelter a sow and a litter of pigs. When a sow farrows in cold weather a lighted lantern hung inside to the roof will keep the air warm enough for the new-born pigs.

TIME FOR SHEARING SHEEP

Mistaken Notion to Wait Until Late in Season for Heavier and Better Fleece.

Some people have the idea that if sheep are not shorn until late in the season the fleece will be heavier and better. This, an experienced shepherd of Wisconsin says, is a mistaken notion, and is often the cause of considerable loss. The sheep lose in weight during the first warm days of spring, and, as the fresh grass acts as a laxative, the fleece becomes dirty and unpleasant to handle. It is a much better plan to shear the sheep before turning to grass, as this will insure cleaner wool and will therefore make better gains. Don't neglect to trim the animal's hoofs, if they need it, as cases of foot-rot can thus be prevented.

"What!" roared the boy's father. "Do you mean to tell me that after my mortgaging the old homestead to send you to college you've gone and flunked in your examinations?"

"Yes, father," said the boy, drawing himself up to his full height. "I felt it my duty to my alma mater not to graduate this year. They need me on the football team next fall."

A Warning to Others.

The accident which occurred in the Kentucky river near Frankfort on the Fourth is one of the saddest we have heard of in a long time. It was shocking in its suddenness as it was in extent. It should serve as a warning to all young people who seem to have no thought other than that of pleasure and enjoyment. It should also cause them to use a little pleasures. If they had taken a moments thought they would have realized that it would have been extremely dangerous to run their skiff alongside of the large barge. But young people do not seem to have a single thought other than the pursuit of pleasure. They look with disgust on any who feel minded to advise them, feeling that all such are old fogies and do not know what they are talking about. We have had occasion at times to offer a word of counsel and advice to young people, giving them the benfit of our observation and experience, but made no impression at all on them. How frequently we hear it said, "You can't tell the young people anything, they think they know it all" It is not a wonder that more young people do not meet a like fate".—Blue Grass Clipper.

Card of Thanks.—We desire to extend our heartfelt thanks to our friends and neighbors for the numerous kindnesses during the illness and following the death of our beloved one, Olga Kite.

The Mother and Sisters.

THE CHAUTAUQUA

Burlington's Centennial and Chautauqua a Grand Success in Every Way.

Sixt Names Signed Contract For One Next Year.

Burlington's first chautauqua proved a decided success as an entertainment, each number on the program receiving hearty applause. It being an entertainment along entirely different lines from any ever before given in the town, many had doubts as to how it would be received by the public, but the first day's sessions resulted in a favorable impression that made it popular at once and a good attendance through the three days was the result.

The talent changed each day, but its high class was maintained, and those who were instrumental in securing the chautauqua were thoroughly satisfied with the manner in which the contract was carried out by the chautauqua company.

The fact that 60 persons, many of them not citizens of Burlington, signed a contract and guarantee with the company for a chautauqua to be held here next year, is evidence of the favor in which the entertainment was held by the patrons.

After having paid all expenses for which they were bound the guarantors came out about $60 to the good, which is considerably better than they expected and they feel thankful to the public for its generous patronage.

Settlement of the Treasure of the Booster's Committee on account of the 1916 Chautauqua held at Burlington, July 10-11-12:

Many Horses Needed.

The need of about 50,000 horses in the United States Army, and Secretary Baker's call for thoroughbred horses for officers and cavalry in the army, calls attention again to Kentucky's neglect in breeding pure blooded horses needed for this purpose.

To improve conditions, ten thoroughbred stallions were placed in different parts of the State, with the aid of the Kentucky Racing Commission and the Department of Animal Husbandry of the College of Agriculture. These animals and their sons ought to be of considerable value in improving the horse of Kentucky.

The farmers of Kentucky are being urged continually to improve the breed of their horses, and with the means at hand and the demand for pure bred horses strongly emphasized again, it is very probable that they will change their old policy and turn their attention to improving their horses. Reports show there is a scarcity of good brood mares in the State. Good sons will offset this disadvantage and a few years the average breed of Kentucky horses [illegible] time. Si-

State News.

Marion, July 15.—Mrs. Oscar Esken is in a serious condition at her home here. While taking a tub of boiling water from the stove her feet slipped and she fell, receiving the contents of the tub all over her body. It is believed she will recover.

Maysville, July 15.—Mr. Robert Whipps, of this county, was appreciably surprised when he entered his barn and found his Holstein cow had given birth to three calves. It is a rare thing for a cow to give birth to twins and to give birth to triplets is an extraordinary occurrence. The calves are all strong and healthy, alike in size and color.

Covington, July 15.—Miss Mary T. Hall, known as "the woman who never said or wrote an unkind word about anyone," died this morning at her apartments here. Miss Hall was a veteran in newspaper writing. For many years she was on the staff of the old Covington Commonwealth and later wrote society news for a Cincinnati morning newspaper. Her invariable rule never to write anything but good gained for her the title of the "Kindest Woman in Kentucky."

Owensboro, July 15.—What is said to be the largest hay crop ever raised in Daviess county is now being delivered on the Owensboro market. Almost every day great loads of hay are being brought in over all the principal roads leading to the city. The hay is bringing this year a comparatively low price. Timothy is selling at and around $12. Wild clover is as low as $10. Mixed hay is selling at $11. The largest crop of alfalfa ever raised in this county forms an important part of the big crop that is being delivered. Alfalfa cultivation has been going on in this vicinity only about three or four years, but it has proven a very popular one with the farmers on account of its profit and the acreage this year has exceeded any preceding year by a considerable extent.

Frankfort, July 15.—The seven months' school term, introduced last year when the per capita distribution of the State school fund was increased from $4.50 to $5.25, will be continued this year, and State Superintendent Gilbert believes it is permanent.

He declared a per capita today of $5.10. Last year the fund received an abnormal increase by reason of the payment of additional taxes by railroads in their suits over the franchises for three years, and this year a 15-cent reduction was necessary. This will affect the salaries of teachers about 75 cents the month unless counties make up the difference.

The estimated school revenues for the year are $3,791,783, as compared to $4,133,456.16 last year. The total number of pupils upon which the per capita is estimated is 743,487.

Lancaster, July 15.—While Misses Ellen and Nancy Palmer were returning today from Kirksville, in Madison county the horse they were driving became frightened and ran off. The girls were thrown to the ground and Miss Nancy suffered a fractured skull from which she died almost instantly, the younger sister, Miss Ellen, was not seriously hurt. They were 19 and 17 years of age.

Bowling Green, July 15.—Acting County Judge Walter B. Gaines believes more in the efficiency of the switch than in the sternness of the law in dealing with the juvenile culprits. Friday afternoon, when 14-year-old Harry C. Ford, colored, of Smith's Grove, was brought before him for stealing a watch, instead of committing the lad to the school of reform he ordered that the parents apply the whip with plenty of force. The orders of the court will be carried out under the supervision of an officer.

The Tobacco Crop.

Fayette county crop looks good but needs rain badly.

Tobacco is not growing fast in Bracken county, except where the rain has fallen.

Tobacco in Jessamine county, is beginning to show the need of rain.

The tobacco in Nicholas county presents the best prospect of any crop but a rain is badly needed for this crop.

Tobacco in Madison county is looking exceedingly well and practically all the county reports the rapid growth of the weed.

Tobacco in Bourbon county, is growing well, having been greatly aided by the weather conditions. The outlook for a large tobacco crop is good.

Tobacco in Fleming county is in a pretty fair condition, but a good rain would bring it out considerably, although it has not suffered materially as yet.

Tobacco patches in Montgomery county are looking exceptionally good, and all have taken a remarkable growth, and show an indication of being very early this season, probably a month sooner than in 1915.

Tobacco is growing nicely in Clark county, and most of the fields have been plowed and the weeds cut. The intended acreage was set out in all sections of the county and there will be no late patches unless a dry season causes standing in the patch till late before maturing.

Big Blacksnake.

Madison, Ind., July 17.—Charles Scaffer, a farmer living eight miles north of here, killed an 8 foot black snake which he found in his chicken house last night. The reptile was coiled about the bodies of two chickens and showed fight when discovered.

BOOSTING THE FARMER.

Live business men in a live county seat sometimes have one-sided ideas about boosting, says Country Gentleman. Their efforts center on shopping excursions, street fairs and other attractions to bring the farmer into town, so he can spend money with the merchants. Building up trade for the farmer is often quite another story. But there is at least one county seat in Ohio that looks at boosting from two angles. The Marietta chamber of commerce runs shopping excursions into town. But it has promoted a million dollars' worth of good roads through the county to take people round the rural districts; has started a movement to build up the farms, and has opened a market bureau to help farmers find customers for their products at fair prices. This county ships out more than a thousand cars of fruit and truck annually. A little time ago the chamber of commerce held its first banquet, and an interesting wrinkle was developed in the bill of fare. Everything served was grown in the county, and each county district was represented by what it grew best. The whole menu was a fine effort in advertising, at the county seat, the products grown roundabout.

In our old fifth reader, McGuffey's, one of the best ever printed, there was an article on the subject of No Excellence Without Great Labor, says Ohio State Journal. That is great enough truth to be put in blazoned letters over every schoolroom door. There is no real success in this world outside of work and self-denial. The whole Christian religion is based on sacrifice. That is the lesson of Caivary. Whatever a man gets for nothing will do him no good. The path of pleasure does not lead to high achievement. When we see an effort to serve a noble end by a base means we know there is a failure ahead. You have got to do something to win; you have got to deny yourself; you have got to sacrifice. Frivolity and bubbles never earn a thing that will pass current in God's market. The world is very far from learning this, and that is the reason it is moving along so slow morally.

Numerous are the believers in rhubarb, Lord Chesterfield, in his famous letters to his son, recommended the chewing of the root of this plant as a remedy for indigestion. The allies in the European war are buying canned rhubarb for distribution to their soldiers. A canning plant at Tacoma, in the state of Washington, has filled orders for thousands of cans, and is putting up the product at the rate of 21 tons a day. Six ounces of canned rhubarb will be given each man in the trenches daily when fighting, since it is found the men suffer keenly from indigestion as a result of breathing poisoned gases.

Figures just made public by the department of labor show that the price of staple foods advanced 8 per cent during the year from March, 1915, to March, 1916. That is suggestion enough that too many consumers are depending on somebody else than themselves to supply them with products that at small expense might be grown at home.

A member of the British ministry says it is necessary for the English women to become farm laborers. The theory of home as the only proper place for women is receiving some rude jolts, and not from feminism exclusively.

When you reflect that putting the clock ahead for more daylight means going to bed in the warm hours of the evening and getting up when it is coolest to sleep, it does not seem so attractive.

Spots on the sun are said to be growing, so perhaps the belligerent nations may find an excuse for the war that shifts the blame from all of them.

A pair of roller skates may be classified as vehicles, but a boy on them is at a big disadvantage when it comes to clashing with an automobile.

The world may be facing a shortage of gasoline, but you'd never guess it from the attitude of the average joy rider.

After the war the only kindred occupation for the war censors will be writing moving picture scenarios.

There is one place where everybody will agree that the lid should be kept on—and that is the garbage can.

The heated period is now upon us, and we have had the heated argument for months and months.

WERE SCHOOLMATES

At White Haven, Near Union, Ky. Fifty-Five Years Ago.

Renewing his subscription to the Recorder J. D. Gaines, of Texarkana, Texas, writes:

I see in your issue of June 8th a letter from my old friend and schoolmate, Wash C. Platt, whom I had not heard of for many years.

Fifty-five years ago we were schoolmates at "White Haven," near Union, and both went into the southern army—he with Morgan and I with Forest. We both came out of the war unhurt (I suppose on account of our superior sprinting abilities), and have lived to what some people call old men. I feel in some respects as young as ever, and if Wash and I were in Union now we could, doubtless, stir up a little life the old town. Our tracks could probably be still found on Main street in Union, all the way from "Tiger" to the old Elm Hole, and also the tracks of a good many of the "boys," who made Union their headquarters at times. But those good, old times are gone forever and most of us are too far from base to ever look upon them again.

I think of going to the "Fair" every year but something turns up that keeps me at home. I was up there in August, 1906, with my wife and visited Union, Richwood, Burlington, Walton and various other small towns including Covington and Cincinnati, and I hope to come again before I pass in my checks.

With kind regards to you and the Recorder and all my friends in old, Boone, I remain,

Yours Truly,
J. D. GAINES.

HIRAM C. UNDERHILL

Dies at His Home Near Monroe City, Mo—Born in Boone County.

Hiram C, Underhill was born in Boone county, Kentucky, October 27, 1835, and died at his home five miles southeast of this city, July 13, 1916, aged 80 years, 9 months and 14 days.

In 1861 he was united in marriage to Adaline Crawford. To this union five children were born, Christy and Addie who died when about twenty years of age, Mrs. Mary Moss who lives near Joanna, Clay Underhill, of near Huntington, and Ive Underhill of near Monroe City. He also leaves eleven grand children and five great grandchildren. His wife died in 1875 and two years later he married Miss Elizabeth Beemon who preceded him to that Great Beyond Feb. 22, 1916. Mr. Underhill has not been well for about eighteen years and for 10 years had not been off of his place tho he was confined to his bed only about three weeks. Through all these years he has been a patient sufferer, never complaining.

He was a member of Bethlehem church for fifty years and was deacon and trustee for a number of years. Funeral services were held in the church of his choice Friday morning, Rev. S. P Gott officiating. Interment in the Bethlehem cemetery.—Monroe City, Mo., Democrat.

IRISH POTATOES

Didn't Come From Irland But From South America.

The Irish potato is a native of South America; it was introduced into Spain in the early part of the 16th century and into Elgland by Sir Walter Raiegh in 1855; was regarded at first as a curiosity, and its use as an article of food slow progress. In 1663 the Royal Society of Londain recommended it as a possible safeguard against famine amongst the Irish peasantry, but the British Encyclopedia says that "its cultivation in Bnglland made but little progress even though it was strongly urged by by the Royal Society and that not much more than a century had elapsed since its cultivation on a large scale became general." It is sometimes called the Irish potato because it is a favorite article of food in Ireland. The failure of the crop in Ireland several years ago, especially in 1846, caused a famine, which was followed by disease, from which many thousands died. In 1886 an international potato exhibition was held at the crystal palace in London, and in 1866 the three hundredth year of introduction of the potato into England was celebrated at Westminister.—Exchange.

Burlington and Union ball clubs will play at Burlington next Saturday afternoon. Union has been going good and strong and will beat Burlington if the team work is not very much better than it was the last game played.

To Sleep or Not to Sleep.

There is nothing so refreshing, so physically strengthening as a good sleep, there is nothing so nerve racking and altogether so upsetting as not to sleep. Everybody has experienced from time to time a sleepless night, but it is prolonged sleeplessness that causes such physical disturbances and unhappiness. One of the chief reasons of chronic sleeplessness is disorder of the stomach and worry. This digestive disorder may vent itself in untimely hunger and there fore is an excellent habit to adopt for those who suffer from the evil, to take a glass of hot or cold milk before retiring. Even if the craving for food is lacking at that time of the evening; the want of it will make itself felt during sleep and wake you up or make you restless without being aware of the reason. When you do finally wake up, you toss and toss and try by all means possible, counting the sheep and so forth, to coax the fleeing comrade of your bedside to your couch of rest. Useless, this most aggravating fellow, will not be easily coaxed. Better make up your mind, to get up and prepare a hot cup of milk or cocoa and eat a morsel of bread than try any longer your fruitless efforts.

Others who partake of heavy suppers and do not digest normally, will be greatly assisted by taking a cup of hot water before turning in. Even children endowed with a normal digestion will twist and kick if their supper has been unusually rich or late and any mother who can make it possible to let the little ones eat early, should by all means do so. The old-fashioned habit of having the heavy meal in the middle of the day is still the best, particularly where children are concerned, but business and school likewise are opposed to this sensible arrangement and an early supper is therefore very much to be recommended.

To be covered too warmly or not sufficiently is another cause of sleeplessness. Before we are aware of the discomfort of too heavy and overheating bedclothes we have already passed several hours maybe of uncomfortable sleep which does not do us the least bit of good. And on the other hand, to be chilly, is equally disturbing to the sleeper. Some of us pay very little attention to this fact, it seems so unnecessary because we can put on or take off so easily a blanket, but once asleep, we soon are affected by our carelessness. An extra cover at the foot end of the bed, particularly if living in a suburb where morning hours usually bring a decided change in the temperature, is a necessary precaution. With children an army blanket has proved a very useful cover for the wool is light in weight. When once a comfortable warmth is found it is wise to stick to it to avoid colds. The all-over clothing of children with night garments of a soft absorbent material is undoubtedly the only correct hygienic dressing for the night. Children will kick and turn if perfectly normal and blankets drop aside, but then when clothed from head to foot, no harm will come of this. This is true of both Summer and Winter sleeping garments.

Plenty of air is also another chief factor in a good night's rest. This should be observed in Summer as well as in Winter time and during all kinds of weather. That is why sleeping in the open finds such appreciation. Air contaminated by the breathing of one or several persons in the bedroom, is not conducive to healthful sleep.

For those who are too nervous to sleep, well, a warm sponge bath, followed by a cold rubdown will prove an excellent help. And if there are objections to that, a wet cloth soaked with witch hazel or vinegar, applied to the back of the head or across the forehead, will also give relief. However, there are some of us mortals who suffer from rheumatism and for whom any prolonged dampness is injurious. Those will be benefitted by a hot-water bag at the base of the head and a hot or cold compress around the abdomen. The latter should be well covered with a flannel placed tightly all the way around and secured with pins, so as not to let the outside air touch it. This latter is one of the best therapeutic measures against all kinds of nervous disturbances. It is simple, does not cost anything and can do no harm.

If all this has been tried and proved unsuccessful, there remains yet the brisk walk before retiring. There is no stronger antidote against nervousness than physical exhaustion. It is a thousand times to be preferred to sleeping powders. If walking is out of the question, some exercise in the way of actual work, either in the house or in some good gymnasium, ought to be taken. It will repay the sufferer for the extra effort he expends. The advice from well-meaning friends, not to worry, is very well meant, but did you ever follow it? Self-control, of course, is a wonderful medium in all ailments. So genuine physical fatigue is the next best thing to it.

Nervousness is the result of civilization. We are not wholly responsible for it ourselves. If we desire to live with the rest of the thriving, aiming mankind, we must expect to pay for our share.

ONLY FORTY-SEVEN

Deaths and Fifty-One Births in Boone County During First Four Months of The Present Year.

For the first four months of this year Boone county has to its credir 51 births, and deaths as follows: January 13, February 14, March 8, April 12.

It may be possible that some child has escaped registration by the attending physician. This is becoming more and more important to prove the age of a child and its rights under inheritance laws and to protect its personal and social rights. For example, only a very few people in the State of Kentucky can prove by any sort of official record who their ancestors were a few generations back, and there would be considerable difficulty to prove whether they were white or black so far as any official record of it has been made. If any citizen desires to know whether or not the birth certificate of his child has been registered in the State office for permanent preservation an inquiry directed to the State Registrar, Bowling Green, Kentucky, will show whether or not a physician or any one else is responsible under the law has been negligent in protecting the rights of such child.

RESIDENCE AND CONTENTS

Belonging to Mrs. Sarah White In Hathaway Neighborhood Destroyed by Fire.

The residence of Mrs. Sarah White near Hathaway together with its entire contents was destroyed by fire about 4 o'clock p. m., on Wednesday of last week, Mrs. White, and the other members of the family saving nothing except the clothes they were wearing. It is supposed the fire resulted from the explosion of a coal oil stove which occurred while Mrs. White was in the garden. A noise was heard at the house which attracted Mrs. White's attention and when she went to investigate she found the entire lower story of the building a mass of flames. The house was insured in the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of this county for about $1,500 which will fall far short of covering the loss sustained. The building was a good, two story frame structure, erected by Tilford Sullivan in 1869, the lumber being cut by a local saw mill from the handsome poplars that use to be numerous on the farm. W. S White bought the farm of L. J. Setters about thirty years ago and was occupying it at the time of his death, since which time Mrs. White and two small grandchildren have lived there. Mrs. White contemplates rebuilding a smaller house on the site of the one destroyed. Mrs. White is making her home for the present with her son-in-law, W. M. Rector in Locust Grove neighborhood.

Keep the Town Clean.

A clean town attracts attention whenever and wherever it is seen. A dirty one catches the public eye in even less time. When the streets and alleys and yards and vacant lots in a town are clean and sanitary it bespeaks a like condition on the part of the residents with regard to their personal habits. The Lord loves a clean man or woman, and the devil worships a dirty one. Which do you prefer? If each person in this town would use just a little more energy and thoughtfulness we could make this one of the cleanest spots in the country and our reputation would grow apace.

Not only would we benefit thusly, but the health of the community would be vastly improved and the physical capacity of the people would be greatly increased. A clean man wroks with pleasure, and with a delicate object in view. Generally he gets there. The dirty one labors from necessity only, has no ambition, and it is the black eye that kills the town in the eyes of other people. Keep the town a clean town.—Ex.

Committee Meeting Called.

The members of the Boone County Democratic Executive Committee are hereby called to meet at the court house in Burlington at 2 p. m., Saturday, July 29th, for the purpose of selecting a Campaign Chairman.

B. B. HUME, Chairman.
Boone County Democratic Executive Committee.

The bridge this side of Limaburg, on the Burlington and Florence pike was reconstructed last week, and for several days travel was interrupted some but as little as it was possible, as contractor Louen did extra work that the public might be inconvenienced as little as possible.

FLAT FEET AND PATRIOTISM

Carelessness in Buying Shoes Unfits Many Americans for Service in the Army.

It is not lack of patriotism that makes Uncle Sam's task of recruiting a big army a difficult task. It is flat feet and weak hearts, says the New York Globe. Despite prosperity there are thousands of young men who, under the stimulus of preparedness campaigns, have been and are offering their services to the country, but few are accepted.

The preparedness parade is having its effect. Thousands of inquiries have come into the recruiting stations by mail, telephone and by applicants in person. If only flat-footedness and weak hearts could be eliminated, there would be no difficulty in getting all the men necessary. The flat-footedness is due in a large respect to the carelessness of most men in selecting proper shoes. The poor heart showing is due in a large measure, the recruiting officers say, to the increased number of cigarette smokers.

As an instance of the severity of the physical examination, the report of Capt. Frank E. Evans, recruiting officer for the marine corps, may be cited. Captain Evans has six recruiting stations—five in New York and one in Newark. During the first eleven days of May there were 140 applicants for enlistment, and of this number there was not a single man who qualified. The majority of these men were rejected for poor hearts. Among the others were many suffering from flat-footedness.

PROPER EXERCISE IN SUMMER

Common Sense Idea for the Woman Who Is Seeking to Secure or Guard Health.

The woman who all the winter has nsed only a closed automobile or warm trolley car, now that summer has arrived, joyously starts forth to do all sorts of exercises to remove the flabbiness from her body and improve her digestion. But exercise in summer is a doubtful proposition if started too strenuously.

A horseback ride, a game of tennis or golf, digging in one's flower beds—these are all joys of the summer time out of doors, and are all excellent exercises, but, oh, the stiffness of joints and the aching back! The stiff joints and sore backs would not be there if the exercise had been begun by degrees and if one's muscles had been kept firm by regular set exercises that can be done in one's own room morning and nights.

"Few people realize," says a famous physical culture authority, according to the Southern Woman's Magazine, "the harm of strenuous exercise when none at all has been taken for months. A six-mile walk may work permanent injury to the woman who has been riding everywhere she went and bending over digging for two or three hours may displace organs that only an operation will put back again."

Memory Cure.

That music is deeply associated with emotion in man has been proved in a new and interesting manner by nerve specialists trying to cure war-shattered minds. Memory lapses are common among soldiers in the European war. A soldier who was a good musician lost his memory. A physician tried him with music. At first there was no response, but in a short time the soldier was whistling tunes, and finally playing Beethoven and Bach on the piano—months before he could remember his own name.

This is only another proof that music gets close to the heart of things. The soldier who remembered his music failed to recognize his father's and his mother's photographs. A picture of his home won no response from him. But when somebody began whistling "Tipperary" he joined in and finished it by himself. When the music of Schubert's "Serenade" was placed before him he could read it readily, although he had not been able to read the newspapers.

If it is only that music has a surpassing power to win and hold our affections, it is by just so much the more deserving of our time and attention.

Travel on Siberian Rivers.

Steamboats of a type reminiscent of the old Mississippi ply back and forth on the great Siberian rivers and are doing their part in the development of the country. Travelers have stated repeatedly that they have found on some of the river boats in Siberia service of surprising excellence, particularly berths and meals.

No Prejudice There.

"What do you think of the acoustics, Mrs. Nurich?" whispered her neighbor.

"Oh, I don't mix in them religious squabbles. Let everybody worship in their own way, I say."

A Practical Woman.

Husband—I-I-feel as t-t-though I am g-g-going to h-h-have a c-c-chill.

Wife—Wait a minute, dear, until I take up the carpet and you can shake it.

They Come High.

"My darling," she murmured, "you were so grand, so noble, when you proposed to me that day in the automobile! Shall I ever forget how touchingly you spoke of your future, of the sacrifices you would make for me? It must have cost you something to speak those words." "It did, Mabel," replied the young man, a shadow creeping over his face. "It cost me about two weeks' salary for the auto hire."

The Happy Home.

Don't be afraid of a little fun at home. Don't shut your hose lest the sun should fade your carpets, and your hearts lest a hearty laugh shake down some of the musty old cobwebs there. If you want to ruin your children, let them think that all mirth and social enjoyment must be left on the threshold without when they come home at night. When once a house is regarded as only a place to eat, drink and sleep in, bad work is, indeed, begun.

Aptly Answered.

Paddy Gaffney was after getting the old-age pension, and wended his way to the post office for his first grant. Paddy couldn't write his name, but managed to make a cross all right. The postmaster, wishing to have a joke with him, said: "Now, Paddy, don't you think 'twas hardly worth your while to come so far to make that cross?" "Well," replied Paddy, "no cross, no crown, me boy."

New Mineral Found in Tasmania.

Many rare minerals exist in Tasmania, and lately a new addition has been made to the list by the discovery of molybdenite, which is used in the manufacture of molybdenum steel, to which it gives special hardness and toughness. As the present price of this mineral is about $2,500 a ton, the discovery should prove of considerable value.—Scientific American.

Ancients' Love of Gems.

Students of Latin and Greek know how much the ancients thought of their gems, and what strange powers and attributes they ascribed to some of them, and how the discreet letter writer Pliny did not think it beneath him to pen a vast amount about their history and character.

A New View.

Not Interesting.

Some people never seem to realize that it isn't a matter of great general interest, even if true, that they toss around night after night and never sleep more than two hours ont of the twenty-four.

It developed during the questioning by the official that the parties had that day been denied a marriage license at Bedford, Indiana. The young people returned to Constance wiser but not happier.

This was the first State Pig Club show in Kentucky. Although the exhibit was small, the interest was so great and the showing so good that the Pig Club has become one of the most popular and beneficial boys' clubs in farm demonstration work.

From this small beginning the Boys' Pig Club has spread to 40 counties with a membership of 1,250 boys. Bankers, business men farmers have cooperated to the extent of placing more than $5,000 worth of pure-bred hogs in the hands of these boys.

FEEDER EASILY MADE

Will Hold Approximately Twenty Bushels of Ear Corn.

So Arranged That Hogs Can Get at Trough, But Not into Interior—May Be Hauled Around Farm to Any Desired Location.

A self-feeder for hogs, which will hold approximately 20 bushels of ear corn, is easily made. The crib has a base 3 by 4 feet, and is 4 feet high. It is built on a solid frame of 2-inch lumber and covered with 6-inch crib siding for the walls, and shiplap for the roof. The siding should be spaced 1 inch apart for ventilation. Surrounding the base is a trough 1 inch wide with a fender on its outer edge made of lumber 2 by 4 inches.

The corn is deflected into the trough by a pyramidal arrangement in the crib, as shown in the cut. Its flow is further regulated by an adjustable slide held in place by bolts with winged nuts. The trough is sheltered somewhat by the overhanging roof, made from boards 3 feet long. One section of the roof should be hinged for filling. The feeder should be built on skids or runners so that it may be hauled about the lots to any desired location. It may be painted and set in a high, well-drained spot or on a concrete platform. The lumber list follows:

2 pieces 4 by 4 inches by 7 feet runners.

6 pieces 2 by 10 inches by 5 feet floors.

2 pieces 2 by 4 inches by 6 feet trough-fender, sides.

2 pieces 2 by 4 inches by 5 feet trough-fender, ends.

6 pieces 2 by 4 inches by 4 feet studding.

4 pieces 2 by 4 inches by 6 feet plates.

Trough Easy to Get At.

50 feet ship-lap for cover, 8-foot lengths.

50 feet (lin.) 1-by-4-inch cleats.

80 feet 1-by-6-inch crib siding.

80 feet 1-by-12-inch slide.

2 12-inch strap-hinges.

10 bolts, with winged nuts.—Popular Science Monthly.

ASSIST HOGS IN DIGESTION

Animal Doesn't Root Out of Mischief, but Is Looking for Worms, Roots and Earthy Salts.

A great many think a hog roots just for mischief. That is not the case. The animal roots for worms, roots, and earthy salts, which it finds in the soil and which aid him in digestion. Nature helps him out in this way when man is foolish enough to neglect him.

In the amount of carbonaceous feed that we give the hogs there is too little phosphate for them. Lime, bones or oyster shells should be provided growing and fattening pigs.

HEAVIEST CROPS OF BERRIES

Most Small Fruits Bear Next Year After Planting—Strawberries Good for Three Years.

Blackberries, currants, gooseberries, dewberries and raspberries begin to bear the next year after planting, and produce their best crops usually during their second and third seasons. Grapes bear their first good crops about the fourth year after setting. Strawberries bear the next year after setting, and produce their heaviest crop the second year, although they are profitable for three years or more, depending upon soil and cultivation.

Local Happenings.

G. W. Sandford has been very much inconvenienced by a case of poison oak in his face.

Milton Revill was overcome by heat one day last week while assisting A. W. Gaines with his hay harvest.

The men who are working down on the creek quarrying stone for contractor Lowin are feeling the full force of the sun's rays.

Have you made any preparations for a possibly dry fall? This is one of the first steps of the good farmer during his leisure hours.

Mrs. M. A Rouse, as administratrix, will have a sale of the personal property of her deceased husband on the afternoon of August 4th.

The storm that struck North Bend Sunday demolished Dr. R H. Crisler's silo and did other property damage in that neighborhood.

The wheat threshing season in this county this year will be very short. Not a week's work for one machine if the grain was all at one yard.

Government estimates of the 1915 apple crop now place the total number of barrels at 72,000,000. This is only two-thirds as large as the crop last year.

The price of stone has advanced considerably in some localities in the county since the county embarked in the road construction business on a large scale.

Manager Lewis Riley's Erlanger-Elsmere team tackled Potters Tramps last Sunday, and the score was 5 to 1, the Tramps walking off with the big end of it.

Several neighborhoods in the county were visited by good showers last week, but being followed by the very hot weather they did not do as much good as would have resulted from a soaking rain followed by cooler weather.

Have you secured a stand of grass or clover on the wheat field? If not, it is a good plan to begin disking and plant to cowpeas or soy beans. They will take the place of clover. This is also a good time to prepare for sowing alfalfa.

The following Kentuckians captured prizes at the recent Lawrenceburg Indiana fair:

Best pound butter, Mrs. Gedrge Terrill, Petersburg.

Best peck oats, ten ears white corn, Stevens Bros., Idlewild.

Prettiest girl baby between 3 and 5 years, ten entries—Mary Amanda Terrill, Petersburg.

Sow a Cover Crop Next Month.

Next month will be the time to sow a cover crop for your orchard if it is a cultivated one. Cover crops add organic matter to the soil, prevent plant food from leaching, and the legumes add nitrogen to the soil. As a rule legumes make the best cover crops.

Good Crowd at the Sale.

Quite a good crowd attended the sale of Mrs. Anna Kirkpatrick, last Saturday afternoon, and very satisfactory prices were the rule. G. W. Sandford was the auctioneer and made articles bring their value.

A Fine Yield of Grass.

One of the best fields of grass harvested in this neighborhood belonged to L. S. Beemon out on the Florence pike. It was a mixed crop and there was barely room in the field to contain the shocks.

Excessively Hot.

Last Sunday was excessively hot until about four o'clock when a thunder storm passed north, creating a nice breeze that made the remainder of the day and night following very pleasant.

A Good Crop of Wheat.

Dearborn county, Indiana, wheat averaged 20 bushels to the acre and practically all of it was of good quality.

Sovereignty of the Seas Passes To the Submarines.

The arrival of the German submarine Deutschland in the Chesapeake Bay may fairly be classed with the most interesting marine events in history.

The voyage of Magellan around the globe, which opened all continents to modern civilization, industry and commerce; the advent of the Marrimac and the Monitor, which revolutionized naval warfare; this voyage of the German submarine, which conclusively demonstrates the efficiency of undersea boats as factors in both peace and war, these are three triumphs in marine operations which will at all times call forth admiration for the human skill and genius which made them possible.

We cannot pass by this notable event without paying a tribute to the memory of George Baker, of Des Moines, Iowa, the American who first demonstrated the practicability of the submarine by building the vessel at his own cost and expense, which, after inspection by United States naval officials, brought from them in 1892 the favorable report which caused the Congress of the United States in 1893 to make the first appropriation for the construction of a submarine for the use of the United States Government.

The late William B. Allison, of Iowa, in the Senate, and Hon. Hilary Herbert, of Alabama, then Chairman of the Naval Committee of the House; General Charles M. Shelley, of Alabama, one of the attorneys for Mr. Baker, deserve credit for the legislation which enabled the United States Government to lead the world with submarine construction.

The subsequent action of the Naval Department in substituting the plans of another person for those of Captain Baker is a dark chapter that should forever remain dark for the credit of the United States Government, but the action of the Naval Committees in accepting the reports of the United States Naval Inspectors on Captain Baker's submarine and in voting the money to construct a submarine stands as official recognition of the skill and genius of George Baker, the American, to whom more than any other man is due the credit of constructing the first practical submarine made in the world.

That Germany has developed the submarine to its present high efficiency in warfare and its now proven efficiency in peaceful commerce is exceedingly creditable to the Kaiser, to his naval constructors and to the ability of German ship builders.

This successful voyage of the Deutschland will stimulate submarine development and construction in the Naval Departments of all nations, and Great Britain, France, Russia, Japan, Italy, Austria, Holland and other countries will soon equal the best that Germany now possesses, and in the near future all nations will far surpass in excellence the best undersea craft that Germany owns.

War Departments of nations with seacoasts must well heed the lessons of this remarkable voyage. Here is a submarine whose cargo space converted into quarters would accommodate 250 soldiers with full equipment for offesive operations, and who could be transferred to the coasts of an enemy unobserved, and who could capture towns, cities and forts by surprise in a very few moments after landing. Such boats can be constructed within a few months' time; fleets of them can be in operation within a year, and a German undersea flotilla from Antwerp or Zeebrugge might capture any English port within a few hours after starting on such an enterprise, while Russian and British submarines carrying troops might reach Hamburg and Constantinople. The sovereignty of the seas no longer goes with the command of the waves; it lies in the depths of the ocean, and Neptune's scepter is wielded by the hidden and powerful submarine boats.—Enquirer.

Grain for the Skim Milk Calf.

Calves are usually fed whole milk for two to three weeks then gradually changed to skim-milk. About the time of changing, begin to feed a little grain but do not think that it is necessary to use oil meal or any other high-priced feed, high in protein, or fat or both. Experience at the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station shows that a mixture of two parts of corn and one part of oats by weight, gives as good results as oil meal and ready-mixed calf meals often purchased at much higher prices. Bran is not especially good for the young calf because it is too laxative. The grain mixture should be fed immediately after the milk, and neither should be fed too liberally or scours may result.—Ex.

Crop Outlook.

Scott county farmers are delighted over their crop prospects. There are splendid prospects for a good, early seed crop of red clover.

Warren county crop prospects are better than for many years.

Bourbon county crops are suffering for rain altho corn looks well.

Recent showers have helped crops in Nicholas county. An abundance of hay mixed with white top has been harvested. Wheat yielded about 15 bushels per acre.

Woodford county crops have been benefitted greatly by recent good rains.

Henderson county never had better prospects for bumper crops of corn and tobacco.

In Bath county the yield of wheat was the poorest in years, many crops making not to exceed five bushels to the acre.

PRIZE PIG A PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATOR

Young Porker Used to Create Interest in Agriculture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

How one teacher of 60 pupils in a one-room schoolhouse, situated in the forests of North Carolina, succeeded in getting her pupils interested in practical agriculture with a pig and less than an acre of uncultivated land, is told in a report of one of the field workers of the United States department of agriculture.

A farm paper offered a pure-bred pig as a prize for securing a certain number of subscriptions. This energetic schoolteacher set out among the parents of her pupils and succeeded in selling enough subscriptions to win the pig. When the pig arrived the pen was already built by the schoolchildren on the school grounds for its reception. The parents were invited and talks on pig-raising were made. The rest of the day was spent in driving around to some of the best pig farms in the county where various kinds of live stock were scored and discussed.

The pupils learned that a pig could not thrive entirely on scraps from lunches and occasional ears of corn. An interested member of the school committee offered the use of his team and implements and the pupils started to work cleaning the forest land to use as a forage pasture. They then planted crops of rye, wheat, rape, and grass to afford the pig grazing plots of green forage. A cold frame was also put in and cabbage plants were grown for sale, the money thus realized being turned over to buy whatever additional feed was necessary to keep the young animal.

As a result of the interest aroused, taxpayers and members of the school board have given their support to the establishment of a small demonstration farm. More land is to be purchased and the county agent is to visit the school each week. Since the pig was brought into the school less than a year ago, the membership of the county pig club has more than trebled.

CHERRY LEAF-BEETLE

Recommendations for Control of Periodical Pest.

Outbreak in 1915 Was by Far Worst That Fruit Growers Have Yet Experienced—Experts Recommend Nicotine Sulphate.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The appearance in enormous numbers of the cherry leaf-beetle in the spring of 1915 necessitated a study of this insect, the results of which have just been published by the department in a professional paper, Bulletin No. 352, "The Cherry Leaf-Beetle—A Periodically Important Insect Enemy of Cherries," by R. A. Cushman and Dwight Isely. The 1915 outbreak was by far the worst that fruit growers have yet experienced. That year the beetle proved destructive throughout the greater part of New York, Pennsylvania, and northern West Virginia, and also in the northern part of lower Michigan, where cherry-growing is very extensive. The entomologists who studied the insect at that time now recommend that for peach orchards nicotine sulphate be used, and for cherry trees sweetened arsenate of lead. These are the only two cultivated fruits that the beetle attacks. Sweet cherry and plum are not in danger and the thicker-leaved varieties of the sour cherry are much less seriously injured than the thin-leaved kinds.

The nicotine sulphate used in the experiments consisted of a solution of 40 per cent nicotine sulphate, 1 part to 800 parts of water, to which was added fish-oil soap at the rate of 2 pounds to 50 gallons of liquid. This spray does not cause the same injury to peach foliage that is likely to follow the use of strong mixtures of arsenate of lead. It is, however, only temporarily effective, and an application one day does not prevent an invasion of the orchard on the following day.

For cherry trees arsenate of lead must be applied at a rate of not less than 5 pounds to 50 gallons of water. The addition of molasses at the rate of 1¼ gallons to 50 gallons of the mixture makes the spray much more effective, but, on the other hand, the addition of this sweetening allows the spray to be more easily washed off by rains. In favorable weather, however, the effect of the spray is continuous.

As the beetles feed on the under side of the leaves, care must be taken to cover these with the poison spray. In some instances it may be necessary to spray only young cherry trees or older trees of the thin-leaved varieties.

KILL PLANT-DISEASE GERMS

Growers of Tobacco and Other Crops Troubled With Soil Sickness Have Novel Remedy.

Growers of tobacco, and some other crops, troubled with "soil sickness" in the propagating beds are now spending about one cent per square foot of seedbed for steaming the soil before the seed is sown. Such steaming of the soil with live steam introduced below the surface of the beds kills all plant-disease germs and all weed seed as well.

INEXCUSABLE CAUSES OF SWINE DISEASES

Neglect of dipping.
Lack of green food.
Failure to use serum.
Overfeeding of grain.
Filthy yards and pens.
Absence of water and shade.
Confinement in cramped quarters.
Lack of exercise and field foraging.
Crowding a herd of all sizes together.
Infrequent changes of feeding and sleeping quarters.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Do not wash eggs.

Is your farming properly diversified?

Treat cows gently and avoid excitement.

Lambs will begin to eat grain when about two weeks old.

Do not paint the inside of a coop. Whitewash it. The results will be better.

• • •

In hot weather renew the water two or three times a day and keep it in shade.

A farmer with good tools doesn't like to let his neighbors beat him in producing crops.

To grow the lambs as rapidly as possible, provide a mixture of grains in a trough in a creep for them.

To control the sows and keep them from rooting up the pastures, give them plenty of nitrogenous foods.

You never can make the hog believe that the pen is mightier than the sward. He knows better after a taste of grass.

Every community should form a cooperative dairy test association, and make a start for more enthusiasm and success.

The cow may be a machine, but she requires good care and close attention to make her run to the greatest advantage.

The cow while suckling her pigs should be kept as quiet as possible. She should not be expected to root for her living.

It is cheaper to buy scrub horses than to raise them—and you don't need to wait three or four years for them, either.

• • •

Make war on the vermin, whether in the poultry house or on the pigs, calves or colts. A thorough spray with a good insecticide will give results.

• • •

Rotation of crops is not only good for the soil and pocketbook, but it is correspondingly hard on weeds and insects. It is the way—the only way.

Special Notice.
The Farmers' Mutual Telephone Directory says, I handle any kind of rubber tire; and that I have the exclusive agency of the Republic Rubber Tires. That contract just cost me $300 of which of some of my customers will attest. I guaranteed those tires and I filled same to the letter. Now, right here I do most solemnly promise and swear that I will never again change the old and tried for any new thing whatsoever. Furthermore, that I will not use any Rubber Tire except Kelly's Springfields—the first rubber tire ever made and the best. I ought to know for surely I paid last year to find out. It is just like a boy changing the old girl for the new or a man leaving his old and tried wife for a new one. Now, isn't it a fact that they always go back to the old and tried love, is it not so boys? That's what I have done with Kelly's Springfield Rubber Tire—gone back to my old love. While they cost me more money they will cost my customers $12.00 per set or $3.00 per tire; these tires I give a guarantee on for being as represented. They will not stuff out nor will they peel, but will wear smooth like a good tire should.

Now, in regards to repainting: I have tried to get a quick system and do good work, but I find it a failure so I give it up and must stick to the old system. All my work I guarantee to be as represented. I do anything in the carriage line. Bring me your work if you want it done right. I solicit your trade.

THE EXPECTATION OF LIFE.

There Are More Violent Deaths Among Males Than Females.

Samuel L. Rogers, Director of the United States Census Bureau, a few days ago made public statistics showing the death rate and ratio of expectation of life at birth for males is 49.9 years and for females 53.2 years. For white males the expectation is 50.2 years and for white females 53.6 years. For native white males the average is 50.6 years and for native white females 54.2 years. In the general figures the percentage is cut down because of the fact that negroes live on an average of 15 years less than white persons.

The report shows that the expectation of life is greater at the age of one than at birth, approximately six years greater, and the maximum is reached at the age of two, when it is seven years greater. This is due to the extremely high infant mortality.

There are many more violent deaths among men than among women, hence the greater average expectation of life for females.

Under normal conditions native white males may expect to reach the age of 60; native white females the age of 64. That is, of a given number of males half are likely to die before reaching the age of 60 years and the other half at 60 and far beyond. The expectation of life in rural districts is more than seven years greater than in cities.

The last revelation is one which should give us pause. Why are cities less conducive than rural districts to longevity? Is it because of overcrowding? Ought we to spread our residential districts over wide areas? Is it because of noise and energy-sapping activities, including lack of appropriate physical exercise? Can these items be corrected? Is it due to improper or inefficient sanitation? Can better sanitary conditions be obtained? Are water supplies a factor? Can they be improved? All these points are worth thinking about.

Change in Twenty Years.

We don not know it to be true that the human race is growing weaker and wiser, but it remains an uncontradicted fact that Owen county farmers are improving the hills of "Sweet Owen." No one knows this better than he who visited Owen twenty years ago and return today to visit again and notes the difference between the barren soil then and the grass-covered hills of today. Our farmers are reading up to date farm journals and tracts from agricultural departments of our State and national government. They have at last learned that farming like other occupations needs education and training.

With the limestone soil and the clay foundation the soil of Owen county is easily built up and the farmer who allows his soil to grow thin can assure himself that he is a very poor farmer.

The creator made us only tenants at will of his footstool, and who wears out the broad acres and hands down a barren soil to the next generation has not been a good hustling man. All seem to have made up their minds to make the land better in Owen, hence the vast improvement in our soil in the past twenty years.—Owen County Democrat.

Standard Barrel.

It is not generally known that the new federal law fixing a standard size barrels went into effect the first of this month. The law specifies that the barrels used in the sale of fruits and vegetables must contain 7056 cubic inches, which means 102 quarts or approximately three bushels. The dimensions of the barrel may differ but they must hold the proper cubical contents. Fine or imprisonment for six months are the penalties provided for the violations of the law which is to be religiously enforced in all the States. In the past all sizes of barrels have been used, with the result that fraud and deception were so prevalent that the change became necessary. With the new law in effect and its enforcement by Federal, State, County and City officials of weights and measures with the cooperation of trade, the socalled "standard" barrel as provided by the law will become a fixture in trade channels.

RAILROAD WAGES

Shall they be determined by Industrial Warfare or Federal Inquiry?

To the American Public:

Do you believe in arbitration or Industrial warfare?

The train employes on all the railroads are voting whether they will give their leaders authority to tie up the commerce of the country to enforce their demands for a 100 million dollar wage increase.

The railroads are in the public service—your service. This army of employes is in the public service—your service.

You pay for rail transportation 3 billion dollars a year, and 44 cents out of every dollar from you goes to the employes.

On all the Southern railroads in 1915, seventy-five per cent of the train employes earned these wages (lowest, highest and average of all) as shown by the payrolls—

	Passenger		Freight		Yard
	Range	Average	Range	Average	Range	Average
Engineers	$1972 3810	$2306	$1455 3505	$1916	$1156 2424	$1566
Conductors	1552 2696	1847	1353 2358	1580	1055 1749	1248
Firemen	943 1652	1209	649 1638	979	406 1302	777
Brakemen	957 1736	1109	755 1854	958	754 1405	990

The average yearly wage payments to all Southern train employes (including those who worked only part of the year) as shown by the 1915 payrolls were—

	Passenger	Freight	Yard
Engineers	$2144	$1712	$1313
Conductors	1723	1488	1157
Firemen	1096	865	688
Brakemen	1013	845	868

A 100 million dollar wage increase for men in freight and yard service (less than one-fifth of all employes) is equal to a 5 per cent advance in all freight rates.

The managers of the railroads, as trustees for the public, have no right to place this burden on the cost of transportation to you without a clear mandate from a public tribunal speaking for you.

The railroads have proposed the settlement of this controversy either under the existing national arbitration law, or by reference to the Interstate Commerce Commission. This offer has been refused by the employes' representatives.

Shall a nation-wide strike or an investigation under the Government determine this issue?

TAKE THE HOME PAPER!

Quality First

Now for 1917

Another new 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers, 7 passengers, 122-inch wheelbase, supreme beauty, $1280 Detroit
And the original 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers, doubly refined, amazing performance, 115-inch wheelbase, $1090 Detroit

Picture a giant of rare strength and ability, and clothe him in fine garments—and you have a mighty good picture of this new Chalmers—the 1917 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers with the 122-inch wheelbase, double cowl body and French pleated upholstery.

A good day's work was done when they made it. They took as a base the 1916 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers. A car that had 1,000,000 miles of record behind it. And a service mark of 99.21 percent perfect.

They didn't touch the 3400 r. p. m. power plant. They stood pat there.

And on this magnificent chassis they laid a body that surpasses the ordinary man's power of expression.

To describe this gorgeous body is like trying to describe a Rocky Mountain sunset. It's impossible.

You get an optic sensation that fills the mind with a picture you'll never forget.

Lines—ladies, they're so severely modern that at first the Chalmers people thought they'd have to change them—too far ahead of the procession.

But Mr. Chalmers finally said to go ahead. And he was right, because the first one that sailed up the avenue stopped traffic.

Men driving cars actually drove up ahead in front to see what car it was.

And performance—gentlemen! There's never been but one that could touch her—her 3400 r. p. m. sister.

She performs with a laugh. She has never refused me a hill. She has never failed to answer my every whim.

3400 r. p. m. is the reason.

But what I like most about her is the perfectly corking body.

I'm going to tell about one little feature of the body, and then you'll have to come and find the rest out for yourself.

It's about the upholstery. Now, there's been reams written and tons talked about upholstery. Some one once measured it in inches. Another described it in curlicue springs. Some one else reduced it to "real hair."

I don't know the thickness of it—and care less; but when I get in the tonneau and sit down I have a feeling that I never want to get out.

It fits the fat man as well as the thin man.

They're long pleats—French pleats—(which say good-by once and for all time to the "button and biscuit" kind).

She's a real car, gentlemen, and a wonderful value—$1280 Detroit. You put away in your wardrobe the equivalent of four good suits of clothes, a couple of pairs of ten-dollar shoes, and a Knox hat when you lay down the money for her. You save about $275.

Don't let me forget to call attention to her smaller sister—the 1917 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers with the 115-inch wheelbase.

Because she's a 3400 r. p. m.'r, great on the hill, smooth in traffic, full of spunk any time any day.

She's just like her 1916 predecessor. Neither you nor I could tell the difference. And you're dead sure when you buy her because her record is as clear-cut as a cameo—1,000,000 miles of use with a service record of 99.21 percent perfect.

Both cars are ready. If you haven't seen them you've missed a day's treat. Better than going to the art gallery.

MEAT OUTPUT IN WEST.

Increase in Production Likely to Follow Decline of Recent Years, Is Prediction of Investigators.

That hereafter there should be a slow increase in the output of beef and mutton in the range States of the West, but that this increase is likely to be accompanied by an increase in the cost of production, are the chief conclusions of a report on "Live Stock Production in the Eleven Far Western Range States," which the department has just published. This report is one of the five sections of the exhaustive report on the meat situation in the U. S. in the preparation of which the department specialists have been engaged for some time. It discusses the reasons for the long decline in meat production in the West and explains why there is reason to believe that this is now a thing of the past. In addition, it inclues detailed studies of the present cost of producing steers and lambs.

Between 1910 and 1914, the year in which the investigations on which the report in based were made, the numbers of live stock in the 11 States of Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming declined about 13 per cent. For this decline the report holds the settlement of public lands and the consequent reduction of the range primarily responsible. A number of other causes have contributed to the downward movement, but, it is pointed out, these have been more than offset by high prices and therefore more profitable range animals, and the general agricultural development which have favored production by leading to a more widespread adoption of the practice of winter feeding and winter pasturing on alfalfa and cultivated crops.

The prediction that this decrease hereafter will give way to an increase is based upon the belief that the amount of live stock on farms and homesteads will be greater in the future; that the stock ranges in the national forests will continue to improve; that the carrying capacity of the stock ranges on the public domain may be increased by legal regulation; and, finally, that high prices of range animals and better methods will result in a more efficient utilization of the available forage, or, in other words, a greater production per unit of forage.

HOG CHOLERA EXPERTS

Inaugurate Campaign of Suppression and Education in Bourbon County.

Dr. D. C Hanawalt, representing the United States Bureau of Animal Industry, who has been located in Oklahoma, arrived in Paris the other day to take charge of the movement looking to the suppression and prevention of hog cholera in Bourbon county.

Dr. Hanawalt will work in conjunction with the State Live Stock Sanitary Board, represented in Bourbon county by Dr. H. M. Hamilton, County Live Stock Inspector, and will also cooperate with the Bourbon County Swine Breeders Protective Association which was organized a few weeks since.

A complete canvass of the county will be made and all infected herds of swine located. Advice will be given the owners as to the proper treatment and as to the disinfection of the premises. An educational campaign will be inaugurated which will cover every precinct in the county, and illustrated lectures will be given in county schoolhouses and other available places.

NEWS FROM INDIANA.

(Lawrenceburg Press.)

J. L. Axby, Democratic county chairman, has rented the rooms in the Masonic building formerly occupied by Thomas S. Craven for headquarters for the coming campaign.

Arrangements have been made by several of the churches with Evangelist E. J. Bulgin of Portland, Ore., to hold a union tabernacle meeting here for four weeks, beginning Sunday, Sept. 10. There are four persons in Mr. Bulgin's evangelistic company besides himself. The expense of erecting the tabernacle and conducting the meeting will be paid for by voluntary contributions, none of the churches being required to make any guarantee.

A diversion in the program of the Moores Hill chautauqua has been arranged by the committee in charge setting apart Wednesday evening, August 23, for a Republican speaker, and Friday evening following for a Democratic speaker. It is possible that Hon. Joseph G. Cannon of Danville, Ill., will be secured for the first occasion, and Hon. J. Hamilton Lewis of Chicago for the other. Definite information will be given later in this paper.

Laughery Baptist Association will hold its ninety-ninth annual meeting Aug. 30 and 31 at Sparta church, three miles east of Moores Hill. This association is one of the oldest in the Baptist brotherhood in Indiana. Rev. O W. Bowman of Lawrenceburg is on the program for a doctrinal sermon at the closing session.

Found Dead in Bed.

Glasgow, July 23.—T. H Trigg, formerly Sheriff of this county, was found dead in his room over the Lion Opera house at this place last night at 10:30 o'clock. He had not been out of his room for about two weeks and was last seen alive by Taylor Foster, who went to his room to take him an evening paper about seven o'clock. He requested Foster to come back later and when Foster returned he found him dead in bed.

James Whitcomb Riley.

No man could die to-morrow, whose death would cause more genuine and widespread sorrow throughout America than that of James Whitcomb Riley whose death was reported yesterday.

The Hoosier poet was not pretentious enough to meet the approbation of the professional critics when he began writing verses. That the publication of his books made him wealthy, and that in every well-chosen library Riley poetry is valued as adequate proof of the esteem in which the American people held him. In breadth of appeal Riley verses are unmatched by those of any other contemporary poet. The cowpuncher who went to school no longer than Riley, and became a rover as early in life can appreciate the penetrant truth of Riley poems and respond to the gentle philosophy and persistent optimism which give the poet's work peculiar value. And long ago the professional critics admitted their error and gave credit where credit was due.

James Whitcomb Riley, Bill Nye, his crony; Bret Harte and Mark Twain were products of the same period and the same conditions provided material which each used in his own way, but which all emtheir work could be understood by the plainest as well as relished by the most cultivated reader, tho Nye, of course, did not measure up to the others in popular estimation. All of the four were newspaper writers at the beginning of their careers. Like Harte, Riley did some of his best work for the daily press, and like the English troubadour of the Californian mining camps and border bars, he met with coldness from publishers which might have discouraged a sturdier spirit.

There are few general readers in the United States whose "golden treasury" of remembered verses does not contain fragments of Riley which have been remembered for half a lifetime without effort and which are cherished for their soundness of view and wholesomeness of spirit as much as for their excellent lyrical quality and their quaint form. And who among the millions who have read Riley, not once but often, does not feel that he has suffered in the death of the poet the loss of a friend?

The warning was given a half dozen years ago, when the first stroke of paralysis occurred, but the state of apparent health in which Mr. Riley had been after an apparent recovery encouraged the hope that he might live many years longer. It is a consolation to those who knew him thru his books as well as to those who knew him personally, that death was not preceded by a period of incapacity or suffering, but came quickly and gently.—Courier-Journal July 24th.

Dairy Cow Extension Movement.

A movement is well under way in Illinois to increase the number of dairy cows in the State and to promote new interest in the dairy industry. To accomplish this Scott Mathews, State Food Commissioner, recently invited a number of prominent business men to cooperate with his department in carrying on the work, and, as a result sufficient funds to do this were promptly raised.

It is the intention of the Commissioner to interest bankers in loaning money to farmers for the purchase of dairy cows; to create among farmers sentiment to buy dairy cows, and to assist farmers and bankers in the purchase of dairy cows and pure bred bulls; and to educate the farmers in modern dairy methods in order to make the purchase of cows a profitable investment. When a community buys a car load of cows, the department will send an expert among the farmers to instruct them in proper methods of feeding; care of cows and give them information which will be valuable to them in marketing their products.

The department will also assist in organizing bull associations and will employ men or adopt such other means as may be desirable in accomplishing the results expected.—Ex

Report Shows Drop in Crops

Rome, July 23.—The latest report of the International Institute of Agriculture indicates that the world's crops this year will be less abundant than last, but that harvest prospects are better than the average in the five-year period, 1909-1913.

The estimate of the total wheat crop this year for the seven most important countries is 396,510,000 quintals, a quintal epuals 220.46 pounds, or 76,734,000 quintals less than last year. For the United States the wheat total is estimated at 20,000,000 quintals or 25 per cent less than last year; for India 87,000,000 quintals or 15 per cent under last year; Italy 52,000,000 quintals or 12 per cent increase over last year; Spain 15,000,000 quintals, average for the preceding five years period.

The harvest from Tunis and Japan are estimated at less than last year. Estimates for Germany and Austro-Hungary were not obtainable. Barley prospects are everywhere poorer than last year, the institute estimates, as also are those for oats and rye. The estimates of the Brazilian coffee crop is slightly under last year.

Owensboro, July 21.—The whirlwind campaign for better farming in Daviess county, which was conducted under the supervision of the County Industrial Club, the United States Department of Agriculture and the International Harvester Company, came to a close yesterday afternoon, after something like 4000 citizens of the county had heard the speaking.

WORK HAS ITS REWARDS.

Moralists and economists alike chide us for our tendencies to the luxurious life, charging much of existing vice to this cause. Americans of the present do spend their lives in the presence of such magnificence as Solomen in all his glory never dreamed of. Our humblest home has in it conveniences and comforts the last generation might have imagined, but never enjoyed. All our way through life is padded by triumphs of man's ingenuity, and all conditions urge us on to more and more of pleasure. We do not work as long hours as we did once, for we now have the advantages of the energy of those who prepared the way for us, and our material prosperity comes easily. Naturally, we want it all, but, equally in accord with a rule of nature, some have more than others, says Omaha Bee. Out of this condition grows discontent, thriving on envy. Philosophers tell us the real reward of life does not consist in worldly wealth. If that is your standard of measurement, it is readily obtained. One rule only is to be observed—consume less than you create, and the hoarded surplus becomes your wealth. In time it will enable you to outshine someone who has not been as energetic or as thrifty. You cannot have wealth without work, though, nor without the practice of thrift.

That the war against typhoid fever has made gratifying progress during the five years including 1915, but that the prevalence of the disease is still "a national disgrace," as the Survey characterizes it, is indicated by the report on the subject by the American Medical association based on a study of the 57 cities having a population over 100,000. In 1910 the average death rate from typhoid per 100,000 population was 15.59; in 1913 it was 12.77 and in 1915 only 8.65. Cambridge leads with only 1.8, while Nashville is lowest with 35.1. Gratifying improvement is noted in the following cities, all of which, however, still have a death rate of more than 10: Atlanta, Louisville, Toledo, Memphis, Birmingham, Dallas, Reading, Pa., and Springfield. Fourteen cities went backward in 1915, so the general showing is fairly good, but it certainly ought not to be below the average.

The shortage of paper-making material in the United States, which has been a cause of worry to many people in various lines of business, but particularly to publishers, led to the making of experiments in the federal forest service laboratories with woods heretofore unused. 11 kinds of which have yielded good results. Two large newspapers, so advices from Washington say, have tried news print paper made from these woods and found it satisfactory, while several other kinds of wood have yielded pulp suitable for a substitute for manila paper and for boxboards. The announcement raises hopes.

The Popular Science Monthly says that whipping or spanking is a good cure for nervousness. It may be all right in the case of children; but it strikes us as a dangerous remedy to apply to adults unless you are much bigger and stronger than they are, and even then you want to be sure they are not armed.

Last year 41,168 men were examined for the United States marine corps and only 3,838 were found physically fit for service. Some old codgers will not be able to refrain from thinking that there would be a better showing if the boys would cut out cigarettes.

Germany has ordered that dresses be made shorter in order to conserve cloth. That may conserve cloth, all right, but it will not save money. The less goods used in making women's clothes in the United States the greater the money cost.

Two men whose talk we take with a grain of salt. The one who predicts in advance how many chickens will hatch from his next brood, and the one who "knows" who will be the next president.

Male birds have always worn the gorgeous plumage. And man, in decorating himself with vociferous clothes, may at last be reverting to the rooster type.

Our sympathy goes out to the Germans who must now wear their old clothes in order to economize. We know what that is.

So many famous European poets are now in America that it is feared they won't catch the true martial strain in their war effusions.

EIGHTY-FIVE YEARS OLD

Mrs. Susan Utz, Surrounded by Friends and Relatives,

Celebrates Her Eighty-Fifth Birth Day—The Pioneer Hale and Heart.

Few every enjoy an occasion like that experienced by the friends and relatives of Mrs. Susie Utz July 22, at her country home near Union.

At an early hour in the day about 40 friends and relatives arrived to assist in the celebration of Mrs. Utz's birthday.

The tables were spread on the lawn under the shade trees and at the noon hour were under the weight of all the delicious eatables of the season, the day being ideal for the occasion, one which will always be remembered by those present.

"Aunt Susie," as she is known by all, and one who is worthy of remembrance on her birthday is now 85 years old and enjoys as good health as most people at the age of 50. She was born in this county and has always made her home near where she now resides. For several years her granddaugh ter, Miss Jessie Utz, has lived with her, and her greatest pleasure is to make life pleasant for Mrs. Utz.

Mrs. Utz has two sisters and one brother living, who are in their 70's, namely, Mrs. Davitt Houston, of Verona, Mrs. Ellen Smith, who was not able to be present, Mr. Noah Tanner, of Missouri, who was also absent. Those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. David Houston of Verona; Mr. and Mrs J. T. Stephenson and two daughters, Mr. and Mrs. William Garnett, of Limaburg, Miss Ollie Smith and brother, Kirb, Mr. and Mrs Walter Wolfe and son, Mrs. J W. Stephenson and two sons, Mr. and Mrs Eli Conrad, of Walton, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Utz and two daghuters, of Grange Hall, Mr. and Mrs Harvey Utz, of Devon, Mr. and Mrs Ezra Blankenbeker, Misses Pearl Stephenson, Ruth Love and Effie Daughters, of Cincinnati, Mrs. Lallie Utz and niece Miss Hettie Rouse, of Florence, Messrs. Stanley Conrad and Eli Robinson, of Ludlow. One of the features of the afternoon was the beautiful selections of music rendered by Miss Hettie Rouse, which were enjoyed by all the lovers of music; also the singing of some very beautiful hymns by some present, beautiful singing being one of the talented gifts of this family.

Such occasions as this are always looked forward to, and at a late hour each bidding the other good-bye and wishing Aunt Susie other pleasant occasions and birth days departed for their homes.

A "SHARK" FOUND IN THE KENTUCKY RIVER.

Farmers Along the Stream Below Frankfort Believe Large Gar Is a "Sea Tiger."

At this time when the country is being aroused over the discovery of man-eating sharks off the Atlantic coast, and the subsequent death of several persons who were attacked by the sea monsters, comes the announcement that a "shark" has been seen in the Kentucky river several miles below this city, says the Frankfort State Journal.

Farmers of Franklin county, living along the river about three miles from Frankfort, reported several days ago that a large "shark" had been frightening bathers and playing havoc with fishing tackle in that section of the river. The country people were considerably worked up over the discovery of the sea "tiger."

More rational persons in that section of the country decided that the "shark" was nothing more than an unusually large gar that was causing the excitement. Gars several feet in length have been caught at different times in the Kentucky river, and it is believed that it was one of these long-nosed individuals that was mistaken for a shark.—Oldham Era.

Robert McNeely Ordained.

Rev. Robert McNeely was ordained as a minister of the Baptist church at Big Bone, last Sunday morning, Rev. O. M. Huey, of Louisville, preached the ordination sermon. Union, Beaver, Belleview, Walton and Gunpowder churches were invited and participated in the exercises. About 500 were in attendance and at the noon hour a sumptuous dinner was served. A considerable crowd of Gallatin county people were present, many of them being relatives of Mr. McNeely.

DANGEROUS TREES.

Some Attract the Lightning More Than Others.

What trees should you especially avoid during a thunderstorm?

First, the poplar, second, the oak; third, various varieties of most likely to be struck by lightning.

If you must seek shelter under a tree, pick out an alder. In all Germany, where a careful investigation was made recently of the phenomenon of trees to become targets for thunderbolts, not a single instance was found of an alder being struck.

Virtually a third of all trees struck are oaks. Just a hundred times as many oaks as beech trees are hit by lightning.

The oak is 25 times as dangerous as the birch and eighteen times as fatal as the pine.

It is safer to stand beneath a pear tree than an apple. Walnut and cherry do not attract electricity so strongly as do elm, willow and chestnut.

A tree standing by itself is in much greater danger than a tree standing in a wood. Trees with deep roots are more likely to be struck by lightning than trees with roots near the surface of the ground.

Trees in damp soil are also better targets, and therefore less safe places of shelter than trees in dry ground.

A house surrounded by oak and poplar trees is hardly ever struck, as the trees act in the capacity of lightning rods, which divert the thunderbolts.

There is an old adage that lightning never strikes twice in the same place, but I've seen a tree that was hit more than once.

Evidently the Pennsylvania Germans have also seen similar examples, because they have the two well-grounded superstition.

"If wood from a tree which was struck by lightning is burned in the stove, lightning will strike the house.

"Wood from a tree struck by lightning must never be used in the construction of a house or barn, or the latter will also be struck by lightning."

WILLIAM H. SENOUR

One of The County's Oldest and Wealthiest Natives

Starts for The Eighty-fifth Mile Post in Life's Journey—Very Successful Business Man.

Mr. William H. Senior, of Walton precinct, passed his eighty-fourth birthday last Friday, July 28. He was born and raised in this county on a farm he now owns and not very far from the one on which he resides, and is, therefore, one of the county's old est natives. Though frail looking Mr. Senior has always been a very active and successful business man as his broad acres, handsome home and comfortable surroundings testify. Mr. Senior's health has become somewhat impaired but his friends regard him as good for many year's more of hustle and successful business activities.

The Wheat Crop of 1916.

Conditions in the great Western wheat-growing states seem much more satisfactory than the reports earlier in the season indicated. While the yield will not equal last year's, the indications are there will be a fairly successful crop.

The foreign demand is an important consideration in determining the value of the crop. It is difficult so far to make an estimate upon European production. One report says that the harvest of Russia promises well and is even up to last year's high standard. Reports from Germany, Austria and Rumania all indicate a good yield. But there has been every intention abroad to prevent the speculation in wheat and in Great Britain to keep up a steady importation by requiring every British vessels to bring home breadstuffs as part of its cargo.

The Government report estimates that the production of the five important wheat States, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois will fall considerably short of last year's production. The wheat threshed in Oklahoma and Nebraska is reported unusually good in quality. But in these States as well as in Kansas, the yield will not equal that of 1915.

Last year's was one of the "bumper crops" of the country. It was more than enough to meet both the foreign and home demand and thus a great excess store was carried over in the graneries and elevators. This added to the crop of the year will make a supply large enough even in case of an increased foreign demand, to turn the scale in the consumer's favor.

Harrodsburg, July 28.—During a severe electrical storm in the north end of the county lightening struck a barn on the farm of Arnold Speaks, killing two fine mules, blinding a colt and shocking six farm hands who had taken refuge in the building to escape the storm.

BAPTIST CHURCH HISTORY

In Early Days Kentucky Baptist Were Known as Hardshells.

About the Year 1825 There Came to The Church Two Disturbing Elements.

Few people know that the Baptists of Kentucky, in the early days of the church were what is now known as the Primitive or Hardshell Baptists. About and after 1825 there came to the church two disturbing elements, one of which was Alexander Campbell and the other the question of Missions. Mr. Campbell was a native of Ireland, the son of a Presbyterian minister. He spent his youth in Scotland, where he was educated for the Presbyterian ministry, at the University of Glasgow. He sailed from Scotland for the United States in October, 1808, but on account of being shipwrecked he did not arrive in New York until September, 1809. A month thereafter he settled at Washington, Pennsylvania. He had, when he arrived in this country, credentials from the Presbytery of Scotland, certifying that he was a member and minister in good standing. He announced, upon his arrival in this country, that his faith in creeds was considerably shaken while in Scotland and he commenced his career in this country under the conviction that "nothing that was not as old as the New Testament should be made an article of faith, a rule practice or a term of communion amoungst Christians."

Mr. Campbell continued to preach under his Presbyterian credentials until June, 1812, when he was baptised and became a member of Brush Run Baptist church. The next year Brush Run church presented a written creed to Red Stone Baptist Asseation and was received into membership with that body, all of which, particularly the creed, was objectionable to Mr. Campbell. He at that time lived near Bethany, Va., where he farmed, taught school and preached occasionally, until 1820. In that year he debated with a Methodist minister on the subject of baptism. The debate was published in book form and this gain ed for him quite a reputation as a debater.

In August, 1823, he began the publication of a paper which he called The Christian Baptist. In his paper, The Christian Baptist, Vol 2, page 13, he said: "Upon the whole I do not think we will err very much in making it a general rule that every man who receives money for preaching the gospel, or for sermons by the month, day or year, is a hireling in the language of truth and soberness, as all that the clergy sell is breath, and that is one of the most common things among the living. It is as little expense to a man to talk, as it is for the laity to hear. He sells wordivinity which is supposed to be a heavenly commodity and costs no money." Later, in 1840, he published the Millenia Harvester.

Mr. Campbell said: "I take the bible for my sold guide I cannot possibly be wrong in any particular. None but myself and my decsciples take the Bible for their guide." The difference between those who were followers of him and other Baptists of that day, as one of the prominent ministers said, was not that all of them did not agree that the Bible is an infallible guide, but that those who opposed him did not concede that was an infallible interpreter of the Books. In 1825 specifications of heresy were alledged against Mr. Campbell by the Baptists, on account of which they withdrew fellowship from him and his disciples. Mr. Campbell was not only a fluent talker, but he was quite a trenchant pen He was conscientious in his determination to practice what he preached in the matter of payment for ministerial services, and he lived and died a poor man. He died on March 1st, 1866, aged 78 years.

The effects of Mr. Campbell's teachings were felt as far as the Christian Baptist was circulated, and no where more than among the Baptists of Kentucky. The preachers who had hitherto received but a small pittance from their charges, were further reduced in their resources for living. In 1826 an extensive revival, which continued three years commenced in Kentucky, which greatly favored the reformation. In the Long Run Association, to which the churches of Shelby county belonged, Phillip Fall, Zacheus Carpenter and Benjamin Allen were the leaders of the reformers and 1,675 were baptised into the new church during that revival and there were then more than 15,000 of those who followed the lead of Alexander Campbell in Kentucky.—Winchester Democrat.

Too Hot to Play Ball.

The Woolper and Burlington teams played an uninteresting game at Burlington ball park last Saturday afternoon, the score being 13 to 2 in favor of Burlington. The weather was too warm for such violent exercise and the boys were languid and careles ain their work.

Ludlow White Sox defeated the Erlanger-Elsmere team last Sunday 10 to 0.

THE SANDWICH.

It Was Named After Lord Player Who Wouldn't Leave Game to Eat.

Lord Sandwich, who died, and the ham sandwich, and the sandwich meet on the street, and Sandwich, Barnstable County, Mass., are all bound up together Queer how it should be so. The papers already have told how the sandwich, an article of food, got its name from the fourth Earl Sandwich, because he was such an inveterate card player that he could not take time to eat his meals, and had bread brought to him with meat between the slices at the card table. But Lord Sandwich was called Lord Sandwich because the first Earl Sandwich, back in 1660, chose to take his title from the ancient town of Sandwich, in Kent. Fine old place—greatest place for golf in England. When some people came to New England in 1639 and started a village down on the cape near the sea, they bethought themselves of Sandwich in old England, which lay just that way, and called their village Sandwich. That accounts for Sandwich, and Lord Sandwich and the sandwiches. And the sandwich man is just a poor wretch with an advertising board hung on each side of him, the human meat, or bone, in the middle, just as it was in Lord Sandwich's hasty meal at the card table. So all the sandwiches are present and accounted for.—Boston Transcript.

EDGAR D. JONES

Closes Ten Years Service as Pastor of Bloomington, Ill., Church.

On Sunday, July 9th, Edgar DeWitt Jones, pastor of First church, Bloomington, Ill., celebrated his tenth anniversary as pastor of that congregation. In the morning he preached his tenth anniversary sermon; and in the evening the Ministerial Association of the city held a Union Recognition Service in honor of Dr. Jones' ten years of service. Brief addresses were made by the pastors of Second Christian, Second Presbyterian and First Baptist churches, as well as Elder J. D. Holcomb, of First church. Music was furnished by the church quartet and a male quartet of the city. At the regular Christian Endeavor period a union service had been arranged for by the young people. Five minute talks were made by young people from the various young people's societies of the city, and readings and musical numbers were furnished by other young people. The Bloomington Pantcograph speaks of the evening meeting in the following appreciative Bloomington citizens who gathered for the purpose of fittingly making words: "The First Christian church was filled last night—main floors the gallery and the Sunday-school room—with an audience of Bloomington citizens who gathered for the purpose of fittingly marking the anniversary of the ten years of efficient and profitable service of Dr. Edgar DeWitt Jones, the pastor. And the observer would have noted among the personnel of the people who attended the meeting the faces not only of those who are strong workers in other churches, but also the faces of people who are rarely ever seen at places of religious worship—and one and all knew and claimed Dr. Jones as a friend and sympathetic adviser whenever advice from that source is asked." Herewith is given a statistical summary of Dr. Jones' ten years of ministry with this congregation: Received into membership, 1,472. Amount raised and expended thru annual church budget, $98,222.9. For missions, benevolences, thru annual budget, $13,460.88. Gifts by members to Million Dollar campaign, $4,100.00. Gifts by members to Men and Millions Movement, $12,000. Total for missions, benevolences, education, $29,560.88. Sermons preached by Dr. Jones in First church, 840. Sermons, lectures, addresses, delivered in various parts of country, 372. Wedding ceremonies performed, 404. Funeral services conducted, 414.

CARE FOR HARNESS PROPERLY

Most Farmers Give This Part of Equipment Scant Attention During the Busy Months.

While it is generally conceded to be the best plan to care for the harness properly throughout the entire year, most farmers give this part of their farm equipment scant attention during the busy months. As long as the harness hols together and will give service, the work-harness is thrown on to the horses' backs day after day, and no more thought is given it. However, when the busy days are over, there is no excuse for not giving the harness a little special attention. It is a good plan to wash the dirt and grease from the straps at least once a year, and then give them a good oiling and, working until the leather is soft and pliable. Buckles should be oiled so they can be handled easily.

Villa must have nearly enough soldiers by now to think seriously of running for the Presidency again.—Columbia State.

FINAL ROLL-CALL

Answered By Bruce Henry an Ex-Confederate Soldier

Was a Member of John Morgan's Regiment—One by One They're Passing Away.

The citizens of Francesville neighborhood were shocked last Thursday morning by the announcement that Bruce Henry, a prominent and much beloved citizen, was, early that morning, found dead.

Not feeling well Wednesday, Mr Henry retired early that night, and nothing was heard or seen of him until about 3 o'clock Thursday morning, when his sister-in-law, Mrs. Amanda Koons, found him dead, lying near the kitchen door. It is supposed he had started to the kitchen some time during the night to get a drink of water and had a stroke of apoplexy.

Mr. Henry was a native of Virginia, being born in Monongahela county, May 15, 1840. He came to Kentucky at the age of 17, and had been a resident of Francesville neighborhood for many years.

When the war between the States began he espoused the cause of the Southern Confederacy, enlisted in 1862, and was a member of Company B, commanded by Capt. Vaughn of the Sixth Kentucky Cavalry, Gen. John H. Morgan's regiment, and was a comrade in arms of Richard White, Robt. A. Brady and others of this county. Mr. Henry was a good soldier and highly esteemed by every member of the company, his jovial disposition and kindness lightening the burden of many a comrade in distress.

Mr. Henry was a prominent member of Sand Run Baptist church, where the funeral services were conducted last Sunday at 10 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. C. E. Baker, after which the remains were interred in Sand Run cemetery by the side of his wife who died many years ago.

The deceased is survived by a son, Dr. O. C. Henry, a prominent physician at Minerva, Bracken county, and who was visiting his father at the time of his death. In the death of Mr. Henry the county has lost another of its most worthy and prosperous citizens and he will be greatly missed by all with whom he was acquainted, as he always brought sunshine to those in his presence. His death is deplored by all.

LOOSE LEAF HOUSE AT WALTON.

Capitalists Become Interested And The Enterprise is Assured.

Will Be A Great Benefit To The Town.

The establishment of a Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse at Walton was arranged for Friday, and the old canning factory has been purchased for the business and the work of remodeling and arranging for the work will begin at once. A new roof with numerous sky lights and a concrete floor in the entire storeroom will be the principal repairs made. With a side track from the L. & N. Railroad on one side and from the Q. & C. Railroad on the other gives the warehouse extraordinarily fine shipping facilities, and the location and the warehouse have been pronounced ideal for a loose leaf warehouse. The gentlemen who have become interested are all practical business men and will make the enterprise a success if possible. The only question as to the success and profitable operation of the warehouse is that of sufficient tobacco to be marketed, and it is believed that there is three million pounds of tobacco in the radius of this warehouse that should be marketed at Walton because of the convenience and general advantages, but if half of that amount is sold in this loose leaf market it will be a profitable investment. The work of getting the building in readiness will begin at once. The parties who are behind the enterprise are M. L. Kirkpatrick of Cincinnati, John Downard, of Covington, John T. Williams, Jos. C. Hughes, all experienced tobacco men of unquestioned ability and integrity; Judge J. C. Tomlin, J. D. Mayhugh, Dr. D. M. Bagby and D. B. Wallace. The capital will be about ten thousand dollars which is ample for all purposes, as the parties connected have command of any additional capital necessary.

Stamler, it will be one of most complet church buildins to be found anywhere, having a spacious auditorium with a balcony, sixteen Sunday School rooms—eight on the lower floor and eight on the balcony floor, all of which may be opened to enlarge the auditorium. It will have large appartments for the various orgaizations of the church, and a diningroom and kitchen in the basement. The cost of the building will be about $11,000 not including furnishings.

There is a fine promise for a good price for tobacco this season as the supply on hand is short and the acreage is less than usual and care should be exercised to save every pound possible for any kind of tobacco this year will be worth good money, but the better the quality and the superior handling will mean greater money. One thing particularly to provide against is house burned tobacco for that only militates against its sale but depreciates the weight. An early market is predicted and very satisfactory prices will prevail from the beginning.

Last Saturday a party of four men and a woman from Sadieville narrowly escaped serious injury while racing thru town in an automobile at a high rate of speed. The auto first run into a pile of sand where L. P. Vallandingham is building his new house, and it caused the machine to swerve and race up the lawn of Geo. P. Nicholson. Getting straight ened up in crossing the bridge near the residence of George B. Powers the machine tore through his fence into his alfalfa field, but fortunately no one was injured, though the jump off was so great that the machine could not be gotten back except by making a wide detour thru the alfalfa field to the barn lot. There were several cases of beer in the machine and perhaps that would account for the reckless driving.

Moonlight Schools Begin Session.

Moonlight schools will begin their session on Monday evening, August 14th, thruout the State. The session will run for 24 evenings, four evenings each week, the hours being from seven to nine o'clock. The Kentucky Illiteracy Commission, Frankfort, Ky., furnishes instructions and equipment for such schools. Teachers are volunteering by the thousands and many counties are setting a high aim. In Clay county every teacher has volunteered for the third successive year and they plan to teach one thousand to read and write before the session close. Leslie and Cumberland counties have also sounded the slogan—"One Thousand taught to read and write." McCreary plans to wipe out illiteracy this year and has the slogan "No Illiteracy in McCreary county in 1917." How many teachers in this county have volunteered? How many moonlight schools will there be? How many will be taught to read and write?

THE NEW WAY TO SPELL ECONOMY—

C-H-A-L-M-E-R-S

A cheap piece of machinery, like the boy with a little knowledge, is sometimes a dangerous thing.

Men are buying better and better lawn mowers, and reapers, and printing presses, and gasoline engines and pumps.

Why? Because they find it pays.

Probably there's no better example of this in the case of automobiles than Chalmers cars.

Figures show that over 75% of men who have bought Chalmers cars this year previously owned a $500, $600 or $800 car.

And the great big increase in Chalmers sales (792% in six months) has come from towns just like this.

In the old days Chalmers cars were sold for the most part in towns like New York and Chicago.

You can find Chalmers cars most any time of the day in most any block in such towns even now.

But in the smaller communities Chalmers cars are most numerous today. Because the people in towns like this were quickest to see the value, note the endurance, and observe the wonderful performance.

Particularly of this 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers, which is, in our opinion, the most able car that ever came to this town.

Price $1090 Detroit, a car well worth $1400.

He had not been here long before he missed his pocketbook and a diligent search was made for it. It was finally found, minus the money, in the vault of the public comfort near the jail, where the finder had thrown it after taking out the money. Mr. Hedges brought the money to town to place in bank, but delayed making the deposit for some reason, probably because the bank was closed for the noon hour. It is a heavy loss on Mr. Hedges who makes his money by hard labor.

Were Not Bombs.

Some Burlington citizens who arose early last Monday morning saw lying about the streets numerous small objects which they feared were unexploded bombs dropped by some air ship engaged in the European war, but which had lost its bearings and came this way, but upon investigation the supposed bombs proved to be empty beer bottles that had been [illegible] town during the night by the sultry breeze that prevailed.

FARM ANIMALS

DESTROYING VERMIN ON HOGS

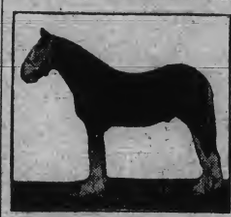
Crude Oil, Mixed With Equal Volume of Warm Water, Is One of Best Known Applications.

Crude oil is one of the best applications for killing lice on hogs. It is sometimes used on cattle, though less often. Use it mixed with an equal volume of warm water. Apply with rag, sponge or spray pump.

For quicker but less thorough work it can simply be poured on from a kerosene can and allowed to run down the sides. For a large number of animals, use a dipping tank or hog oiler. Crude oil makes dark stains, and is objected to by some men who keep white hogs. One gallon of crude carbolic acid added to each barrel of oil makes it more effective.

Machine oil mixed with kerosene, half and half, can be used in the same way. Pure kerosene is too harsh on the skin.

Tobacco infusion is an old reliable remedy. Soak tobacco stems for 12 hours in water, using one pound stems to two gallons water, then bring the water to boiling for a few minutes, and let it cool. This decoction can be used on all kinds of animals, applied by hand or as a dip.



With all these preparations, the treatment should be repeated after one week. Most of the lice will be killed the first time, but not all the lice eggs.

GIVE YOUNG HORSES CHANCE

Colt Will Never Develop Properly If He Is Stunted in Early Growth—Good Feeding Pays.

Give the colts a chance! No colt can develop into a large useful horse if he is stunted in his early growth.

The result of good care and feeding is forcefully shown by the condition of the young work horses of the animal husbandry department of the Kansas state agricultural college. These horses were purchased three years ago as weanlings. They were given care and proper feed their first winter and were in a good healthy growing condition when turned out to pasture in the spring.

When three years old these colts were worth $250 to $300 each. Colts of the same age and from the same mares, but kept on the farm and given the usual farm treatment were worth only $125 to $140 each. Thus a difference in value of $125 to $160 was due to no other reason than the care given to the horses as colts.

"The horse is made the first 18 months of his life," says Dr. C. W. McCampbell, assistant professor of animal husbandry in the Kansas state agricultural college. "If he is stunted he never reaches his maximum development.

"Too often colts are turned out to rustle for themselves the first winter and all such colts can do is to keep alive. Their growth is stunted and they make a small ordinary type of horse."

HARVESTING CORN WITH HOGS

Economical and Practical Way of Fattening Animals—Also Feed Alfalfa or Clover.

Hogging down corn is an economical and practical way of fattening hogs and of harvesting corn. For best results some supplementary feed like alfalfa or clover is advisable. If you have such a field adjoining the corn field the combination is ideal. If neither of these crops is available and you have a stand of rape in the oats stubble or cornstalks, this makes a good combination. You have to plan ahead to get this, and many farmers sow a little rape in the corn along in July, especially if there is a thin stand of corn.

In the absence of pasture good results are obtained from such feeds as tankage, oil meal or meat meal. These can be fed as a slop or in a self-feeder with corn. With both available the pig will balance the ration to suit himself and will balance it about right.

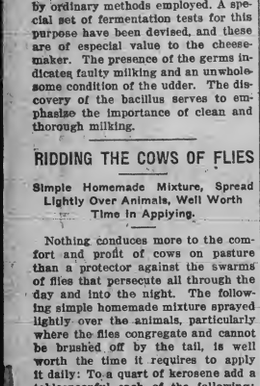
DAIRY

BACTERIA FOUND IN UDDER

In Experimenting With Several Bacilli Common to Milk, Scientist Discovers New Germ.



A discovery of especial interest to dairymen has recently been made by an Italian scientist named Constantino. In experimenting with the several bacilli common to milk, he found a new germ which has to do with the forming of rennet and the coagulation of milk and it thrives especially well in the milk if left in a cow's udder at milking time. When the cow is not milked dry, these acid-forming bacteria develop rapidly and set up inflammation likely to cause serious complications.

It is not an unusual thing for a poorly milked cow to develop a case of caked udder or mammitis, but the exact cause of the trouble has not until the present time been fully understood. The change in the milk due to these organisms is entirely different from the change which occurs in ordinary fermentation and the presence of the harmful bacteria cannot be determined by ordinary methods employed. A special set of fermentation tests for this purpose have been devised, and these are of especial value to the cheesemaker. The presence of the germs indicates faulty milking and an unwholesome condition of the udder. The discovery of the bacillus serves to emphasize the importance of clean and thorough milking.

RIDDING THE COWS OF FLIES

Simple Homemade Mixture, Spread Lightly Over Animals, Well Worth Time in Appiying.

Nothing conduces more to the comfort and profit of cows on pasture than a protector against the swarms of flies that persecute all through the day and into the night. The following simple homemade mixture sprayed lightly over the animals, particularly where the flies congregate and cannot be brushed off by the tail, is well worth the time it requires to apply it daily: To a quart of kerosene add a tablespoonful each of the following:

Shorthorn Heifers in Pasture.

Oil of tar, oil of pennyroyal, fish oil, carbolic acid. Beat well together. It is best and quickest to apply it with a force pump in a fine spray.

PASTURE STAKE FOR A COW

Practically Impossible for Rope to Become Tangled as Animal Walks Around Wheel.

An old carriage wheel and axle were used to good advantage in the making of the pasture stake shown in the sketch, writes W. F. Quackenbush of New York city in Popular Mechanics. When the animal tethered to the wheel walks around the stake, it is practically impossible for the rope to become tangled, as the wheel revolves on the axle.

KEEP CREAM CANS COVERED

In Summer Weather Ordinary Piece of Wet Burlap Will Keep Temperature About Right.

A great part of the value of keeping cream cool on the farm and at the station or creamery is lost if the cream is exposed to the direct rays of the sun while being hauled from the farm to the point of sale. Far too few people stop to realize the importance of covering their cream cans when bringing them in to town.

Expensive jacketed cans are not a necessity to keep the cream cool. In summer weather just an ordinary piece of wet burlap thrown over the cans will keep the temperature of the cream as much as 20 degrees below what it would rise to if left uncovered while being conveyed over the average country distance.

Hardinsburg, July 29—The Breckenridge county fair, which closed here yesterday, was the largest and most successful in the history of the county.

Paris, July 29—Preston See, 60 years old, and Miss Minnie Hines, 16, were married here this afternoon. They left Paris for Cincinnati for a week's honeymoon.

Chicago, July 29—Reports to the Coroner and police tonight show that 154 adults have perished of the heat in Chicago in the last three days. Of this number 130 have died in the last forty-eight hours. In addition, the Coroner says, 48 babies have died directly of heat in the last 24 hours.

Berlin, July 30—Soldiers of Germany, Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey in the two years of warfare, just concluding, captured 2,658,000 officers and men, while the entente allies in the same period made prisoners of 1,995,000 Teutorns and their allies, according to a compilation issued by the German government.

J. S. Smith's store at Butler, was the scene of an unusual explosion when gas formed in a can of corn and exploded, throwing corn in every direction. Mr. Smith says some of the corn was thrown as far as twenty feet. The force was so great that it loosened the glass in a showcase eight feet away.—Falmouth Pendletonian.

Falmouth, July 26.—The eighteen months old baby of Deputy Postmaster Elmer Fossett, while playing with a nickel given to it by its mother, put it in its mouth and swallowed it and the money lodged in such a position that the child could not swallow any food but milk. The child was taken to the hospital to have an operation and the coin removed.

News From the War.

The German Government has issued officially the figures relating to the conquests at the end of the second year of the war in a statement which reads:

"The Central Powers occupied 431,000 square kilometers, against 180,000 a year ago. The enemy occupied in Europe 22,000 square kilometers, against 11,000 a year ago.

"The Central Powers, Bulgaria and Turkey captured 2,658,000 enemy soldiers, against 1,695,000 taken by the Allies. Of those taken prisoners by the Germans, 5,947 officers and 348,000 men were French; 9,019 officers and 1,202,000 men were Russian, and 947 officers and 30,000 men were British.

"The war booty brought to Germany, in addition to that utilized immediately at the front, comprised 11,036 cannon, 4,700,000 shells, 3,450 machine guns and 1,556,000 rifles.

"According to the list of statistics of German wounded soldiers, 90.2 per cent returned to the front, 14 per cent died; the rest were unfit for service or were released. The military measures of the Central Powers, in consequence of vaccinations, were never disturbed by epidemics."

HEN IS THE BIGGEST EATER

Fowl Turns Out More Food, According to Weight, Than Best Dairy Cow—Marvel of Efficiency.

The hen is the biggest eater of all domestic animals. A three and one-half pound hen, according to Doctor Rice of Cornell, will eat 110 pounds of food a year. She will lay 30 pounds of eggs, or perhaps more. Eggs are highly concentrated food, and the hen that transforms a hundred pounds of bran, grass, grain and gravel, and other scraps into one-third their weight of fresh eggs, is a marvel of efficiency. The hen therefore turns out more food, according to her weight, than the best dairy cow.

Present indications point to a banner production of tobacco this year. The acreage about here is reported to be larger than last year, and the crop is in splendid shape after the rain. The crop in the Green river section is estimated to be somewhere between 30,000,000 and forty millions pounds and the price is expected to be higher than any time since the Civil War.—Danville Advocate.

Cars Needed in Wheat Belt.

Chicago, July 30—There is a car famine in the winter wheat belt. This condition is retarding the movement of the grain out of the Southwest, as threshing is being pushed in nearly every locality and producers are anxious to sell at least part of their surplus wheat as present prices are quite satisfactory to them. It has been said all along that farmers were unwilling to sell their wheat and that they had the larger part of the crop stacked and intended to hold it in that position until they were enabled to sell it at higher levels. This is not a fact, however, as a special report compiled by the Modern Miller shows that farmers in the big winter wheat states are threshing as rapidly as crews can be obtained and this wheat will be shipped out as rapidly as empty cars can be had for its present movement.

Europe has not purchased any wheat in the Southwest to speak of, and foreigners own but small lines of wheat futures at Chicago, thereby placing them at the mercy of the trade in the United States and this trade believes in higher prices for wheat, not only on the farmes, but in other positions. According to the latest cabel advices Loverpool and London are becoming uneasy of the continued and persistent crop damage reports sent out of the spring wheat country by accepted authority.

The visible supply of wheat in the United States is made up almost wholly of old winter wheat and some old spring wheat, but foreigners are ready to take any part of this grain at higher levels. Generally speaking, however, they want the new crop of winter wheat or the old Manitoba.

With a big reduction in the wheat crop because of black rust and blight the situation looks more and more bullish.

Speculation in wheat in Chicago has been on the abnormally large scale since the reports of damage to the crop in the spring wheat country commenced to come forward.

The public has been in wheat on a large scale, and in many instances the farmer has bought freely. There has been a great deal of money taken out of the market by longs and this heavy selling has caused price setbacks during the past few days.

Corn has ruled strong because of the high temperature in the great corn belt and the reports of damage from some sections.

While there have been liberal hedging sales of oats during the past week or two this has been partially offset by good buying orders from forefiners both cash orders from foreigners both cash and futures. It is expected that exporters will continue to take hold liberally of this grain.

Hog products have averaged lower during the week mainly because of the lighter business in cash meats and lard on export account. Country packers have sold provisions in a liberal manner in the way of hedging against the stuff they now hold in the interior.

Tobacco Crop Outlook.

Tobacco in Harrison county was beginning to fire before the rains came but it will probably not affect the quality at all. It promises a fine crop.

Present indications point to a banner production of tobacco in Boyle county this year. The acreage is reported to be larger than last year and the crop is in splendid shape.

Considerable damage was done to tobacco in Bracken county, by hail.

Tobacco in the southern and eastern sections of Nicholas county are needing rain.

Fleming county crop promises to be 20 to 30 per cent. better than the average crop.

Tobacco in Clark county is in good shape and the cultivation is as near perfect as the farmers could make it.

Hail stones, unusually large, totally ruined tobacco in some places in Bourbon county.

Six farmers in Graves county, had their crops entirely wiped out by a terrific hail storm.

More than 100 acres of tobacco in Christian county, were completely riddled by a hail storm.

Much tobacco was ruined in Nicholas county by a hail storm which was the worst ever seen in that section.

Tobacco in Fayette county never looked better, a great deal being topped last week.

The tobacco crop in this county is far advanced and growing fast. At the present rate with favorable weather much of it will be ready for the knife within a short time.—Blue-Grass Clipper.

ALL KINDS OF GOOD THINGS.

The following are some unusual stuffings to use for chicken, duck or turkey:

Rice and Ham Stuffing.—Put some cooked ham through a meat chopper; add to a cupful of ham a cupful of rice, six chopped mushrooms, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, salt and pepper, and red pepper to taste, four tablespoonfuls of melted butter and sufficient stock to moisten.

Corn Bread and Nut Stuffing.—Crumb a pint of cornbread, add the grated rind of a lemon, a cupful of finely chopped nutmeats, two tablespoonfuls of mixed dried herbs, salt and pepper to taste and a half cupful of melted butter. Bacon drippings may be used in place of the butter.

Prunes combined with apples, lemon rind and juice and cooked to a heavy marmalade make a most delicious accompaniment to roast pork.

Cranberry Jelly With Whipped Cream.—Put four cupfuls of cranberries into two quarts of cold water and stew until tender. Strain through a cheesecloth. Measure this liquid, and for each pint add a half cupful of sugar and a tablespoonful of sage. Boil all together until the sage becomes transparent, then pour into a fancy mold and let stand in a cool place twelve hours. When ready to serve turn out on a pretty dish and garnish with sweetened whipped cream.

Fine Cake.—Dissolve a cake of compressed yeast in two cupfuls of lukewarm water, stir into it eight cupfuls of flour, beat until it forms a smooth paste. Cover and let rise for two hours, then add two cupfuls of creamed shortening, two of sugar, a nutmeg grated, half a pound of shredded citron peel, one and a half pounds of raisins, half a cupful of blanched and shredded almonds and four well-beaten eggs. Fill a large pan half full and bake three and a half hours.

Jam and jelly, if placed sandwich fashion on bread may take the place of cake.

THE STATE PRESS.

One day last week J. A. Stanley discovered a great many fish dead or dying, in a big pond on his farm. He suspected that the pond had been dynamited, but a tenant who lives only a few feet from the pond said this is impossible, as he would surely have heard the explosion. Mr. Stanley is of the opinion now that lightning struck the pond, killing the fish. More than five bushels of fish were destroyed, some of them weighing over four pounds.—Shelby Record.

R. S. Green is to the front with another chicken story. It will be remembered that a few years ago Mr. Green told of a bantam hen making her nest in a large cucumber in his garden and hatching a brood, none of which afterward would eat anything with such relish as they would cucumber seed. Now Mr. Green tells of a hen which established a nest and went to setting in the weeds of his garden. A pet crow in the neighborhood, impelled by maternal instinct, found the nest and drove the hen away and took possession. The crow sat on the eggs faithfully, and yesterday hatched out four chicks. Mother Crow is seemingly as proud of her brood as if they were little crows.—Hopkinsville New Era.

Of all the persons in Jessamine county to whom the ring-necked pheasants were intrusted, Mrs. Mc Lean, of Wilmore, has made the best record in handling them successfully. In the spring she gave away five pairs, keeping 2 pairs for herself. From these she has thirty young birds, one setting of eggs under a hen and 130 eggs. She is very fond of the birds and she says they require no more care they any other fowl. The birds' eggs are smaller than a guinea egg and of the same shape, being large at one end and pointed at the other, somewhat resembling the egg of a robin, except they are greenish in color. With proper care and attention Jessamine would soon be well supplied with these valuable birds.—Dover News.

The School Per Capita $5.10.

The school per capita in Kentucky this year was fixed Saturday at $5.10 by Superintendent of Public Instruction Gilbert. This per capita is a reduction of 15 cents per child of school age in the state from last year. The per capita is based on an estimated revenue for school purposes for the state at $3,791,785. The average for teacher per month will be about $46.25 The school census for 1916 shows a gain of 2,410 children of school age over the census of 1915. According to the census report compiled by the Department of Education there are 743,487 children in Kentucky between the ages of six and 20, of which 667,002 are white and 76,485 are negroes. Of this number 119,841 whites are listed in the cities and 604,323 in the rural and graded districts; 23,323 negro children are listed in the cities, and 51,386 in the rural and graded districts.

Will Be Hard to Convince.

With the State not a penny in debt, with nearly four millions in the State treasury at the close of business July 15, 1916, with the State banks carrying deposits of thirty millions more than ten months ago, with the reserves of the State banks thirty-three millions in excess of a year ago, with thirty thousand more automobile owners in Indiana than there were six months ago, with all the people in the State working at some useful and well paid employment, with farm crops looking fine and prices all that any good farmer could ask, with Tom Taggart down in Washington declaring he will not quit his fight until he has forced the Congress and Senate to cut more than two hundred millions of dollars a year from useless public expenditures, why in the world shouldn't Indiana people be happy. What an awful job Republicans are going to have to convince the people they are not satisfied, simply because we have not gone to war with Germany, or invaded Mexico to save the property of certain large Wall street gamblers who have holdings in the southern country, and for which they would like to spill the blood of some American boys, but never their own.—Lawrenceburg Register.

Disgraceful.

The Men's Federation of Louisville, is taking steps toward mitigating or eliminating the evil of the hurry-up marriage industry in Jeffersonville, Ind., of which Kentucky couples are the chief patrons. Fifty per cent or even more of the weddings in Jeffersonville wind up in the divorce court. The number of these hasty weddings averages about 1,500 a year. The situation in Jeffersonville in this respect is a disgrace to the State of Indiana and ought to be remedied. Somebody is reported to have discovered a law in that State to the effect that a marriage license must be issued in the county in which the female applicant for license resides. Such a law, if enforced, would put an end to the Jeffersonville Gretna Green and to a most disgraceful state of affairs. But if there is such a law it is not enforced and probably never will be so far as the officials at Jeffersonville are concerned. The marriage industry, in a way, is worth a good deal to Jeffersonville and the officials are loth to lose the revenue. But that ought not to cut any ice so far as the enforcement of the State law is concerned.—Frankfort Journal.

Bison's Revenge.

An old Indian named Neyharper who lived in that part of Oklahoma that used to be called the Indian Territory, used to tell his white friends this story of the strange but terrible revenge that a bison once took on the hunter who had wounded it in the chase:

"When I was a boy most of our food was brought in by the buffalo hunters. Killing these large beasts was hard and dangerous work, but it was very exciting. Once the hunters went out after a herd, each riding his best pony. One, who had attacked a large bull, failed to strike a vital part with his arrows, and pursued the beast across the prairie.

"Suddenly in the mad race hunter and prey came to a buffalo patch that had been washed down by the heavy rains till it was two or three feet deep. The horse stumbled, threw the man into the ditch, and then dashed off, leaving him helpless. The buffalo saw the accident, turned and tried desperately to gore the hunter. But the ditch was too narrow, and so the buffalo reached down and with its long tongue began to lick the man's bare back. Every stroke of that rough tongue tore the skin and flesh painfully. The Indian could only bear it, for if he tried to escape he would meet death at the horns of the enraged beast. Before his companions found him and killed the buffalo, it had licked the flesh from his back down to the bone, and the poor man bore the scars of that terrible revenge to his grave.—Youth's Companion

Milton, July 27.—The section of Trimble county known as the Pleasant Retreat neighborhood, about four miles from here, was visited this afternoon by a heavy rain, hail and electrical storm. Buildings were unroofed and chimneys and shade trees were blown down. The hail was very heavy and as large as walnuts. The wind and hail did great damage to corn, tobacco and other crops and crippled the telephone service. This is the third hailstorm to sweep this section in the past month. Milton and vicinity need rain badly, as crops and pastures are burning up.

DAIRY

ESTIMATING VALUE OF CALF

Young Animal Is Worth Practically Nothing Until Labor and Capital Have Been Invested.

In estimating the gross product of a cow it is customary to credit her with one calf a year valued at $5 to $10. A little clear thinking will reveal the fact that no such amount can properly be allowed the cow as a producer of wealth. The cow should be credited only with the value of her calf three days after birth. After that the calf is not longer the creation of the dam's internal economy, but the product of feed that has a market value. After that time the cow's milk can be sold for cash in some form of dairy product. The average cost of production of milk in the United States is close to five cents a quart. A husky calf will consume at least two gallons of milk a day to grow into a $10 veal at one month.

That it costs more to veal a calf than it will ordinarily bring is bad enough in itself and deserves deliberation on the part of the farmer who may not have given the matter of cost systems much thought, says a writer in an exchange. The point is that the calf is worth practically nothing until labor and capital have been put into him.

If anyone doubts this statement let him try to sell an ordinary calf when it is three days old and see what it will bring. It takes time and effort and money to bring a calf to the point where it is productive. Its value at birth is potential rather than actual. It would be as reasonable to credit the cow with a yearling worth $10 as a month-old calf worth $10.

A wellbred, registered calf is worth a goodly sum at birth because the purchaser can feed it expensive milk, grain and hay and still make a profit on its ultimate value. An ordinary calf would eat so much before it became productive that only a thoughtless person would pay anything for it at the beginning of its career.

Hence a cow may properly be credited with the actual selling value of her calf before any money is invested in its development.

METHOD FOR DRYING UP COW

No Specific Rule for Such Work—Judgment and Experience of Attendant Is Required.

A cow should be dried off for six weeks before calving. It may take two weeks to dry her off, that depending upon the persistency of milk flow. To dry off a cow the rich feed has to be removed and the cow allowed to pasture short grass or eat hay. Some milk is left in the quarters at each milking at first; then a milking is omitted; then the milking is done every other day, and afterward only a little milk is taken, as seen to be necessary. There is no specific rule for such work, and it requires the best judgment and experience of the attendant.

GRAIN RATION IS DESIRABLE

Corn-and-Cob Meal, Oats and Cottonseed Meal Mixture Is Recommended for Dairy Cows.

A desirable grain ration for cows, when corn and oats are used as a base, is one made up of 300 pounds of corn-and-cob meal, 200 pounds of oats and 100 pounds of cottonseed meal. Feed this at the rate of one pound for every three pounds of 4 per cent milk produced. In addition feed as much legume hay and corn stover as the cows will consume.

HAND STRIPPING IS FAVORED

Some Failures With Machines Due to Leaving Strippings in Udder—Last Milk Is Richest.

A milking machine user says that some failures with the machines are due to leaving the strippings in the udder. He believes in saving the last milk, which is the richest, and hand stripping enables him to know the exact condition of the cow's udder every day.

FARM STOCK

HORSES THRIVE ON ALFALFA

No Other Hay Comes So Near Being Ideal, If Sanely Used—Has Large Protein Content.

Some ridiculous prejudices are held against alfalfa. The less known about it the more intense is the prejudice, one that constantly has to be fought as the plant advances into strange territory is that it is unsuited and even dangerous to horses. The fact is, no other hay comes so near being ideal, if sanely used. Where largely grown and best known, it has largest popularity and use as a staple ration for horse and mule stock of all ages. One element that makes alfalfa so valuable is its large protein content—much larger than is found in any other hay. Best results are obtained by feeding with it, as a balance, other feeds having less protein.

Horse owners accustomed to using prairie or timothy hay, and keeping the mangers heaped, are likely to overfeed on alfalfa, with harmful effects, such as would follow from feeding too much oats or corn.

Regardless of theories and scientists, there is much testimony from men severely practical that alfalfa hay alone serves every purpose as a roughage for mature horses at heavy work and for growing colts of any age, although for some horses when driven fast it is found rather too much of a laxative. Hundreds of horse owners in western towns use it exclusively as hay for stage, omnibus, delivery and dray animals, and light drivers. In parts of California and adjacent states no other hay is known.

MAKING MONEY FROM SHEEP

Many Farmers Buying Scrubs in Fall and Holding Them for Lambs and Wool Crop.

As an indication of how farmers are turning to sheep as a quick money maker, I may cite the fact that a great many farmers are going on the markets early in the fall and buying scrub or "native ewes" shipped in from the West and Southwest and holding them over until the next fall. They get a lamb crop, as well as a wool crop, and are usually able to sell the old ewes for more than they gave for them by the simple expedient of finishing them for the mutton market.

If some judgment is used in buying these animals they will pay a profit, says an Illinois writer in Farm Progress. Many of them are very fair ewes, not the sort, of course, that a man would want if he were going into the exclusive business of sheep growing, but they usually deliver a fair lamb crop. It is easy to cull out the poorer ones at the end of the first year and replace them with better animals.

If scrub sheep of this sort will pay it is very easy to see that good breeding stock will greatly increase the profits. It should be the aim of every man who is growing sheep to gradually increase the amount of good blood in his flock.

MANAGEMENT OF FARM FLOCK

Sheep Practically Live Off Waste, Except for Short Time When Pasture Is Needed.

Any farm fenced hog tight is equipped to handle a few sheep, and they will practically live off the waste, except for a short period when a few acres of pasture are required. As soon as the corn is laid by, the sheep and lambs may be turned in. They will eat the weeds which you left and the grass that comes later, also the suckers and lower blades of corn, and finally tackle the corn. You can watch and move them to a stubblefield or pasture until the corn is out, then let them back into the stalks again. Little or no corn is required for raising sheep.

CLEANING UP AFTER CHOLERA

Work Should Be Done Promptly and Thoroughly—Little Pigs Lose Their Immunity.

All farms on which hog cholera has existed at any time during the past two years should be cleaned up promptly and thoroughly. The older hogs may have possessed a degree of immunity which enables them to resist successfully any hog cholera virus of lower power which was missed by previous clean-ups. Pigs from immune mothers do not possess this resisting power. The pigs from immune mothers lose their immunity after weaning.

Special Notice.
The Farmers' Mutual Telephone Directory says, I handle any kind of rubber tire; and that I have the exclusive agency of the Republic Rubber Tires. That contract just cost me $200 of which of some of my customers will attest. I guaranteed those tires and I filled same to the letter. Now, right here I do most solemnly promise and swear that I will never again change the old and tried for any new thing whatsoever. Furthermore, that I will not use any Rubber Tire except Kelly's Springfield—the first rubber tire ever made and the best. I ought to know for surely I paid last year to find out. It is just like a boy changing the old girl for the new or a man leaving his old and tried wife for a new one. Now, isn't it a fact that they always go back to the old and tried love, is it not so boys? That's what I have done with Kelly's Springfield Rubber Tire—gone back to my old love. While they cost me more money they will cost my customers $12.00 per set or $3.00 per tire: these tires I give a guarantee on for being as represented. They will not stuff out nor will they peel, but will wear smooth like a good tire should.

Now, in regards to repainting: I have tried to get a quick system and do good work, but I find it a failure so I give it up and must stick to the old system. All my work I guarantee to be as represented. I do anything in the carriage line. Bring me your work if you want it done right. I solicit your trade.

DIPHTHERIA TRACED TO CATS

Absolute Proof That Domestic Pets Can Be Carriers of Most Dangerous Disease.

The relationship between the diseases of men and of animals has been as much neglected in this country as it has been studied in the tropics. For this reason we are profoundly ignorant of the role which animals play—if they play any role at all—in the dissemination of epidemics.

Special interest attaches, therefore, to a communication to the National Medical Journal, which describes how an outbreak of diphtheria in an orphanage was traced back to some cats in the building. Sixty-nine cases of diphtheria out of a total of 71 came, it was found, from the boys' house. After many investigations and precautions such factors in the production of the disease as sanitary defects, contaminated water supply and food were eliminated. Realizing that there must be a carrier of the bacillus, the physician in charge decided to turn his attention to the cats and took swabs from all their throats.

On bacteriological examination it was found that the four cats from the boys' side of the orphanage were suffering from diphtheria; the four cats from the girls' side, although showing other microorganisms in profusion, did not prove to have the true diphtheria bacillus. The cats were destroyed, and after that only ten more cases of diphtheria occurred. They occurred within a few days, showing that they had already become infected when the cats were destroyed. There have been no cases since. This tends to show that cats are, or can be, carriers of diphtheria.

GOES SOUTH OF THE YANGTSE

Expedition From the American Museum of Natural History Is to Explore Strange Lands.

According to Roy Chapman Andrews, leader of the zoological expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, "the vast Tibetan region, north of the Himalaya mountains," is the region where remains of the early mammals, including man, may be found. The scope of the expedition is primarily zoological rather than anthropological, however.

Little is known of the large territory lying south of the Yangtse river, and the expedition, which will approach Central Asia by way of China, will spend much of its time in that neighborhood, and particularly in the wild and mountainous province of Kweichau, which, says Mr. Andrews, "is probably the most interesting of all, and is certainly one of the least known."

One thing that makes this province interesting is the presence of the independent tribe called the Miaotse, of which little is known.

Among other places, the expedition will visit Foochow, on the coast between Shanghai and Hongkong, where an effort will be made to get a specimen of a tiger hitherto uncatalogued by science. This animal, according to amateur naturalists, is "a handsome beast, with a Maltese ground color."

The Rodin Collection.

France has at last accepted the collection offered by the great sculptor, Rodin. It took her three years to decide. She always hesitates when authentic riches are offered her, remarks Cri de Paris. If it is a question of horrors, like those amassed by the late Chauchard, she jumps at them. Rodin has collected many antique marbles, but he has not admitted the terra cottas of Tanagra or Myrrhina into his gallery. "One may be easily deceived," he said. "It is so easy to mold an ancient original in clay. And how are you to detect the fraud? Henri Rochefort had two glass cases filled with Tanagras which were false. The fraud was discovered by analyzing the earth of which these statuettes were made. This substance, said the geologists, was found in the suburbs of Paris. So it was not certain that the Greek decorators would have gone there for their clay." Among other antique fragments Rodin possesses the marvelous hand of a statue. "This is signed Phidias," he said one day to an American who had come to visit him. The American turned the hand over to discover the precious stamp. He could not find it. "Ah," said Rodin, "the signature is only visible to the eye of the artist."

The Idea!

The new restaurant inspection squad from the department of health had penetrated into the dirtiest subcellar restaurant kitchen in the day's round. They found food without covers exposed to the dust-swirls of airshafts, and lamb chops riding up and down on the dirtiest dumb-waiter ever lifted. In the midst of the scurrying of kitchen maids to find the mislaid covers and to broom out the caked dumb-waiter dirt, a little Slavic maid sidled up to one of the inspectors.

"Say, will you please do the homes, too?" she said in a low undertone of broken English. "You know, where I board they don't care whether they clean any at all. When will you be there?"

All of which opened a heavier question than she thought.—New York Evening Post.

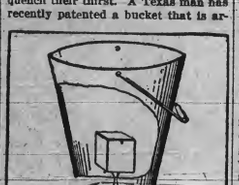
SALT USED AS A FERTILIZER

Results of Experiments Noted in Report Received by Department of Agriculture.

Fertilizer experiments with beets and turnips on a variety of soils to determine the extent to which common salt may be used as a substitute for potash are noted in a report recently received by the department of agriculture. Common salt was used at the rate of 425 pounds per acre and a 37 per cent potash salt at the rate of 375 pounds per acre.

The two salts gave practically the same results with sugar beets, although neither materially increased the yield. Turnips showed a smaller potash requirement than sugar beets. Where common salt was used in a complete fertilizer mixture, increases in crop yields were obtained. The conclusion is reached that 37 per cent potash salts may often be replaced by common salt for fodder roots, beets especially. It is also concluded that increased yields produced by additions of potash salts are not due solely to the fact that potassium is an essential nutritive element.

FOWLS RELISH EARTHWORMS



Excellent Plan to Turn Over Some Soil Each Day to Provide Hens With Needed Food.

We know the hens are fond of earthworms, and there are many morsels of food selected from fresh earth by the hens; therefore it is a good plan to turn some earth over in the pen each day with a spade, says a writer in Farm and Home. This should be done each morning as the earthworms come to the surface each night, then go back into the earth when the sun comes up. Therefore the work should be done between daylight and sun-up. If it cannot be done at this time some boards or an old door should be laid on the ground where the digging is to be done. This protects the worms so they remain near the surface. A space of soil three feet square turned over each morning will furnish 20 hens with fresh earth to work in during the day, and by moving systematically about the yard it will prevent the soil from becoming contaminated with disease.

KEEP DRINKING WATER COOL

During Harvesting Time Men Often Suffer From Thirst—Texas Man Meets Emergency.

Drinking water for harvest time should be cool as well as pure, and men working in the field often suffer for lack of cool drinking water to quench their thirst. A Texas man has recently patented a bucket that is arranged to keep the water cool. Inside the bucket is an ice container, an interiorly threaded sleeve being arranged in the bottom of the container. This is much more sanitary than ice water usually available, and the ice will last considerably longer than when merely thrown into the water in an open bucket. The warm air cannot strike the ice directly to melt it immediately.—Farming Business.

BENEFITS OF DRAINED SOILS

Deeper Feeding Ground Offered for Plants—Increase in Crop Yield May Be Expected.

A drained soil offers a deeper feeding ground for the plants. The roots of most cultivated crops will not go into saturated soil and will die if kept under water without air for more than a short time. The root zone is then, not the depth above the point of permanent saturation, but only that soil into which the fluctuating water-table does not rise except for periods too short to injure the plants seriously. Drainage tends to increase this depth to that of the drains, thus making a greater quantity of food available. Hence, an increase in crop yield may ordinarily be expected from the drainage of such land already under cultivation.

KILL STRIPED SQUASH BUG

Inexpensive Solution, Easily Made and Sprinkled Over Plants Will Drive Insects Away.

The striped squash bug won't bother plants that are sprayed with a thin solution made as follows: In a pail gather fresh cow droppings, fill the pail two-thirds full of water, then stir till well mixed, and sprinkle the plants thoroughly. The bugs will take their meals some other place.

No Fences.

In many parts of Europe there are no farm fences. This preserves for cultivation large acreage, taking the whole country over, that is made worse than useless by fences and the growth of wild stuff on either side of them, such as occurs in this country.

LIVE STOCK

FEEDING PERIOD FOR CATTLE

Animals Are on Full Feed When They Are Taking Grain and Roughage to Full Capacity.

(By J. L. TORMEY, University of Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment Station.)

The period between the time the steer is put into the feed lot and the time when he is ready to be turned off for beef is known as the feeding period. The short feeding period lasts from sixty to ninety days. The long feeding period averages one hundred eighty days, or about six months. Cattle are said to be on full feed when they are taking grain and roughage to their full capacity. Cattle cannot go on to full feed suddenly, for they cannot adjust themselves hurriedly to a change in diet. They must therefore be worked up to full feed gradually, and so be accustomed to the ration. This period is often known as the "warming up" period, and lasts from two to six weeks, depending upon whether the cattle have ever been accustomed to any grain. Since this is a fitting-up process, cattle get on to full feed somewhat more rapidly when fed on a ration made up largely of roughage material, and not a great deal of grain. Too much grain at the beginning will likely lead to digestive disturbances from which the cattle recover only slowly. Moreover, the cattle are later more subject to such attacks.

A larger proportion of steers are short fed than formerly, principally because the working margin is narrower, and the market does not make enough difference in price for the degree of finish put upon the cattle to warrant the longer period. Cheaper and larger daily gains can be made during the short period than during the long period, because, since the ration can be made heavier and the steer forced more rapidly, he will not waste so much of the ration.

VAT FOR SMALL FARM FLOCK

Place for Tank Is Dug Out in Ground and Lined With Cement or Bricks—It Is Inexpensive.

The illustration shows a good type of small dipping vat of about the right size for the average small farm sheep flock. Its construction is simple and fairly cheap. The place for the vat is dug out in the ground and lined with bricks or cement. The runways should be floored with pine boards and the fencing may be of any suitable material. Where it is not desirable or possible to buy someone of the many good metal, portable dipping vats for small flock use, a permanent tank like this will meet all needs.

HORSES FINDING MOST FAVOR

Greatest Weakness in Industry Is Production of Too Many General Purpose Animals.

The farmer who seeks to find favor among the horse buyers of today must produce an animal that is especially adapted to some particular kind of work. He must be a special-purpose horse, must possess the ability to do some one kind of work so exceptionally well, by reason of his conformation, that he is out of place at anything else.

Perhaps the greatest weakness in the horse-breeding industry is the production of too many general purpose horses. This kind of animal, while not especially adapted to any one kind of work, will do fairly well almost any kind of work, yet from the market standpoint he is not a profitable animal to breed. The special-purpose animal, while not costing any more to feed and raise, will sell in most cases for a much higher price.

POULTRY

COMBINED COOP FOR CHICKS

Pen Large Enough to Accommodate Four Hens Designed by University of Missouri Experts.

(By PROF. H. L. KEMPSTER, University of Missouri, College of Agriculture.)

A combined hatching, brooding and housing coop which is large enough to accommodate four hens and is as good as a 60-egg incubator has been designed by the poultry department of the University of Missouri. Farmers who have used this coop have pronounced it a success. This coop does away with the little "A"-shaped coops which are commonly given to hens after they have hatched their broods and which are soon outgrown by what chicks remain after the spring rains and rats have taken their toll.

The coop is three feet wide, six feet long, two feet high in the rear and three feet high in front. A door eight inches high runs the entire length of the back so as to permit easy access to the hen. The front consists of four little doors covered with rat-proof wire netting. These slide up and down. Just beneath the eaves is a door a foot wide running along the front. The opening made by this door is covered with wire screen also. By opening this door sufficient light is afforded, and also protection from rains. In front of this coop is placed four runways corresponding to the four openings. These are a foot high and three feet long. They are covered with wire screen also.

The coop can be used for hatching and brooding. It is divided by burlap frames into four compartments. The aim is to set four hens in the back part of the coop and keep food and water in the runways in front. After hatching the chicks from two hens are given to one for brooding. Later, when the hen weans her chicks, the remaining partition can be removed and the coop can be used to house the young stock for the remainder of the season. It makes hen hatching easier, and more efficient brooding possible. It can be made rat-proof very easily and can be removed from place to place with little trouble.

GOOD HINTS ABOUT GUINEAS

Hard to Estimate Number of Eggs Females Lay on Account of Their Habit of Hiding Nests.

The guineas are good layers, but owing to their skill in hiding their nests and their habit of changing their nest if it is disturbed, it is hard to say how many eggs they will lay, possibly 60 to 100. Guineas are inclined to be monogamous; that is, to have but one mate, but a male will mate with two females. Poor hatches usually result if more females are placed with a male.

Young guineas are fed like young turkeys, with curds, bread and milk or boiled eggs and bread crumbs the first week, always mixing once a day with sand, and for every meal making one-third of the meal green food, chopped onion or dandelion tops. Finely chopped lettuce is good when plentiful. Unless they have a good run they should have plowed fields to roam over; this is not necessary. When they are large enough to be given free range they will pick up most of their living, but should always be fed at night, to give them the habit of returning home.

Meat Food Pays Well.

It costs less to feed a pullet that is getting no meat scrap or skim milk, but it costs more to produce a dozen eggs from her—she lays so many less when deprived of meat food.

Geese and Ducks.

Geese cannot be profitably hatched and reared artificially, while incubators and brooders have revolutionized the duck business.

Swat the Mites.

Swat the mites in the hencoop. An application of crude creosote is good medicine for them.

Tone Up Fowls' Appetite.

A pan of buttermilk and ground feed now and then will tone up the appetites of the fowls.

The Big Bone and Hamilton pike was taken over at $500 a mile.

The Covington and Lexington Turnpike Co., notified the court that it would "entertain" its offer of $10,000 for its road, and the court is in doubt as to what the company meant by "entertain."

The court adjourned to meet again next Tuesday.

Fifty Years Ago in Owen County.

The Cincinnati Commercial Tribune of last Saturday, published among its items of 50 years ago, the following:

Oyster can containing $1,500 is washed away by a freshet from its place of concealment under the house of W. E. Ennis, on the bank of Brush Creek, in Owen County, Ky. Ennis was awakened by the freshet, which surrounded his dwelling. When it subsided he looked in vain for the hidden money.

A Bunch of Very Fine Hogs.

Jas. W. Huey, of Union, struck a blue ribbon market Thursday in Cincinnati when he delivered a car load of 56 hogs that averaged 190 pounds for which he received 10 cents a pound straight. Mr. Huey is one of the hustling farmers of his community, and generally has farm produce to dispose of when the market is at high tide.

Had a Narrow Escape.

Morris, son of V. W. Gaines, of Bullittsburg, came very near having a bad accident a few days ago. While moving about a threshing machine that was in operation a portion of his clothing was caught by a cog-wheel and came nearly drawing him into the cogs before he tore himself loose.

State News.

Paducah, July 27.—Branch Lee, sixteen years old, was almost instantly killed near Barlow, in Ballard county, yesterday when he slipped from a hay wagon and fell beneath the wheels.

Franklin, July 27.—It is understood that plans are about completed for the establishment of a factory here for the manufacture of twist tobacco. Tobacco men of Scottsville and local citizens here pooled issues and already about $10,000 has been subscribed.

Whitesburg, July 27.—The prospects are good for one of the best corn crops in recent years in Eastern Kentucky, the area being the largest perhaps, in the history of this section. Farmers of the mountains are working along modern lines of farming and are profiting thereby. Truck gardening has become a leading industry especially in the sections surrounding the mines.

Cynthiana, July 27. — County Agent O. F. Floyd is arranging an automobile tour through Central Kentucky counties. The trip will be especially interesting to farmers. A number of others will join the party, which will first go to Lexington, where the morning will be spent at the Experiment Station. In the afternoon visits will be made to the Camden, Sams Alexander and Taylor estates. A visit also will be made to McKee Bros.' farm, where a hog sale will be in progress.

Morehead, July 27.—This city was visited at six o'clock this evening by the worst wind and rainstorm in fifty years. Trees were uprooted and roofs blown from dwellings and business houses, entailing losses amounting tot housands of dollars. The court house, which had just undergone repairs was damaged to the extent of $2,000. The spire on the tower, along with chimneys, was blown over, and fell thru the roof, letting in torrents of water, which practically ruined the auditorium.

Boone Tree Blown Down.

The historic beech tree, known as the "Boone Tree," on which Daniel Boone, the famous pioneer American hunter carved the information that he had killed a bear, has at last yielded to the elements after having withstood the storms of time. This tree was blown down by a fierce wind recently and split in two, so that the historic inscription in its bark read, De Boone cilled a bar on tree in year 1760," is severed. This tree occupied a picturesque position in Washington county, East Tennessee, five miles northwest of the historic old capital of Jonesboro. The territory referred to was at that time a part of Carolina, but later was embraced in the short-lived State of Franklin. The tree can now be preserved only by the efforts of some interested society, after discarding all but that section which bears the inscription.—Exchange

Washington, July 27. — Nearly $700,000,000 for national defense in the fiscal year 1917 is the aggregate of proposed appropriations reached in the Senate today with the passage of the army appropriation bill carrying in round numbers $314,000,000.

This grand total for prepared-ness still is subject to revision, however, because the army bill will follow the naval bill into conference, where reductions are possible despite the firm attitude of President Wilson in supporting the [illegible] of the Senate in the call for adequate de-

About 50 autos were crossed at the Carrollton ferry Sunday.

It would surprise the people generally to know that over forty dwellings have been erected in Carrollton this building season

Howe Bros., received a ten dollar bill last week that looked comparatively new, yet it had been issued in this city in 1882 and was signed by J. M. Giltner, cashier of the First National bank.

Charles Hunt, who is raising about 10 acres of tobacco in the limits of Carrollton, has the finest tobacco we have seen in Carroll county. We measured a plant Tuesday and found it 35 inches long and twenty inches wide This plant had just been topped.

During a severe electrical storm in Switzerland county last Friday barns belonging to Geo Marker, Sam Kittle, Newland Brown, William Shaw, Harry Conner and Oscar Brindley, were struck by lightning and destroyed. Four horses, four hogs, two cows, 50 tons of hay and 500 bushels of wheat were burned.

Little Stanley Stethen, aged about two years, died Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. at the home of his father, Robt. Stethen, on the Lanham place near Milton after a short illness. On Monday afternoon he and a little playmate, Leon Oak, while at play, ate leaves from a jimson weed They both became violently ill, but the Oak child, it is supposed, had not eaten as much of the weed as the Stethen child and so responded to medical treatment more rapidly. The sufferings of the Stethen child were intense, and he died in paroxysms Two physicians were present, but nothing could be done to save the child.

NEWS FROM OWEN COUNTY

(Owen County Democrat.)

The mail route to Sparta has been transferred by Mr Newton O'Banion to Austin Kistner It is a shame to bid the routes down so low. It is worth $4,000 to carry the Sparta mail and if people would lay away from it and let some man bid they would get it

A look around the town on almost any morning and more especially Sunday morning will reveal the fact that quite a number of quart bottles have been emptied and pitched out. They bear the label of Old Hayner, Sandy Hook, Sam Clay, Melwood etc Now this is an expensive habit to who ever the users are and in the course of a year enough money can be squandered at it to make a nice little savings bank deposit and we would wager a gill of butter milk that this money spent upon the family Christmas week will bring a thousand times more joy and do the donor lots more good.

To the man who is trying to put by something for a rainy day things around Owenton are looking good Crops where they have been cultivated were never better The hay crop is good and grass is fine and most people who try are living out of their gardens and not out of tin cans and yellow paper sacks To those who live up all they make it matters but little to their future whether things are prosperous or not they live on just the same The man who is trying to make the last payment on his farm certainly appreciates the blessings of a good crop and prosperous times

Water for The Birds.

[Indianapolis News]

Advice regarding bird life in midsummer, issued by the American Forestry Association, states that July is a month of transition. Many species of birds are still nesting while some are already beginning to get ready for their Southern journeys. The waxwings and goldfinches are just beginning to build their nests, but the majority of species have either completed their family cares, or are starting again on a second brood. The swallows and the blackbirds have gathered into flocks, the former congregating on the wires, especially along lake shores, and the latter assembling in great concourse in the tops of the evergreens and in the marshes.

The rainy days of June are at an end, and standing pools of water and even springs begin to go dry so that water becomes scarce. The birds now desert the dry hill sides and even the gardens where no water is available, and move down to the borders of streams and moist woodlands Now is the time to put out water for the birds if you have not already done so. A bird bath or fountain in the garden will not only retain the birds already there, but will draw in many others. If you can have running water, so much the better, but if not, even a shallow pan in which the water is replenished will be serviceable It must be less than an inch deep where the birds are to enter and the bottom must not be slippery

Turkey Eating Cow Owned By Seymour, Ind. Man.

Seymour, Ind., July 27.—After having missed a number of young turkeys and chickens during the last few weeks, William Stockamp, a farmer, four miles west of here, decided he would be able to catch the thief if he would lie in wait for him, because the thieves were operating during the day. To his surprise he discovered that one of his cows was the thief, apparently enjoying the feathers of the young birds as much as the flesh and the bones.

TIDAL WATER POWER.

Efforts are now being made to utilize the swift tidal currents in the Bay of Fundy in the production of power. This bay extends from the island of Grand Manan, off the mouth of the St. Croix River, in a northeasterly direction for about 150 miles. It separates the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and two-thirds of its length from Grand Manan is a straight solid body of water some 40 miles in width, then is split by a narrow neck of land into two almost equal legs, the left leg known as Chignecto bay and the right leg as Minas basin. In this great body of water the tides of the ocean rise to a greater height than anywhere else in the world. At the head of the bay in the two legs mentioned the tides reach the height of 50 feet; even at the city of St. John on the main body of the bay they rise 28 to 30 feet. In some places there are very swift currents, exceeding, in fact, the flow of the swiftest rivers, and it is the utilization of these currents for power that is now greatly interesting the maritime provinces of Canada. The general flow in the middle of the bay is from one to two knots an hour, and the maximum rate at Digby gut on the Nova Scotia coast is four knots, but in the right leg of the bay, known as Minas channel, the rate is from eight to ten knots.

The man who shirks his work, who treats the service of labor with indifference, who sacrifices his efficiency on the altar of self-indulgence, loafs on his job and plans to see how little he can do and not be caught, is to be the most pitied man on the face of the earth. He thinks he is cheating his employer. But the employer is not the man he is cheating. Far from it. He is cheating himself, says Dayton Journal. More than cheating himself, he is assassinating opportunity and paving the way to utter ruin and disgrace. The man who accomplishes anything in this world, the man who amounts to anything worth measuring is the man upon whom dependence can be placed. It does not matter what the task is, big or little, every man is measured by the degree of his responsibility. The man who cannot be trusted with labor for which he is honestly paid is just as despicable as the man who refuses to pay for labor honestly performed. The shirker is essentially dishonest. Unfaithful to himself, setting the bomb that will sooner or later send him to poverty, he is a menace and an abomination.

Language, according to the national joint committee of the reorganization of high-school English, is social in nature. Other authority has insisted that the purpose of language was to conceal thought. And no doubt social relations do progress more smoothly when thoughts are not exposed. Thus the use of language is clear, and the more expert we are in that use the more social we can be without friction.

Experiments show that a single gallon of gasoline, intelligently used, will furnish power to milk 300 cows, mix 35 cubic yards of concrete and bale four tons of hay. It will also plow three-fifths of an acre of land, move a ton truck 14 miles, and generate enough electricity to light a farmhouse for 30 hours.

FEDERAL ROAD FUNDS.

Secretary of Agriculture Apportions Money to States, as Provided In New Road Law.

The Secretary of Agriculture under date of July 21, 1916, certified to the Secretary of the Treasury and the governors and State high way departments of the several States the following apportionment of the $5,000,000 of Federal road funds available for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917. This is the first installment of Federal moneys to be apportioned to the States under the Federal-aid road act approved July 11, 1916. Before making the division among the States, the Secretary, in accord ance with the act, deducted 3 per cent, or $150,000, needed for administering its provisions. This left $4,850,000 to be apportioned among the States, one-third in the ratio of area, one-third in the ratio of population, and one-third in the ratio of mileage of rural delivery routes and star routes. The apportionment on this basis gives Kentucky $97,471 91.

SWEET CLOVER AS A BUILDER OF THE SOIL.

County Agent Lowery Advocates; More Extensive Sowing of This "Roadside Weed."

Any farmer has a big problem before him when he tries to make a living and improve his farm at the same time, as most of us know. It is a poorly paying proposition when we try to continuously grow crops on thin lands that are extremely deficient in organic matter and nitrogen—the most needed of all soil amendments. Phosphorus, though a limiting factor in crop production, can be economically supplied in the form of acid phosphate or raw rock phosphate; and in order to obtain best results, especially with some of the leguminous crops, it is usually advisable and most essential to apply ground limestone, or its equivalent. Yet, no matter what forms of fertilizers are applied maximum returns will not be realized unless the soil is well supplied with organic matter, and the use of acid phosphate, ground limestone, etc., should be looked upon as a means of obtaining this end. With plenty of decaying organic matter, hymus, in the soil, plant food will become available more rapidly and then raw rock phosphate would give the most economical source of phosphorus.

At this season the farmers are preparing for their summer sowing of clovers and alfalfa, and a large acreage of crimson clover will be sown this month, it being one of the best winter cover crops that we have. In addition to the list of clovers with which we are most familiar, there is another plant that has rapidly come into prominence and now occupies an important place in the agricultural world, especially for the purpose of restoring thin, depleted soils, and soils that are so subject to erosion. This plant is sweet clover.

Sweet clover has conclusively proven its value for "soil improvement," and is now recognized as one of the very best crops that can be grown on thin, rolling or hill land. In addition to its superiority over the other clovers as a fertilizer crop, chemical analysis and feeding experiments indicate that, when cut at the proper stage of growth, the nutritive value of sweet clover compares very favorably with that of alfalfa; and since sweet clover grows successfully in soils that will not profitably grow alfalfa, or any other crop, there seems to be a peculiar merit attached to this "roadside weed," as some of us like to call it. Sweet clover has no superior when it comes to growing a crop that will "fit" the land for alfalfa, because it not only produces the necessary organic matter and nitrogen to be added to the soil, but it also leaves the soil fully inoculated for alfalfa. The bacteria living on the roots of alfalfa and sweet clover are interchangeable.

Heretofore, it has been very difficult to get a stand of sweet clover, because of the irregular, low rate of germination due to the high percentage of "hard" seeds; but since the advent of the Ames Scarifier, the treated or scarified seed germinate just as readily as any of the other clovers or alfalfa, and this seems to have solved the problem of getting sweet clover to germinate satisfactorily. For summer sowing the earlier in August, the better, only the hulled and scarified seed should be used. Sow about ten to 12 pounds of seed per acre, on a firmly prepared seed bed, providing a light covering for the seed. Bacteria culture for inoculation purposes can be obtained thru the county farm agent's office, without charge. For best and quickest results, apply a ton of ground limestone per acre—two or three tons would be better. The addition of a little acid phosphate would also be an advantage, not only to the sweet clover, but to whatever crops that follow.

Quite a number of the farmers have already made preparation for sweet clover sowings, and I trust that these men will soon be able to demonstrate to their neighbors the real merits of this crop.—S. J. Lowry, County Farm Agent, Oldham county.

PROFIT IN LIVE STOCK.

Cost of Growing Beef Cattle in The Corn-Belt States

Adds to Farm Income in Most Cases—The Manure As a Fertilizer Valuable.

That cattle in most cases add to the farm income in the corn belt is indicated by the results of a recent investigation conducted by the department as part of a comprehensive study of the meat situation in which its specialists have been engaged for some time. The direct profit from the raising of calves in this section, the average seem to establish, is usually small, but the investigators point out that there are other factors which make the practice more advantageous than would appear at first sight.

Among these advantages are the fact that live stock on the farm provide a home market and a means of utilization of farm roughage, some of which might be wasted if not fed, and the use of pastures which could not be employed profitably in any other way. Live stock also affords a ready home market for certain other crops, which at times would have to be hauled considerable dis tances to be sold. Finally, the presence of live stock on the farm gives productive employment thru out the year to labor which at certain seasons might otherwise be idle. Live stock also gives some interest on capital invested in equipment, which would produce nothing if not utilized at all seasons. The fertilizing value of manure also must be considered. When these factors are taken into consideration, yet though there appears to be little or no profit as shown by cost figures, it is believed that in most instances the farm income is greater because of cattle having been kept on the farm. The keeping of live stock, therefore, is to be recommended on farms having large quantities of cheap roughage available or having land which can be best utilized as pasture.

Sow Crimson Clover Now.

Crimson clover, a winter annual, thriving during the cool parts of the year, will not stand the hot sun and should be sown during the late summer in Kentucky says the Farmers' Bulletin. It will furnish a light crop of hay of very good quality. Crimson clover is a free seeder, and as high as ten bushels of seed per acre is sometimes secured. If sown early, it furnishes considerble pasture both in fall and spring.

Crimson clover, however, is most useful and important as a green manure plant. It can be sown in many cases as a catch crop and not interfere at all with the regular rotation. It will furnish a cover crop during the winter, preventing the leaching of plant food and washing of the soil, and being a legume will gather nitrogen from the air. Its early maturing allows it to make a maximum growth and yet be plowed under in time to raise a crop of corn, tobacco or soy beans on the land the same year.

There seems no good reason why crimson clover should not succeed in Kentucky, if handled in the right way. It is so valuable that it is certainly worthy of trial by every farmer. In other States and in some cases in Kentucky a good stand of crimson clover has been gotten by sowing in corn or in other cultivated crops. As a rule, however, this practice has proven unsuccessful, very poor stands of clover being gotten. Where sown alone on a special seed bed as after wheat, it has been easy to get a stand. No sowing ought to be done later than the middle of August. Choose a time for planting when there is sufficient molature in the soil not only to germinate the seed, but to enable the young plants to root firmly. This point cannot be emphasized too much. To grow crimson clover successfully, there must be sufficient moisture in the soil at time of planting. If such a time does not occur, crimson clover had better not be planted. Cover the seed carefully. They are quite large and will stand being covered from one-half to one inch. Be sure the seed is good. Do not plant on very thin soil.

Crimson clover is not a plant adapted to bring up productiveness, but rather to maintain it. It will not thrive on wet, acid soils. Sow about fifteen to 20 pounds of good seed per acre. Try a small field at first. Do not be content with one year's trial. Such a trial is never conclusive.

AUGUST TERM CIRCUIT COURT

Will Convene Next Monday—Business In Every Department in Fine Shape.

Next Monday the August term of the Boone circuit court will convene for a term of two weeks if the business requires it. The sheriff has the business in his department in fine shape as has also the Master Commissioner, and there is every indication that matters of importance will be disposed of during the term in a most expeditious manner by Judge Gaines.

GAME WARDEN

In the County Last Week Looking After Violators of The Law.

Game Warden Scales spent a day or two in this neighborhood last week, and it is said that his presence created a commotion in some of the localities he visited in the county, as along some of the streams there is considerable complaint of taking fish contrary to law by persons who come from other neighborhoods, and a determination to enforce the fish law has developed into a demand along that line that in all probability, will result in the next grand jury interviewing a great many witnesses.

Weeds---Our Peculiar Luxury.

Weeds are a tax on agriculture They cost the country millions of dollars annually. And they take an extra toll from Uncle Sam's annual income thereough their effect on the general health, but just how much weeds hamper human efficiency has not been reduced to dollars and cents.

The professional hay feverite who loses his two or three weeks regularly every summer is not the only victim of the weed. Summer colds, rose fever and smaller catarrhal afflictions may limit a man's capacity for effective work for weeks, yet they are caused by nothing seemingly more important than a pleasant breeze. The danger comes when that chance wind blows over somebody's weed crop.

A movement tending toward the destruction of all hay fever weeds has been launched in many states, and it will serve a double purpose for it happens that the farmer and the hay fever victim blacklist the same weeds.

The flowers of the condemned plants are inconspicuous and with out attractive odor. But they produce great quantities of a light pollen which nature, to suit her own purposes of fertilization, has shaped to be carried on the wind. This fine dust places the rag weed, the yellow dock the careless weed, the cockle burr and certain grasses among the plant pests. Recently the president of the national hay fever association has pointed out the common daisy fleabane as one of those plants which, like flies should be destroyed on sight.

Weeds advertise themselves and the land owners. Pretty soon the man who fails to keep down the weeds on his property will be regarded with decided disfavor by the energetic members of his community.

New Orleans has already passed the first ordinance ever enacted for the benefit of hay fever sufferers. Among those punishable under it are owners tenants and occupiers of premises and firms and corporations having privileges in the streets.

"The Boys of Sixty-One"

The million of men who stood at the forefront in the stirring scenes of 1861-5, who are yet in the land of the living are yet in the habit of speaking of each other as "the boys." When marching and fighting and doing that which puts to the fullest test manly fortitude, that is what they were, boys, and they will never forget those trying times.

The Omaha World-Herald, in a recent issue, gave some statistics showing that the vast majority of those who served in the Union army were but boys. Those who enlisted when 18 years of age, or under that, numbered over a million. Those who were 21 years old or under that numbered more than two million. Those who enlisted who were 22 years or over, numbered but 618,511. Those 25 years old and upward numbered but 46,626.

What is said of enlistments in the Union ranks will doubtless apply to those who fought in the Confederate armies. A large number of them, a majority doubtless were below the age of 21 when they entered the service under the Stars and Bars.

Wonder is sometimes expressed that so many of these "boys of 61" still survive. But a boy who was as young as 16 in 1861, is now 71. One enlisting at the age of 20 is now but 75, and many men live to that age. That so many of the veterans who yet fondly address each other as "boys" is due to the fact that when they rallied to the colors, they were mere boys.

But most of those yet living have been here the full three score and ten years, the allotted time given to human life, and are living, as the saying goes, "on borrowed time." Every day and every hour in the day some one of them hears "taps" sounded, and the time is near at hand when the muster-out will come to the last one of the one-time millions. —Knoxville Journal-Tribune.

What the Citizens Make It.

What's the matter with Aurora? The following is from the Bulletin of that city:

Every town is just what the citizens make it. And we could make this the best little town in the state to live in if we would have it so. What we need mostly is more sociability and less haughtiness. We cannot afford to live just for ourselves alone. While some are blessed with more privileges and opportunities than others, that alone does not make them any better. Some people have burdens to bear that their neighbors may know nothing of and if they were treated with the courtesy and respect due, no doubt it would go a long way toward lessening their burdens. A "How do you do" or a "good morning" and occasional handshake is very bracing, especially if you are feeling somewhat blue, it would be a good habit to form, and after we would get accustomed to it we do not believe anybody would regret it. Anyhow it is worth a trial. Let's try it.

Business Men's Outing.

The local Business Men's Council had its annual outing, last Saturday, in J. M. Eddins' beautiful woodland pasture half a mile south of Burlington. The day was ideal, and those who arranged for the occasion had let nothing escape them that was calculated to contribute to the pleasures of those in attendance. The menu consisted of fried fish, corn bread, black coffee, ice water and a few such other condiments as are expected to be found on such occasions.

After the crowd assembled J. M. Eddins delivered an address of welcome that was received with enthusiasm by both the members of the council and the visitors. Chas. Westbay responded to the address in a happy manner and the outing was on.

By the middle of the afternoon the exercises booked for the day were completed, the occasion was voted a success and the journey homeward begun.

The Fault Finder.

The person that stands on the street corner looking around for something to find fault with, can always find what he is looking for, But what a life he lives. His soul shrivels and withers until it is shown in his manner and looks. For such a person life has lost its savor. It becomes sour, misanthropic, whining. He passes from bad to worse and sees no good in anybody. His taxes are always too high, no matter how low they may be, and he cusses his neighbors because they are prosperous and enjoy life. In fact he hates himself, as a menace to a town's prosperity, a foe to God and no good to the devil. These persons seem to be a necessary evil in every town.

It's no Longer Commissary.

The ladies in what heretofore has been known as Commissary neighborhood, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Ryle, a few days since, and organized a ladies club, and the first act of the club was to ordain that "hereafter the name of this neighborhood shall be Clover Lane instead of Commissary," which name the club deemed the more appropriate because of the exumberent growth of sweet clover that lines the sides of the roads leading to the point for many years called "The Commissary." The club will look after many matters of importance to the neighborhood.

Unlawful to take fish with gig or spear or fishing under the rock, groping, grabbing, tickling, or sledging, by use of dynamite, or other explosive by use of poisonous substance, or to shoot fish in any manner."

Rising Sun's Fourth Jockey Day.

Rising Sun will have another Jockey Day, Monday. RING OUT THE CHEAP; RING IN

I asked a shoe man the other day why it was that shoes were so much higher in price than they used to be.

"Shoe leather has gone up," he said. "Most people think that's the reason. But it's only one reason.

"People are buying better shoes than they used to. They want more comfortable shoes. Better fit. They want longer wear and more style. They want some individuality, too."

I thought to myself: Well here's a condition just like the one we are experiencing in the automobile business.

Nearly every 3400 r. p. m. we have sold this year has been to someone who has driven a lower priced car.

I know for myself that it pays to buy better shoes as well as a better car.

But it seems that the great big buying public has the same idea, too.

I'm particularly strong for the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers because she's got tremendous endurance.

There are now more than 1,000,000 miles of use in owners' hands behind her—and that tells a lot.

Besides the factory writes me that she has a record of service of 99.21 percent perfect.

If you never had a run in her let me know. I want you to get this thrill whether you have any idea of buying or not.

The Roads Must be Maintained.

There is no sense or reason in spending two thousand dollars per mile for the construction of good roads, or any other sum for that matter, unless some means for maintaining them are adopted. Grant county's part of the Dixie Highway will soon be completed, but so far as we have learned no steps have been made toward keeping the road up after it is built. Of course, the State and National governments may assist in its maintenance, but so far no provisions of that kind have been made, and unless the county takes some steps towards keeping the road up it will last a comparatively short time. Aside from the Dixie Highway we have 600 or more miles of hard roads in the county, all of which is going to pieces rapidly, some of which is in very bad condition, and the funds available are neither sufficient to keep them up to their present state or to improve them. The road problem is just about the biggest problem we have to deal with just now.—Grant County News.

CROP REPORT

Despite Dry Weather Crops Are In Fair Condition.

General Rain is Badly Needed In Most Places.

Frankfort, Aug., 7.—Notwithstanding the very hot and dry weather the July crop report issued today by Commissioner of Agriculture, Matt S. Cohen, indicates that with sufficient rainfall this month growing crops will not be hurt and pastures will be good. In some sections wind and hail badly damaged corn and tobacco, but at most places they suffered from lack of rain.

The report follows:

"The generally dry and extremely hot weather during the month of July, as shown by the crop reporters, give the condition of growing crops as fairly good and a chance to be greatly benefited by good rains. Insufficient showers have fallen in some localities and complaint is made of heavy hail and windstorms damaging crops. The late corn can yet make a good crop if we get a good general rain. The same is true of the tobacco crop. Pastures are reported in fairly good condition. The condition of corn, as reported July 1, was 87 per cent., and shows August 1 at 90 per cent.

"Estimating the yield in bushels per acre on a ten-year average the wheat yield this year is given at nine bushels, and in some instances of interior quality. The Hessian fly damaged the wheat greatly, and some localities only give an average of three bushels.

"It is estimated oats will make an average of 17 bushels and rye ten bushels.

"The acreage of Burley tobacco is given at 92 per cent. and condition at 88 per cent., while dark tobacco acreage shows 93 per cent and condition at 90 per cent. The condition of hemp is given at 96 per cent.

"Grasses are generally good, clover being given at 92 per cent., orchard grass at 91 and sowpeas and soy beans both at 90 per cent.

"The State average of the second cutting of alfalfa is given at one and one-half tons per acre. The present condition of alfalfa shows 85 per cent.

"Garden conditions show 89 per cent., while potatoes are given at the same.

"The condition of livestock is very good and but little or no disease is reported as being prevalent. Some hog cholera exists in localities. Reports give the condition of livestock as follows: Horses, 94 per cent.; cattle, 95; hogs, 97; Sheep, 92.

"The condition of poultry follows: Chickens, 92 per cent.; turkeys, 84; ducks, 88.

"We have very poor prospects for fruit. Apples will not make one-half crop. Peaches show a condition of 65 per cent., pears 62 per cent. and grapes 86 per cent.

"Rains now would greatly aid late corn and tobacco crops.

"Farmers are urged to sow rye, barley or wheat as soon as possible for the winter pastures."

Newspapers Hard Hit.

During the last six months there have been steady advances in the cost of news print paper, and the current market is from 125 to 150 per cent higher than that of a year ago, says the Elkhart, Indiana, Truth. Not only are the newspapers affected by this unusual increase, but the mails are unable to supply the demand.

The situation is so serious that many papers are actually facing a print paper "famine," which may force some of them to suspend publication. The cost has increased to such an extent that subscription rates are being raised to ward off deficits that would prove disastrous to even well established newspapers.

In order to conserve the supply of newspapers, incident to the importance of European war news and domestic news of extraordinary interests has drawn heavily upon the supply of news print. During the first five months of the present year the news print mills of the United States and Canada approximately 800,000 tons of news print, an increase of about 13 per cent over deliveries of the corresponding months of the previous year. This is at the rate of about 1,900,000 tons a year, or 150,000 tons in excess of 1915 deliveries. The increased demand has more than equaled the enormous increase in out-put of the mills, and there is much concern regarding the future. Newspapers throughout the country are affected by these conditions.

The federal trade commission is conducting an investigation of the situation, and hearings are shortly to begin in Washington.

While it is believed relief may be brought about within a reasonable time, the newspapers, for self-preservation, are forced to advance their rates, the same as staple commodities have to be advanced to meet similar market conditions.

The protracted meeting that Rev. Clounch has been holding at Gunpowder church has resulted in six additions up to and including last Sunday night. Harry and Manley Gulley, by letter, and Miss Pettit, two Miss Adams and Walter Whitcomb by confession

L. L. Eddins, 29, son of Mr. and Mrs J. M. Eddins, and Miss Lallie Rice, 19, only daughter of Mr and Mrs. Edward Rice, were married by Rev Campbell at his residence near the Bullittsburg church, last Saturday evening

Changes in School Law.

A number of important changes were made in the school laws of the State by the last Legislature which have just become effective. For instance, the annual election of school trustees under the revised school laws will, in the future, be held on the first Saturday in October instead of the first Saturday in August, and the incumbents hold office until next March. Other changes may be summarized as follows: The school census will be taken biennially; under the compulsory school law parents and guardians may be put in jail for failure to pay fines assessed for not sending their children to school; the amount of money a county may spend for indigent children is increased from $100 to two hundred dollars; counties may erect joint high schools; graded districts must maintain a high school or pay tuition for their graduates, and the graded district trustees may increase the tax from 50 to 75 cents and the poll tax from one dollar and 50 cents to $2.50; railroad and bridge taxes due special districts are collected by the county school department instead of the sheriff, and students entering the high school at twenty years of age may continue through the course.

Paris.—When Jas. Humphreys residing on the Mathew Lair farm, near Paris, struck a driftwood hook into what he supposed was a log floating down Copper Run creek and the log began to hiss and violently splash the water, James received the scare of his life, for the "log" proved to be an alligator, measuring five feet, supposed to be one of several which escaped from the farm of Cateby Woodford several months since. Mr. Humphreys secured his rifle and shot the saurian. Altho he has been offered a good sum for the hide, he says he will have a taxidermist mount it and will preserve it as the only alligator ever killed in the waters of Central Kentucky.

Barbed Wire For Fortifications

Barbed wire has been for many years past a common material of permanent fortification, and in the South America war it was freely used in blockhouse lines and siege defenses, but its general use in field warfare only commenced during the present war. Its extensive use does not seem to have been expected, for even the far-seeing and ever-ready Germans were by no means well provided with it at the commencement, a fact explained, perhaps, by their vigorous offensive policy.

The allies were even worse prepared. When trench warfare first started the amount of barbed wire available per mile of front was a tiny percentage of what is supplied now. Supplies from England were practically non-existent, and a division considered itself lucky to get a wagon-load every now and then. Most of the wire put out was that laboriously collected from fences and hedges. Nowadays divisional supplies can be measured in tons per day. There are not only the front trenches to protect where the activities of hostile guns and patrols make maintenance a never-ending task, but numerous reserve lines and redoubts as well.

Barbed wire entanglements have been for years past the subject of experiments from the various points of view of obstructiveness, economy in labor and materials, concealments and so forth; but they have usually been considered as works which could be erected in comparative peace. This war, however, has introduced new conditions for the barbed-wire setter. It is one thing to put up an entanglement in broad daylight and in peace and quietness; quite another to do so on a pitch-dark night amidst shell holes and debris of all kinds with the enemy's sentries and machine guns only a hundred yards away. Methods which would be sensible in one case would be madness in the other. No better illustration of the difficulties of "wiring" at the extreme front can be found than the fact that though at the former place the necessity for wire is much the greater, the entanglements are much inferior. When the enemys' wire converges on to one's own work upon it becomes essentially a night job for small parties and to be quickly done. The quietest times for work are perhaps those when the opposite force is similarly engaged. Then it is a case of "wire and let wire."

The Germans are in no way behind hand in wiring, either as regards skill or bravery. The official dispatches, especially those relating to Loos and Neuva Chapelle, abound in instances of serious, in fact vital, checks due to cleverly placed German wire. In some places very thick barbed wire which resists all ordinary hand wire cutters has been used; in others shell holes or concealed trenches have been filled with wire which escaped shelling; in others a more than usually plucky garrison has managed to put out fresh wire during even final fierce bombardment.—Ex.

Care For Your Tools.

If you are to get the full value from your investment in improved machinery and better implements, you must watch the implements and the machinery as you would watch your horse or your cow, or yourself. You must keep them fit. You must protect them from the weather, protect them from accident. You should reduce the wear and tear to the lowest possible point, by making repairs as soon as they are needed, and by knowing why the engine or the food chopper or the pump is "not working as well" as it was yesterday.

These things do not make life on the farm harder; they make it easier. All of the suggestions that are made by our contributors or subscribers and by thoughtful men in the colleges, or the farm demonstrators, look to greater com fort, to greater ease, to greater satisfaction for the farmer. It is not more work, but it is work better applied that these writers suggest. It is a saving of labor. The farmer should get in the habit of making one trip to the barn do the work of two that he usually takes.

The DAIRY

UDDER DEVELOPMENT OF COW

Sufficient Importance Not Placed on Dairy Characteristics by Dairy Cattle Owners.

Many owners of dairy cattle do not place sufficient importance on the purely dairy characteristics of the animals they keep and breed. One of the points often overlooked is udder development, although it would seem that this would be the first thing an intelligent dairyman would look for in the selection of a cow. While an occasional cow with a small, ill-shaped udder will give a good quantity of milk, such animals are merely the exceptions which prove the rule that good dairy cows should show good development of the milk organs.

The good udder is large but does not display its size by hanging in a low inverted conical shape. Such an udder does not add to the beauty and symmetry of the animal and too often its dangling, swaying motion in travel is a source of irritation. It cannot possibly be expected to give as good results as a blocky compact udder of equal size in each quarter and extending well to the front and rear. The teats should be of sufficient size to be grasped firmly while milking. They should be set squarely on the quarter and be of cylindrical rather than conical shape. The cow with a low hanging bag and conical-shaped teats is not a choice animal to milk and it will usually be found that she does not do well at the pail.

Parentage has much to do with the conformity of the cow's udder, and while the sire will influence this characteristic to a certain extent the function of the udder is not after his nature and the dam will have to be depended upon largely to perpetuate proper form in this regard. Practical experience will prove that a heifer calf will ordinarily have in a marked degree the external milk organ characteristics of her dam. It is therefore doubly desirable that in the selection of breeding stock close attention be paid to the udder development.

VARIETY OF FEEDS FOR CALF

When Animal Is Four Weeks Old It Can Get Along Without Milk—Gruel Answers Purpose.

After a calf is four weeks old it can get along very well on little or no milk if you are short. Make a gruel out of a variety of feeds, say cornmeal, oil meal, middlings, bran, ground oats; mix them all together and cook a kettle of it, having about the consistency of gruel. At first feed a pint of this in three quarts of warm water, increase to a quart of the gruel.

In addition, give the calf clover hay and ensilage if you have it; in fact, any roughage you happen to have. Also begin to feed it cornmeal and ground oats as soon as it will eat.

SUMMER WORK IN THE DAIRY

Nothing More Unpleasant Than When Pastures are Short and the Flies are Troublesome.

At no time of the year is dairying more unpleasant work than during the time when pastures are short and the flies are troublesome.

Now is the time when it pays to have supplemental forage crops and to darken the stables and keep the cows inside during the hottest part of the day. The cold weather during the winter is less difficult to contend with than the hot sun and flies during the summer.

COWS REQUIRE MUCH WATER

Animals Should Have Access to Supply at Least Twice Daily—Well Water Is Best.

Milking cows require a much larger quantity of water than is necessary for growing animals. They should have access to a good clean water supply at least twice a day. The best supply is well water pumped into a tank or trough, failing this a running stream is best.

SALAD MAKING.

The making of salad is an art. Often the simplest combinations, if carefully put together, will make an otherwise common salad an artistic creation. Lemon juice is preferred to vinegar when using fruit and heavy, rich salad dressings are not appropriate for either fruit or meat or fish salads.

The materials to be used for salad should be free from water. Carefully dry all lettuce and fruit after washing for oil will not mix with water. French dressing is the general favorite for crisp vegetable salads as it is quickly prepared. A vinegar that has been used on pickled beets, or cucumbers should always be saved to use in salad dressings. When making the boiled variety the spiced vinegar makes an unusual flavor which is well liked.

If a color scheme is to be carried out a little vegetable coloring may be added to the dressing. A pretty combination is chopped beets with a dressing colored a light pink. Garnish the salad with white leaves of lettuce.

A salad may not only fill an ornamental place on the table, but it is also recognized as having a distinct food value as well as a pleasure to the eye.

A jar of salad dressing with little seasoning in it except salt may be kept on hand for use, than by the addition of a spoonful or two of the dressing to a half cupful of whipped cream one has a delicious salad dressing, adding such seasonings as seem appropriate to the salad served.

Salmon Salad.—Carefully flake with a fork a can of salmon, add a half cupful of finely shredded celery and the same of cabbage; add one large sour pickle, finely chopped and a salad dressing which has been seasoned with mustard, catchup and red pepper.

Raisin Salad.—To a half cupful of cut raisins, add a cupful of freshly grated cocoanut, and two cupfuls of apple finely diced. Mix with a mayonnaise mixed with whipped cream and serve on lettuce.

Morehead,—Near Paragon, this county, Roll Alfrey, a country merchant, was shot five times from ambush and fatally wounded while traveling the public highway.

Maysville—County Atty. Wm. H. Rees has come out in a long article in a local newspaper advocating the abolition of the present magisterial system in this county and electing three commissioners.

Henderson—The Ohio Valley Bank, acting as agent for several clients, sold 20,000 bushels of corn to local buyers at 85½ cents a bushel. This is the highest price paid on the local market for corn in five years.

Ransom Ryle, of Beech Grove neighborhood, spent last Thursday in Burlington, his first appearance here since he took up his abode at his new home. His appearance indicates that the Lick creek breezes agree with him.

Mayfield—The watermelon crop is the shortest known here in years. It is even worse than the cantaloupe crop. The cause is the hot and dry weather which dried the vines during July. Watermelons are selling so high now that very few are being eaten except by the colored folks, who always buy them at any price.

Paris.—Hog cholera has been discovered in five different herds in the county by Dr. D. C. Hanawalt, representative of the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry. All the infected herds are in the northwestern part of the county, in the vicinity of Ewalt's cross roads. Every effort is being made to prevent a spread of the malady by Dr. Hanawalt, who has notified every deputy in the county to report immediately every case as soon as discovered. Neighboring farmers have been advised not to visit the farms on which the infection exists and not to allow their dogs to go near the hogs.

Local Happenings.

Arrangements for the North Kentucky Fair are as well advanced as the most exacting could desire at this date, and it is the determination of the directors to give the fair-going people of this part of the State an exhibition that will excel anything ever witnessed at a county fair in this territory. They ask a liberal patronage which they assure will be given the worth of the money.

Mr. B. F. Myrick lays claim to having the largest tobacco in Pendleton county, if not in the State. Mr. Myrick planted tobacco on some bottom land on N. C. Ridgeways' farm across the river and some of it is 3¼ feet high and the leaves 18 inches wide. This is an unusually good crop, considering the conditions, but then it may be in knowing how, and Mr. Myrick is an expert in the tobacco line.—Pendleton Leader.

Thomas Hall, son of the late A. O. Hall, died at Springfield, Ohio, last Saturday in his 64th year. He had been in feeble health for many years, having had several strokes of paralysis. He was a brother of Samuel, F. A. Hall and Everett Hall and Mrs Richard White. He leaves a widow and two boys and one daughter.

Judge Cason received a letter from the officials of the Covington and Lexington Turnpike Co., one day the past week stating it was the company's intention in a former communication to state that it would "not entertain" the county's offer of ten thousand dollars for that part of its road in Boone county.

Fire got started in the grass near J. C. Revill's residence, one afternoon last week, and Burlington was called by telephone to assist in putting it out. Milton Revill was using a coal oil torch for exterminating catterpillars in the orchard when a portion of the torch fell in dry grass and started the fire.

A few months ago we were peaved at the cold weather and were wishing that summer would hurry along. It is here in all the glory of its scorching rays, and now we are wondering and longing for the good old winter days again. We just never can be satisfied, no matter what we get.

The Pendletonian, published at Falmouth, Pendleton county, has given way to the Leader, the first number of which appeared last week. The Leader is published by the Pendleton Publishing Co., and Joe Castello, once with the Cynthiana Democrat, is the editor.

Mr. John Klopp and family, of Petersburg, were the guests of Chas. Maurer and family near town last Friday. Mr. Klopp reports the melon crop in the river bottoms very poor—the vines dying very rapidly—caused from a disease in the soil.

Rev. Rivolette DeMoisey preached for Burlington Baptist congregation last Sunday morning and evening, and many favorable comments on his sermons have been made. Rev. DeMoisey is a nephew of S. L. and A. M. Edwards, of Walton.

A three and a half year old child of Joseph Ryle, of Cleves, was buried at Hebron, last Friday afternoon. Mr. Ryle is a son of P. A. Ryle, of Burlington neighborhood, and has resided in Cleves several years. Rev. William Smith preached the funeral sermon.

The Boone County Teachers' Institute convened at Walton, Monday, for its 1916 session. Prof. Ireland, of Belleview, Campbell county, is in charge as instructor, and a very interesting and profitable Institute is anticipated.

H. G. Collins, of Erlanger, has something of interest to say this week in regard to rubber tires for buggies. Read his ad. and then give him a call. He will make it to your interest to see him in regard to tires.

It will be but a few weeks until the schools of the county will open and it is the duty of the teachers or other proper authorities to see that the buildings are properly aired and cleaned.

Boone County High School will begin its fall session Monday, September 4th. The faculty would be glad to have all who expect to attend to be present to enroll and start with the session.

Legrand Gaines, who has passed his four score years, was out last Saturday assisting to put up a string of wire fence. It was a case of emergency, but he says he got hot all the same.

President Wilson will not stop or speak in Louisville on his trip to Hodgenville Sept. 4 to accept the Lincoln Memorial Farm in behalf of the Government.

Don't forget to prepare some exhibit for the North Kentucky Fair to be held at Florence, August 31 and September 1 and 2.

The Katydid has made its appearance and according to the old adage—"cold weather will be here in six weeks."

The receipts at the creamery have held up well notwithstanding, the hot, dry weather.

Business will be brisk about the court house next week—circuit court will be in session.

Good rains fell in several localities in the county last week.

A Splendid Crop of Wheat.

Edgar Riley had a crop of wheat on the Henry Terrill farm below Petersburg that made 25 bushels to the acre, probably the best yield in the county this year.

Sold Seven Autos in Ten Days.

B. B. Hume, of Covington, sold seven autos in the ten days preceding last Saturday. He is about the best auto salesman in the three cities about the mouth of the Licking.

Too Early for Predictions.

It is too early to predict what the tobacco crop in this county will amount to this year, but there are persons who are estimating it as low as sixty per cent of a yield on not a large acreage.

Play at Union next Saturday.

The Burlington base ball team will journey to Union next Saturday afternoon to tackle the slugging aggregation at that place, and which has been putting up good games this season.

Send in Your Names, Boys.

All the boys who are expecting to enter the stock judging contest at the Fair are requested to send their names and postoffice address to J. A. Caywood, at Burlington, and he will send them score cards.

A Splendid Picnic.

A large crowd attended the picnic at Harvest Home grounds last Saturday afternoon, and had a very enjoyable time although the heat was oppressive. Dancing was kept up until the shades of night were near.

Bought a Large Lot of Timber.

Wingate & Thompson, of Petersburg, have bought a large lot of timber in the tree on W. A. Gaines' farm, and are having it hauled to Aurora from where they are shipping a portion of it to Milan, Indiana.

Autos Behaved Badly.

On account of bad behavior on the part of two or three autos last Saturday night several Burlington young people who intended to attend the ice cream supper at Belleview, were not able to make the trip.

Cow Had Milk Fever.

Dr. Thomas Hafer, of Hebron, was called to R. B. Carver's, Sunday, to see a cow that had milk fever. The doctor soon had the animal on the road to recovery. He says there is considerable sickness among stock just now.

A Large Crowd at the Sale.

A very, large crowd attended the sale of the personal property of J. W. Rouse, deceased, at his late residence near Limaburg on the Burlington and Florence pike last Friday afternoon. Everything sold for fairly good prices.

A Strange Coin.

Morris Rice found, several weeks ago, on the old Rice farm at the mouth of Gunpowder creek a coin dated 1815, and inscribed "Commercial Change." As yet he has not been able to find anyone who knows anything about such a coin. It is evidently an English coin.

A Gasoline Stove Got Nutty.

A gasoline stove used in the culinary department at Dr. B. K. Menefee's, Walton, became so erratic in performance a few days since that he called in an expert repairer of gasoline stoves to over haul it. Having taken the stove to pieces four dozen and a half hickory nuts were found deposited in one of the pipes, the same having been placed in the pipe by a mouse that had access to the doctor's supply of hickory nuts.

Crop Corndtions Hard to Size Up.

It is a hard matter to size up the crop condition in this county exactly, altho enough can be learned about it to authorize the statement that it is not good. In some localities showers have kept vegetation growing, while in others the want of rain is showing plainly, and corn is beginning to fire at the most critical period in its growth. In some fields the corn stalks have become hard, which insures a cut in its production.

Still Tongue and Others.

There is an old saying that a still tongue makes a wise head, but there are times when the tongue should work for the public good. Candidates for public office sometimes imagine that a sphynx-like attitude inspires public confidence. It does not. The people have a right to know where every candidate stands on every question on which he can exert the slightest influence while in public office.

Some candidates understand this and are quick to explain their attitudes to the voters. Usually they are successful at the polls, if their views are in harmony with the welfare of the voters of their districts.

Others are "mum as an oyster" during the campaign, on all vital subjects, but talk loudly about nothing, and expect the voters to support them on faith or friendship alone. They deserve to hold the bag, and they usually do.

The American voter of today goes thru life on his own brain, and he isn't giving the fruits of that brain for the benefit of any candidate who fears to take him into his confidence on public matters.—Oldham Era.

The hot, dry weather is fine for the melons, but very unpleasant to both man and beasts.

LIVE STOCK

WATER WORK-HORSES OFTEN

Quite Profitable and Humane to Provide Means of Giving Water Throughout the Day.

Some farmers find it quite profitable, and certainly quite humane, to give their horses a bucket of water several times during the long mornings and afternoons of the summer. For this purpose they arrange a barrel on a small sled, and each morning take it with them to the field.

During the long mornings and afternoons it will be found to be profitable to give the teams a bucket of water.

The horses do not drink much at a time, but they do relish it, and it stimulates them and in no small manner averts the danger of overheating. Users of horses in cities know the value of watering them often, and they do not pass a drinking place without offering their horses water. These teams are generally worked under high pressure and under distressing conditions, yet with fair treatment the horses stand up well and do a great volume of work. In the dirt and heat of the great cities it is safe to assume that if the practice of watering only three times a day were observed, much less work could be done and many horses would fall victims to heat and overwork.

RIGHT MANAGEMENT OF HOGS

Protection From Sun, Pure Water and Succulent Grazing, Are Three Important Factors.

Sun shades, pure water and succulent grazing are three very important factors in the summer management of swine. Hogs suffer more from heat than any other class of animals. When they were removed from their native shaded haunts, and confined in pens and open yards, exposed to the hot rays of the sun, and by the change transformed from lank, large-lunged animals into modern fat-backs, they were made peculiarly susceptible to the sizzling rays of the summer sun.

Hogs that are confined in open yards, where they are exposed to the hot sun do well to keep alive, even though they are consuming sufficient feed to make two pounds of pork a day. Sunshades mean comfort, and comfort brings economy in the use of feed, rapid gains in flesh, and increased profits at the season's end.

Hogs do not perspire. Other animals are provided with pores to carry off excretions and remove heat from the body, but not so with the hog. A few large pores on the legs provide the only means of carrying off excretions, while the thick layers of fat check the radiation of the heat from the body. Not only is this so, but hogs are fed more heat-producing food than other farm animals, and in the operation of converting this feed into meat there is a great amount of heat which cannot readily escape.

COW'S MILK FOR THE LAMBS

Ordinary Baby Bottle and Nipple Will Be Found Satisfactory in Raising Orphans.

If properly handled, the orphan lamb or the lamb which its mother refuses to own can be raised successfully on cow's milk. Sheep milk is nearly twice as rich in fat as cow's milk, which for the lamb should therefore be enriched by the addition of pure cream. Since the lamb usually nurses its mother at least once each hour it should be fed on cow's milk at the same intervals, especially for the first ten days or two weeks, after which the intervals may be gradually lengthened.

While the lamb is very young it should not be given more than two ounces of milk at a feeding, as this is all he would take from his mother. Use an ordinary baby bottle and nipple. When the lamb is ten days or two weeks of age it will commence to eat a little, and from this time on should gradually be encouraged to procure most of its nourishment from grain, roots, etc.

TREATMENT FOR MALE LAMBS

They Should Be Castrated When Very Young, as the Danger Then Is Not Very Great.

When male lambs are not sold promptly, it is important that they be castrated. They will sell better, make better growth, and give less trouble. They should be castrated early, as the danger is then very slight. The main point in castration is to avoid contamination. Hands and instruments should be kept cleaned with a good antiseptic, the wound should be washed, and then the flock should be put in a clean, grassy lot or field.

POULTRY FACTS

FOR SECURING FERTILE EGGS

Strong, Vigorous Male Birds Should Be Used and Inbreeding Avoided —Cull Sickly Hens.

The first essential is to handle the breeding flock of hens in such a manner as to secure a high percentage of fertile eggs. To accomplish this all small, weak or sickly appearing hens should be removed from the flock and only eggs from strong, vigorous, healthy hens should be used for hatching. The flock should be allowed considerable range if this is convenient, though extensive range is not necessary to secure fertile eggs. If the hens must be confined in small quarters, green food or meat meal must be used in the ration and the hens must be compelled to scratch in clean litter for part of their feed in order to insure sufficient exercise.

Strong, vigorous cock birds must also be used, and inbreeding should be avoided. For all meat and egg breeds one cock should be allowed for ten hens and for the lighter weight egg-producing breeds one cock bird for every 15 hens.

MAKE PROFIT WITH TURKEYS

More Profitable Side Line Can Hardly Be Found for Those Who Are Favorably Situated.

For those who are favorably situated for raising turkeys, a more profitable side line can hardly be found. Given plenty of range where the turkeys can find grasshoppers and other insects, green vegetation, the seeds of weeds and grasses, waste grain, acorns and nuts of various kinds, the cost of raising them is very small and the profits large.

Grain and stock farms are particularly well adapted to turkey raising, and it is on such farms that most of the turkeys are found.

Little has ever been done in the way of raising turkeys in confinement, and where it has been tried the results have been discouraging.

Plenty of range is essential to success in turkey raising.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good. I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in the 50 years of wonderful success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

Will Open Campaign.

Washington, Aug. 5.—Vice President Marshall tentatively has accepted the invitation of Kentucky Democrats to open their State campaign at Winchester September 9. Representative A. S. House, chairman of the State speakers' bureau made this announcement tonight. He announced also that Representative Thos. Heflin, of Alabama, will be there.

Homer S. Cummings, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee and chairman of the speakers bureau of that committee, has agreed to permit the Vice President to speak in Kentucky, the National Committee having control of his time. Vice President Marshall declared that he would like very much to go to Kentucky and that the only obstacle was Congress. If the Senate completes its business there is no doubt that he will be at Winchester, but in the event Congress still is in session, as it is apt to be, he will endeavor to be absent from the Senate for a day or two to greet the Kentuckians.

The acquisition of Representative Heflin was pleasing to Mr. Rouse because of the impression which the Alabama member made last fall when he accompanied the Democratic special thruout the State. As a storyteller and forceful exponent of Democratic doctrine he has few equals in Congress.

Fiscal Court Orders.

The fiscal court held another special session, Tuesday, at which a great many propositions were discussed but no final action was taken thereon. All the justices were present.

The court offered to assist in piking the East Bend road as far as Chas. White's barn provided the citizens subscribe and pay one-fourth of the cost thereof.

It is ordered by the court that the application for aid to build a pike on what is known as Hubert Conner's road be and the same is now rejected, and the road engineer is directed to repair said road out of funds at his command.

The bids of Thos. P. Stack to build and reconstruct the road from J. L. Huey's corner of Big Bone were referred to the commissioner of public roads for his acceptance, approval and recommendation.

The bid of E. K. Stephens and Cecil Burns for the building of the road from Bullittsville to the creek near Snyder's gate, was rejected.

Arthur Schrm Alloway.

Arthur Schram Alloway, one of our Petersburg boys, died here July 29th, after an illness of 11 months. He was nineteen years of age and had spent most of his life here, so every one knew him and loved him. He was very patient through his long illness and did not fear death, only wanting to live in order to be able to fulfill his desire of becoming a minister of the gospel. The fun-Rev. R. H. Carter at the M. E. Rev. R. H. Carter at the M. E. church, July 30th. "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Death is only A Dream" and "Jesus Lover of My Soul" were sung. The first mentioned was Schram's favorite and often while he was sick, when he thought that no one was listening, he sang it softly to himself. The pall-bearers were Albert Stephens, Carson Stott, Elvin Earl Helms, Allen Thompson, Frank Berkshire, Karl Botts, all close friends of Schram. The family has the sincere sympathy of all in their bereavement.

Oil in Estill.

What is puzzling oil men more than any recent developments in the Estil field is a report from the Sweet Lick section to the effect that several days ago a spring on the mountainside on the Bud Rawlins farm, began running crude oil and has since slightly increased each day, until now it is estimated that four or five barrels escape in this way daily. This strange phenomenon can only be accounted for by those who have studied it, by the drilling of a well on top of the mountain nearby, and the drill coming in contact with the spring stream, thus allowing oil rising in the well to escape thru the water passag[illegible] oil men say it is a new one on them and can only account for it in the above manner.—Winchester Democrat.

Sunday one of the men who is working on the reconstruction of the Burlington and Florence pike was kicked in the face by a mule, and his nose was broken. A mule's foot is a bad thing to have shoved up into ones face.

NOTICE—The one who got my money, Sixty Dollars, can put it in an envelope and drop it in the postoffice He can keep ten dollars and nothing more will be said or done C. C. Hedges.

Those thieves who visited Onie Rouse's chicken coop and garden several times recently would be surprised to know how near they came carrying away with them a load of shot not long since.

The appearance of the farms along the public roads, as well as the appearance of roads, is much better when the weeds along the roads are kept down.

The Burlington teachers who are attending the Institute at Walton this week go over in the morning and return in the evening.

Earl Smith has sold his five passenger Ford to Earl Garnett, of Limaburg.

The usually small crowd attended county court last Monday.

POULTRY

LEGHORN IS POPULAR BREED

Fowl Is Hardy and Prolific With Alert Style and Carriage—They Are Great Producers.

The Leghorn may be said to be the smallest of the practical and popular breeds of domesticated chickens in America. They originated in Italy but have been bred in this country for many years.

Of this breed there are nine recognized varieties, several of which were created in this country. They comprise a group of useful fowls, characterized as being rather small in size and graceful in conformation, says Wisconsin Agriculturist. They are hardy and prolific with alert style and carriage. The modern Leghorn is rather long in back and body and well upon legs. The concave sweep of back to tail without any decided angle at juncture of tail is a characteristic peculiar to the breed. The tail should be well spread and carried at an angle of 40 to 45 degrees above the horizontal. The neck should be rather long, gracefully arched, and rather slender, especially in the female. The comb should be rather small in size, the female's dropping slightly to one side. The eye should be reddish bay in color, the shanks and the skin yellow.

The Leghorns are very popular with the operators of egg farms on account of their white shelled egg and also because they are nonsitters. The white egg is very desirable for supplying a fancy egg trade, but on the common market, no extra price is paid for them.

The cockerels grow rapidly to broiler age but are a nuisance if kept on the farm to maturity, and on many farms it is preferred to do the hatching with hens rather than with the incubator. In such cases the larger breeds should be selected. However, the Leghorn rightly bred, is a great egg producer and an active forager and if one prefers them to others there is no reason why they should not take them up.

Single-Comb White Leghorn.

The various varieties are designated by their difference in shape of comb or color of plumage, the same shape description applying to all. It is generally recognized, however, that the S. C. Whites are a little in advance of the others in shape.

SUBSTITUTE FOR GAME BIRDS

Flesh of Guinea Has Gamy Flavor and Is Gaining Popularity in Some of Eastern Cities.

The flesh of the guinea has a gamy flavor and is coming into use as a substitute for game birds in some of the eastern cities. The young guinea, two-pound size, is quoted by some commission merchants at from 45 to 50 cents each, while old guineas are quoted on the same market at 25 cents each. Guinea eggs sell at the same price as hen eggs and have the advantage of having much thicker shells and are not so liable to get broken in shipment.

LIBERAL FEED AFTER HATCH

Hen Should Be Encouraged to Remain on Nest With Chicks for First Forty-Eight Hours.

It is a good plan to see that the hen is fed very liberally immediately after hatching, as it will tend to keep her quiet and brood the little ones very closely the first 48 hours. Do not allow her to start on through the meadow or plowed field stringing the little ones after her to become lost or injured, when a little feed, such as whole corn, fed immediately after the hatch is over, will retain her on the nest.

TIME BETWEEN CHICK FEEDS

It Can Be Shortened by Feeding Early and Late—Make Youngsters Scratch for Grain.

The time between night and morning feeds is, at best, rather long and can be shortened by feeding early and late. This is as essential as it is to feed little and often.

Chicks must be induced to exercise. Cover the floor with a thin layer of chaff or fine litter and feed the cracked grain in the litter. The chicks scratch for the feed and exercise in this way.

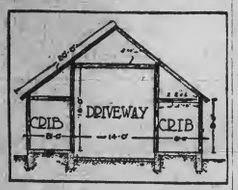
FEDERAL GOVERNMENT TO AID

Experimental Post Roads of Different Types Now Under Construction in Many States.

Four hundred and sixty-five miles of experimental post roads of different types, benefiting 28 different counties, are now under construction in 13 states, which are co-operating with the federal government. These roads, which are being built under the supervision of the department of agriculture, are authorized by the act of congress which appropriated $500,000 for the post office department for experiments to test out the value of improved rural carrier routes. The federal government pays one-third and the state or county benefited must defray two-thirds of the cost. As rapidly as these roads are constructed the department is endeavoring to interest the local authorities in inaugurating systematic maintenance to keep these roads in condition. The Virginia authorities agreed to maintain the new roads built in that state, and it is believed that this local maintenance system will be extended to the post roads to be built in Maine, Tennessee, Texas and Alabama.

CARE FOR HARNESS PROPERLY

Most Farmers Give This Part of Equipment Scant Attention During the Busy Months.



While it is generally conceded to be the best plan to care for the harness properly throughout the entire year, most farmers give this part of their farm equipment scant attention during the busy months. As long as the harness holds together and will give service, the work-harness is thrown on to the horses' backs day after day, and no more thought is given it. However, when the busy days are over, there is no excuse for not giving the harness a little special attention. It is a good plan to wash the dirt and grease from the straps at least once a year, and then give them a good oiling and working until the leather is soft and pliable. Buckles should be oiled so they can be handled easily.

PRACTICAL FARM CORNCRIB

Structure Shown in Illustration Built So Farmer Can Drive in With Load of Straw.

A double crib with a wide and high center driveway makes a practical farm building. The one illustrated here is built so that the owner can drive in with a load of hay or straw. The driveway is 14 feet wide and the doors are hung on heavy iron hinges and are 14 feet high. A set of scales can be built into the floor here if one desires. Being under cover they will last years longer than where left unsheltered.

Such a crib can be built without the help of skilled mechanics. To hold 2,000 bushels ear corn, that is 1,000 bushels on each side, it must be 32 feet long and 8 feet wide as shown in the sectional drawing. The cribs are 8 feet and the driveway 14 feet, making the whole width 30 feet.—Farm and Home.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Damp litter is a breeder of disease.

Clean milk is obtained only by a clean dairyman.

Don't overfeed the chicks. They will become inactive and diseased.

Look sharp for the champion cow. She may be right in your own dairy.

For strong, vigorous poults, mate old turkey hens to young, vigorous toms.

Calves will make as good growth on separator milk with flaxseed as on whole milk.

• • •

The cream should be kept at a uniform temperature and stirred at least twice each day, thoroughly.

• • •

Whether or not a man can make his dairy pay may depend wholly upon the attention he pays to the cows.

• • •

A mixture of cottonseed meal and shorts, and alfalfa hay, is a very good feed or ration for fattening calves.

• • •

One user of a milking machine says that one of the best things about it is that it does not swear at the cows.

A supply of salt should be always accessible to cows, either in granulated form or large pieces of rock salt.

• • •

There is no way of determining the profitableness of a cow except with the Babcock test and the scales, and then keeping records of the cost of feed.

FARM ANIMALS

EXCELLENT FEED FOR SWINE

Rape Is Large Succulent Plant and Grows Rapidly—One of Best Forages for Hogs.

Owing to the fact that rape grows rapidly, is a large, succulent plant and palatable to hogs, it makes one of the best swine forages. If rape is not pastured too closely it will grow up and make fall pasture. A good growth of rape will furnish pasture for about 15 to 20 hogs to the acre.

For pasture purposes the Dwarf Essex variety is most used. The seed can be bought usually for eight cents a pound, therefore seeding is done at small cost, as not more than five pounds of seed per acre is required when sown broadcast, and when sown in drills, three pounds of seed is enough.

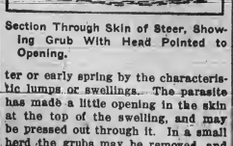
Most soils will give good account when sown to rape. Land which is well suited to corn production makes a very excellent soil for rape. However, the heavier soils seem to produce the largest and most succulent growth. To prevent injury to the crop, hogs should not be put on rape until it is about a foot high.



It is often difficult to get hogs to eat rape at first, if they have not been accustomed to it. However, they will eat the rape and soon learn to relish it if they are turned on it and allowed no other green feed. Another difficulty is that wet and dewy rape may cause sores and scabs on the hogs. Sometimes the skin has the appearance of being blistered. This seems to be more true of white and thin-haired hogs. This may be overcome by not turning the hogs on rape until the dew has dried up.

PREVENTION OF OX WARBLES

Spraying With Kerosene Emulsion or Fish Oil Will Kill Grubs—Remove All Found.

Cattlemen estimate that the warble or common grub in the backs of cattle does from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 damage a year. The damage comes through loss of flesh, lowered milk production, and decrease in the value of hides.

The grubs may be located under the skin on the back of cattle in late winter or early spring by the characteristic lumps or swellings. The parasite has made a little opening in the skin at the top of the swelling, and may be pressed out through it. In a small herd the grubs may be removed, and all should be destroyed.

Examine the cattle every two or three weeks, and remove all found. Spraying with kerosene emulsion, fish oil or train oil will kill the grubs, but the wounds do not heal readily unless the grubs are removed.

PROPER TEST OF BROOD SOW

Indications of Good Milker Shown in Thrift of Pigs—Beware of Fattening Animal.

The principal test of whether a sow is a good milker or not is the thrift of her pigs and her condition while suckling them. If they do well and she eats liberally and keeps up good health and digestion, and at the same time gets a little thin while nursing them, it is pretty good evidence that she is a good milker and will do to keep as long as her usefulness lasts. But look out for the sow that fattens between farrowing and weaning time. Her pigs either die off or become runts, for she is not making the use of her feed that a good mother should make.

ART OF LETTER-WRITING.

Not only the art of letter-writing, but the chirographic art, is being lost as well. There were delicate curlicues and ornate flourishes in these old letters, and the smallest of small script, with much carrying of sentences along the edge and a final wind-up over text already penned. How is it today? Up-and-down stuff, with a word of three syllables slopping across to the next page! Not only that, but the courtesy and fine sentiment of the old-time letter has vanished. One ardent philatelist has spoken of ancient letters which he sometimes gets with the rare stamps that he pursues; these, without exception, he claims, bear witness to the truth that in the earlier day the letter in its form, essence and substance was to its writer as the dish of bouillabaisse was to the wonderful chef who lived in the street of mystic name in Thackeray's Latin quarter days. But if they are not written any more, we can still remember them and write feebly in their praise. The sins of so many of us are as the sins of the fellow that wrote but once in 37 years that we can only confess. His neglect must have been his greatest punishment.

There was a time when the Turkish government imposed the death penalty on persons caught trying to smuggle out of the empire the best breeds of Angora goats, says Farm and Fireside. In 1881 a Californian bought four goats in Turkey, carried them on mules, camels and in a closed carriage for some hundreds of miles, sheared off their luxuriant wool, rolled them in coal dust, and escaped with the goats. The descendants of these goats are found on ranches in the West and Southwest, crossed with Angoras from South Africa, and other parts of the world. Once the governments of China and Japan guarded with similar jealousy the exportation of the tea plant. Someone escaped with some seed or cuttings, however, 40 years ago, and the original plantation of smuggled tea plants is still flourishing in South Carolina. Fifty years ago Brazil was engaged in an effort to keep the rubber tree in confinement in that empire. The seed was smuggled to Ceylon, however, and for half a century East Indian planters have been perfecting the rubber tree until now the best plantations are there.

The results of experiments conducted by Dr. G. B. Foster of the United States army, give valuable suggestions for checking the spread of cold germs. He succeeded in isolating a certain virus present in different stages of the disease and this he placed in the noses of a number of perfectly healthy soldiers who had volunteered for the experiment, brave boys that they were. The result was that they all had severe colds. The fact is established that sneezing by one who is infected with a cold is sure to spread the disease.

Having set the clock an hour ahead in the interest of economy, Great Britain is aghast at the discovery that people who have automobiles are spending for gasoline to run their machines during the extra hour in the evening quite as much as it had been calculated to save on lights.

A lecturer attached to the Child Federation announces that if you tickle a crying baby under the chin and say "copeedaisy," he will have an excuse for father walking the floor half the night with his vociferous offspring who refuses to permit anyone to sleep.

The announcement from Washington that the government is now deriving $115,000,000 a year from the tax on incomes is calculated to cause some of us to crack our heels together and shout, "Never touched me!"

The effect of the activity of the "bug" have been apparent to most of us, so of course that California scientist didn't have much trouble fitting a real insect to these manifestations.

A magazine editor says some of the most successful writers don't understand their popularity. That's a struggling author's idea of nothing in particular to worry about.

At the conclusion of the trial for perjury the locked-up members of the jury step forth into the world free men once more.

If there were no other excuse for living, the fact that it takes all kinds of people to make a world would be sufficient.

KENTUCKIANS

In Anderson and Delaware Co's Preparing for a Grand Reunion In the Near Future.

Politics Warming Up In The Hoosier State.

Alexandria, Ind., Aug. 5, 1916.
Editor Recorder:—

The Recorder this week seemed "the best ever," and really the "cap sheaf" to a long, eventful, entertaining and useful series in which friends have been drawn closer, enemies, if any, thrown further away and the vision for better things coming, made clearer.

Mr. Editor, you may wonder why Kentuckians have been "counting noses" so carefully here in Indiana. The facts are they are preparing to hold a grand reunion at Muncie or Anderson some time this year, and expect to gather the entire bunch, (not Major Bunch, of Muncie, whom the papers are holding up to scorn and ridicule) and have the greatest lovefeast Madison and Delaware counties ever saw. Beeves galore, with sheep, hogs and burgoo as side-lines will be barbecued in old Kentucky style.

The Muncie Star, a double geared, back action, automatic loading specimen of bad printing and worse editing, never forgets to mention in connection with a rum pus in this section, "Oh, he was from Kentucky!" etc., but all the isame Kentuckians in Madison and Delaware counties are at least 99 per cent law abiding, decent folks. They may go about their business and pleasure too, for that matter, with a "don't tread on my coat tail" expression protruding from the corner of their eyes that makes the Hoosier a little weary, but they are as amicable and good natured as most folks here and elsewhere.

The Recorder will receive a hand-engraved invitation on a piece of hickory bark taken from one of a large number of trees on the battle field near Mt. Sterling, Kentucky, and it will invite all its readers. We will let you know.

Politics is getting stirred up in Indiana and will be about as odorous as a den of Belgin Hares before November rolls around. The varieties of politics are about as numerous as the different kinds of War Dogs in Europe. Think of them just once and smile.

Terrific wind and hail storms have visited a large area of this State and much damage has been done. It is pleasing to note that crop conditions are fine in Kentucky. The Kornerackers have a way of sticking together that grows out of the State's motto and is not a habit. Habit goes a long ways with most all people, but in Kentucky it is one of the features that bind," so to speak. As an illustration here is a story, with your permission: About one year ago a Kentuckian was in Union, a guest of the leading hotel. One night when the stars were heard singing together and making music like "Uncle Job" used to make and "Tiger" flowed toward the sea with its usual regularity and the muttering of deep toned thunder was heard in the distance and lightning flashed across angry clouds that appeared in the southwest, and things looked good for something to happen, and it did, too, and the Kentuckian was sound asleep when that something did happen, that is as the wind howled, rain poured and timbers from ten inch locust trees two inch planks came tearing through the roof and down on to the bed, he woke up. After that, through the force of habit, acquired from his earliest youth he deliberately got up, put on his clothes, spread the covers back on the bed carefully, and then skeddadled for the cellar. Force of habit, eh. Any man who forms a habit and thinks he can throw it off like throwing a cat off'en a steamboat, has another think coming and then some.

This story is vouched for by the splendid people who adopted that interesting and much talked of "Waif."

About $15,000 worth of new machinery is being unloaded at the lead mines at Gratz, and they anticipate being in operation in 60 days. About 50 men are at work at the mines at present. The company operating the mines is a new organization, known as the Federal Zinc & Lead Co. They claim that the waste of the old company is more valuable than the lead the old company saved. This waste contains zinc, copper, etc., and the first work of the new company will be to put the waste of the old company through their mill.—Carrollton Democrat.

The receiver of the Kentucky Rural Credit Association will file suit against all stockholders whose stock remains unpaid. Then when all is collected a distribution of assets will be made prorata. Some stockholders paid in full, but the majority paid only a part. The suits will be brought in order to place all on an equality.

Talk---The Manner of It.

The high schools and colleges of the day ought to do something more than to teach students how to talk. The young men would be better off for some instruction of the kind, but in the case of the young women it is little less than a necessity. Their voices, to be candid, are by no means as pleasing as they might easily be were their possessors even reminded occasionally of the value of modulation, variation, softness and correct and fairly precise pronunciation. As it is, however, the sweet girl graduate has anything but a manner of speaking consistent with the charms with which she is otherwise generously blessed. In one university in the State—typical of others—a visitor recently observed that nearly every young woman in the senior class was woefully addicted to habits of mispronunciation. "And their voices," he added, "were most distressing. What they said was well enough but their manner of saying it was—agonizing." The indictment must be admitted as well founded. It is one, however, that never be brought—for which there should be no support. And there would be none of it, either, if no more than casual attention were paid to the matter in our schools and colleges. Singing is taught—to be only rarely used. Why not teach talking?—Indianapolis News.

SKUNK KNOWS NO FEAR

Picks No Quarrels, but Decidedly Never Goes Out of Its Way to Avoid Them.

The skunk is not only one of the handsomest of American "varmints," he is also the boldest. He is the beau sabreur, the Cyrano, the insouciant, devil-may-care adventurer. Confident in his powers of offense and defense he goes carelessly about his way, asking only to be let alone. He is not looking for trouble, neither is he avoiding it.

Encounter him about sundown on a country road and he will let you alone, if you do not crowd him. Perhaps he will hop along in your pathway, keeping just far enough ahead for your common convenience. If you are acquainted with his little peculiarities you will permit him to set the pace. If you are not acquainted with them—if, perchance, you think he is a pretty, black-and-white, kit tenish little thing and, if so thinking, you rush up and try to make a capture, disillusionment will soon be your portion. For when you are at just the right distance he will give his white-tipped tail a quick flirt in your general direction.

You will then pause. You will suddenly have lost all inclination to advance. Probably you will be nauseated, possibly half-choked and half-blinded. All the Arabic perfumes necessary to purify Lady Macbeth's little hand wouldn't purify your apparel in a year. You are likely to feel a longing to hide from your fellowman for some time to come. Your fellow man is likely to reciprocate the feeling with usury. You have committed a gross indiscretion, a great strategic blunder, and you will have to pay the price. But you have added to your stock of knowledge. Never again will you try to kick any little polecat around.

The oil he employs with such effectiveness is a yellow, clear liquid, slightly phosphorescent, so as to be faintly visible at night. It is acid and is virtually acrid when it falls upon any tender living tissue. It is extremely volatile and a tiny drop is sufficient to fill all the surrounding atmosphere with the offensive odor. When inhaled in large quantities it is suffocating, sometimes producing unconsciousness and even death.

The liquid is distilled within the body and is carried through long tubes to two small capsules imbedded in the thick muscles at the root of the tail. The animal can discharge either or both capsules at will, and his aim is astonishingly accurate. One would never think it, but he is very miserly with his fluid. He will not waste it, and will even try all kinds of bluffs to avoid using it. With animals anywhere near his own size the skunk prefers to fight with tooth and claw. The conclusion, when one is in the neighborhood of a skunk's recent operations, that he has fired all the oil in the universe, is premature. It smells that way, however, and this is a pardonable error.

A Strange Phenomenon.

During the early stages of the present war a strange phenomenon on on the battlefields of northern France was the abundance of poppies, all the roads being bordered by large tracts of the red flowers which gave the impression that the bloodshed there had come forth to the surface once more. In any case this is the popular belief among the peasants of the districts where battles raged only some months ago; but the real explanation is that the poppy is the companion of wheat in France just as the bluebell mingles with the corn in Russia, and that the poppy has usurped all the space.

FISCAL COURT ORDERS

Road Bonds Ordered Advertised For Sale.

Committee Appointed to Investigate Road Machinery and Make Report.

At the special term of the fiscal court held last Tuesday all the justices were present, Judge Cason presiding.

Ordered that Esq. R. H. Tanner and County Engineer C. W. Goodridge be and they are appointed a committee to go to Lexington and Frankfort or some other point to investigate road machinery and make report to this court at its next term.

The Covington and Lexington Turnpike Co., proposed to take for its road in this county the sum of $11,500, exclusive, however, of the toll houses on said pike and the land appurtinent to said toll houses, the county of Boone to pay in addition to said sum of $11,500 the cost price of the stone on the line of said turnpike road in the county. The said sum of $11,500 to be paid in cash upon the acceptance of this offer.

In response to the above proposition the county made the following proposition:

"To pay $11,500 for its right of way and for the rock on said road not spread at cost, and to pay $3,500 cash and the remainder, $8,000 to be paid at the option of the county on or before January 1, 1917, with five per cent interest from date. The gates are to be removed from said road at once and the pike company must accept this proposition on or before Tuesday, August 15, 1916.

The bid of E. K. Stephens to build the turnpike road from Bullittsville to the Snyder creek according to plans and specifications for $5,750, three-fourths of said sum to be paid by Boone county, is accepted, the contract to be completed Jan. 1, 1917.

The County Attorney is ordered to advertised for sale of road bonds upon a four per cent basis and due serially, interest payable semi-annually, and reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

The county road engineer is directed to expend not to exceed $300 per mile resurfacing the Petersburg and E. L. Grant pike.

The Fiscal Court has authorized the county attorney to advertise for bids for the road bonds that are to be issued. The court will sell these bonds as the money is needed in building roads, and as yet not a dollar has been produced by the bond issue voted last May, it being the policy of the court to save to the county all the interest it can.

It seems that not all the banks in the county have signified a willingness to join in carrying the bonds for the county at four per cent and according to the terms of the proposition all the banks in the county had to agree to it before any of them were bound. There was nothing in it for the banks from a financial stand-point and those banks that proposed to handle the bonds at four per cent did so through a spirit of loyalty to the county, and a desire to accommodat e those who might want to invest in the bonds in the future if not at present. The bonds are non-taxable, a feature that makes them a more desirable investment than they appear at the first thought.

Shoot This at Him.

Here is ammunition to fire at your neighbor who says that your bees are eating up his grapes or other fruit. The same conclusion has been arrived at in this country, but this is imported evidence and some people lay great store by everything that is imported. Besides it is a fact that those Europeans are often more patient and careful in their investigations than the more impulsive Americans.

"An agricultural society of Florence, Italy, has recently carried out a thorough investigation of the alleged injury of fruit by bees and has completely exonerated the latter. Bees are unable to perforate the skin of fruit, and it is only incidentally that they suck the juices of fruits injured by other natural causes. The damage sometimes attributed to these insects is due to poultry, wild birds, wind and hail, and even more frequently to hornets, wasps, vine-moths and other insects. Instead of being harmful to orchards and vineyards, bees perform the useful service of effecting the cross pollination of flowers, and hence the setting of fruit, as well as the desiccation of damaged fruits, especially grapes, by sucking the juice and pulp and thus preventing fermentation and rot extending to sound individuals. The orchards and vineyards frequented by bees give the most constant crops."—Scientific American.

LANDSLID CARRIE S TO DEATH

Shack, in Which They Had Taken Refuge, Is Swept Into River.

Harlan, Ky.—Five persons, a mother and four children, huddled together in the darkness of a shack in which they had taken refuge from floods, lost their lives when the building was swept into the Cumberland river by a landslide. The father, Wm. Hall, of Harlan, who had left the place to get a lamp, was the only member of the family to escape. The rapidly rising waters of the Cumberland had driven the little family from their home a few moments before. Without a light, and with practically no clothing, the wife and her children sought safety in the shack, which was on higher ground. The father, seeing his family, as he thought, safely housed, hurried back to the home just quitted to obtain a lantern. His work completed, he started back to the shack. It was gone. A gaping hole in the hillside revealed that a landslide had carried the shack into the Cumberland. He immediately raised an alarm, but at a late hour searching parties had been unable to find any trace of the shack or its occipants.

KENTUCKY IS BECOMING A BIG HEREFORD STATE.

Woodford County Soon to Have a New Show and Breeding Herd.

At the present rate Kentucky will soon be known as a State where the best beef and the best dairy cattle can be secured. For a short time the breeders in the state were rather few and the dual purpose cattle were the most popular. Today it is different. There are a large number of breeders and there are very few dual purpose cattle. Farmers, who later, grow to be big breeders, decide upon the kind of cattle they want and either start a pure breed herd of dairy cattle or a pure breed herd of beef cattle. In other words, they are specializing, knowing that they can not successfully combine the desired qualities of each in one individual, for perfection of the distinct types. It is a great decision and one which will mean much to Kentucky in the cattle world in the future.

Kentucky, particularly Shelby county, has for a long time been known as the Jersey Isle of America and present indications are that she will become equally as famous for her Herfords. Senator J. N. Camden, of Versailles, is now establishing a show and breeding herd. He is purchasing the very best individuals for foundation stock and will within the next few years have as good a herd as can be had. The Senator is very enthusiastic over Herefords and is anxious for his imported stock to get home. There are several good show herds in Kentucky and if in condition Kentucky Herefords will take a large number of first prizes at the various shows this fall.—Oldham Era.

A Good Roads Argument.

It is related that in Pike county where the voters failed to adopt a bond issue for the improvement of roads, a banker approached a large landowner in behalf of the bond issue and met with no encouragement.

"Why are you opposed to the bond issue?" asked the banker.

"Because the improved roads will run by, or through my land," replied the Pike county Croesus, "and the result will be that the assessed value of my land will increase, and I shall have to pay more taxes. The bonded indebtedness assumed by the county will not be the whole of our liability. The taxes will go up and stay up."

From that landowner's angle of vision increased property values mean calamity. That is not the general view, happily. It is the general experience that land does increase in price where good roads make it accessible.

Few good arguments for good roads have been made in as few words as those of the Pike county landholder, who was attempting an argument against road improvement. But, apparently, there were sundry citizens of Pike county who saw the improvement problem as it appeared to the man who did not want his taxes raised.

It would be fortunate if the poorest county in Kentucky could be so improved that it would pay as much in taxes as is paid in the richest county. Nothing contributes more directly to the increase of taxable values than the improvement in roads.—C.-J.

Stone a Stumbling Block.

The price for stone to be used in the building of roads in this county makes the work almost prohibitory and has prevented some from bidding on the road work, while others who bid had to make their figures so high because of the price of stone that the Fiscal court considered them exorbitant and rejected them. It is evident that the cost of stone will be a serious matter in Boone county road building.

NORTH KENTUCKY FAIR.

Big Improvements Have Been Made at The Grounds.

Catalogues Being Distributed and Everything Indicates A Big Fair.

Considerable repairs and improvement have been made on the grounds of the North Kentucky Fair at Florence. Besides very essential changes in part of the amphitheater that building has received a new roof and a general straightening, the long row of stalls that was in very bad condition has been righted and reroofed, while a new building or two have been erected, the cottage put in first-class order and painted. The grounds as a whole present a very inviting appearance and indicate that the new organization has taken hold of the fair with a determination to make it rank among the best county fairs in the State.

The premium lists are being distributed and if you desire one write Hubert Conner, Secretary, Burlington, Ky., R. D. 3, and he will send you one by return mail. Let the entire county join in the effort to make the 1916 fair at Florence a hummer. Come and bring the entire family.

Store the Wheat.

"Ability to store the wheat crop on the farm will be perhaps of greater value to the farmers this year than ever before," says Edward C. Johnson, dean of extention in the Kansas State Agricultural College.

"For this there are two principal reasons—first, the shortage of freight cars, resulting from the congestion of freight on the Atlantic seaboard, second, the lower price per bushel during the early threshing season. This lower price necessarily results from inability to get transportation facilities; from the greater risk and hence greater margin taken by elevators to handle grain before it has gone through the sweating process, and from the fact that the whole grain trade knows that great quantities of wheat will be marketed during July, August and September, whatever the price may be."

A Buggy is Wrecked.

The young mare attached to Robt. Gaines' buggy ran off in Burlington, last Friday evening, damaging the buggy and harness some and creating no little excitement. She tore herself loose from the vehicle when it struck a telephone pole, and ran about a hundred yards, where she gave up and slowed down. The animal was frightened by thoughtlessness on the part of the owner.

They Had a Narrow Escape.

The mare attached to the buggy in which Mrs. Joseph Huey and three children were riding in Union neighborhood, last Friday became frightened from some unknown cause and ran off. Mrs. Huey and the children had a miraculous escape, the buggy being turned over and Mrs. Huey and children thrown out. The mare ran through a wire fence, and was hurt very little. The animal was driven home that evening.

Auto Turned Turtle.

Harry Rosenberry, colored, who drives Miss Julia Dinsmore's machine, was attempting to pass a vehicle near Mrs. Belle Clore's, down on the Belleview pike a few nights since, when the machine turned turtle and was damaged considerable. In the machine at the time were Rosenberry's wife and child and probably others, and all escaped serious injury.

Auto Went Through the Fence.

As Dr. R. H. Crisler, of North Bend, was riding in his auto out on the Florence pike, a few days ago, he undertook to knock the ashes off of his cigar, when he lost control of the machine and it went through the fence at the side of the road. Fortunately the doctor was not hurt and the damages to the machine were small.

Crops Don't Look Good.

A trip one day last week to Big Bone Springs by the way of Union and Grange Hall and return by way of Beaver and Richwood showed nothing in the way of encouraging crop prospects. Taken as a whole corn and tobacco presented a very sorry condition.

Made His Clean Up.

W. L. Kirkpatrick cleaned up his 1916 purchase of lambs, last week, having moved all of them in his truck. He handled some extra good lambs and made a very nice profit on his entire purchase.

Had a Good Sale.

The sale of the personal estate of Benjamin H. Snyder was attended by a large crowd last Thursday afternoon, and almost everything sold brought good prices.

The stalk is over 15 feet in height and has a monster ear. Making Silage of Horse Weeds.

Horse weeds have an excellent food value before they become old and tough in fiber, and several farmers owning silos are cutting them while in the tender state and making silage from them, claiming that they make excellent food in this condition. It is coming to the point on the farm where everything is being utilized for good and the lesson of economy and appropriation of everything that can be used is being given careful attention. Farming is rapidly growing into a science and a profession that requires constant study and attention and no longer is the haphazard methods of being employed to the management of the farm. The time has come when it is being realized that the farm offers a wonderful field for undeveloped thought and resources, and that brains on the farm is as essential as in any other great business. The development on the farm the past twenty years is simply beyond comprehension and it is only by a comparison of the methods then and now that a realization of the progress and advancement along intelligent lines can be fully comprehended. Farming is rapidly growing into the greatest of all professions and to make it the peer of all the most efficient intellectual thought must be exercised.

Look Out for the Best Fair Ever.

The popular old Boone County Fair will be held at Florence this year Aug. 31st, Sept., 1st and 2nd, and the prospect is for the best fair ever held on the grounds, as the new management is making a special effort this year to show that the Old Boone County Fair is better than ever and worthy in every way of the public support. This fair has always been a good one—a typical country fair, such as our forefathers gloried in and furnished so much genuine pleasure in the meeting of old friends at least once a year. It was always a clean, honestly administered fair, and usually the awards gave general satisfaction. The immoral exhibits and temptations at the average fair are barred from this fair, and everything is done to give the people a good, clean program of entertainment and the exhibitors liberal premiums. The new management bought the grounds last year to assure a continuance of this good old fair, and have since expended about twenty-five hundred dollars in improvements, and the fair this year ought to be a success with such an excellent gentleman as John E. Williams as president and clever Hubert Conner as secretary. The other officers are a fine lot of high class gentlemen, but space forbids the individual mention of all. We need a good fair in Boone county and this is the opportunity to have one put on a profitable and successful basis. Every loyal citizen in the county should do his part toward making the fair a success this year, for it means nothing less than a personal matter in the exhibition of that praiseworthy pride of an enterprise in which we have a personal interest born of public spirited citizenship.

THE IDEA IS—PRACTICE REAL ECONOMY

I was in a hardware store a few days ago. A man walked up to the paint counter and said to the salesman:

"Show me the cheapest paint you have. I'm going to paint my barn."

"Here you are, Sir," said the salesman as he brought out a gallon can.

"This is the cheapest?" inquired the customer.

"By far," answered the salesman. "We've three other grades that sell for considerably less, but this is the cheapest—in the long run."

Now that set me thinking, because every day I meet folks who, when they want a new car, look for the "cheapest."

I regard this new 1917 Chalmers the cheapest. Cheapest, I mean, in the long run.

There are other cars costing $300 or $400 less, and they are probably mighty good cars for the money. But more costly than this 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers in the end.

I believe I can easily convince you in a few minutes that it pays to pay a little more.

I'm always ready and glad to show the new 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers—the car with the wonderful 99.21% perfect motor.

BOONE CIRCUIT COURT

Convened Monday Morning—Grand and Petit Juries Empaneled

Many Witnesses Summoned Before Grand Jury.

The August term of the Boone Circuit Court convened last Monday morning, Judge Sidney Gaines presiding and Commonwealth's Attorney John J. Howe, of Carrollton, present to look after the interest of the State. A very short time was occupied in organizing the grand jury, which was given a clear cut and comprehensive charge by Judge Gaines. The jury gave very close attention to every word of the judge and there is no doubt infractions of the laws will be closely looked after by the jury which is composed of the following gentlemen:

After organizing the grand and petit jurors the remainder of the first day was consumed in hearing the demurrers and motions. The petit jurors were excused early in the day until nine o'clock Tuesday morning.

There is no very big litigation on the docket for this term of the court.

Hon. W. W. Dickerson, of Cincinnati, Judge Lassing, of Newport, John J. Howe, of Carrollton; D. E. Castleman, of Erlanger, and Judge Strother, of Walton, were the only out of town attorneys present to witness the opening of court.

Those who came into court Tuesday morning were not backward in expressing their delight at the nice rain that was falling, and extended to every part of the county heard from.

Attys. Tomlin and Vest, of Walton, took up their work in the court Tuesday morning.

When the game warden's list of witnesses was exhausted the precincts of the grand jury room did not present so lively an appearance.

Only jurors, witnesses and litigants are attending court this week.

Game Warden Chas. Scales, of Covington, was present and a look over the crowd in the court room was enough to satisfy one that he had been busy seeking violators of the game and fish laws and had present a large number of witnesses to tell the grand jury what they knew in regard to unlawful hunting and fishing.

Tuesday morning the grand jury returned an indictment against Gilbert Edwards, charging him with assault and battery on the person of Rev. Leslie N. Early. Both parties live in Petersburg precinct. Edwards gave bond in the sum of $200 for his appearance for trial at the December term of the court.

The case of Furneaux, Hoffle Co., of Cincinnati, against Mrs. Laura Gaines, was tried before a jury. Verdict in favor of Mrs. Gaines. The suit was for about $87 dollars. Mrs. Gaines alleged she had paid the claim and produced in court notes which she claimed represented the amount sued for, which notes she said she had paid and taken up. The plaintiff claimed the notes were sent to Mrs. Gaines for her signature and that she never returned them.

The court appointed Joseph A. Huey, C. C. Roberts and Jonas Stevens jury commissioners, their duty being to select and place in the jury wheel the names of 300 persons who are competent to serve as grand and petit jurors, and whose names will be drawn for that purpose.

Court will be in session until some time next week.

Mr. E. R. Colbert recently crushed one hundred tons of limestone to put on his farm near Boston Station. This stone was analyzed and is of an exceptionally good grade. Mr. Colbert expects to crush about five hundred tons this fall. He will put up a concrete silo and some of the stone will be used for its construction.—Pendleton Leader.

Leslie McMullen subbed a few days last week while Dolpha Sebree, regular carrier on Burlington R. D. 3, took recreation quarrying and hauling stone.

Rev. N. F. Johns, of Dayton, this State, began a protracted meeting at the Bullittsburg Baptist church last Monday night. Services morning and evening. Everybody invited.

Needs an Ounce of Salt a Day.

The dairy cow requires an ounce or more of salt a day, and while she should be given all she needs, she should not be forced to take more than she wants. It is best therefore, to give only a small quantity on the feed, and to place rock salt in boxes in the yard.

An Illustration.

How the increase in the cost of living has progressed in the last few years is evidenced by the following facts: Today a chicken is worth more than a turkey was a few years ago; a turkey more than a hog; a hog more than a cow used to be worth, and a cow more than a horse. These items illustrates the increase in the price of food stock.

Among the Favord Ones.

A few farmers in this county have been favored with rain enough to insure them good crops of corn, while their pastures are fine. Among this class is John W. Hogan, of Mt. Zion neighborhood, and Lonnie Acra, of the Hopeful neighborhood. Of course other farmers in their immediate neighborhoods have enjoyed like favors on the part of the weather department.

Needs Plenty of Pure Water.

All animals require plenty of good, pure water. This is especially true of the milking cow, as water constitutes more than three fourths of the volume of milk. The water supply, therefore, demands the dairyman's most careful attention. Stale or impure water is distasteful to the cow and she will not drink enough for maximum milk production. Such water may also carry disease germs which might make the milk unsafe for human consumption or be dangerous to the cow herself. During the winter, when cows are stabled the greater part of the time, and unless arrangements have been made to keep water before them all the time, they should be watered two or three times a day. If possible, the water should be 15 or 20 degrees above the freezing point, and should be supplied at practically the same temperature every day. When water well above freezing temperature is stored in tanks and piped direct to the cow, there is probably little occasion for facilities to warm it; but when it stands in a tank on which ice often forms, it usually pays well to warm it slightly. This can be done by a tank heater, by live steam, or by hot water from a boiler. If a boiler is used for running a separator or for heating water to wash and sterilize utensils, steam from it can readily and cheaply be used to warm the water.—Farmers' Bulletin 743.

Cheap Transportation Has Built National Prosperity

This is a big American freight engine.

It is an achievement of AMERICAN INVENTIVE GENIUS.

It is built to HAUL LONG TRAINS loaded with the products of American industry from the mines, farms, mills and factories to the markets of the country, and to the seaboard for shipment across the seas.

In all the wonderful history of American industrial progress NO PIECE OF MACHINERY HAS PERFORMED SUCH SERVICE AS THE BIG FREIGHT LOCOMOTIVE.

Freight is carried on our railroads at the LOWEST RATES IN THE WORLD, while we pay our railroad workers the HIGHEST WAGES IN THE WORLD. A TON OF FREIGHT IN THE EAST IS CARRIED THREE MILES FOR THE COST OF A TWO-CENT POSTAGE STAMP.

Cheap transportation is one of the biggest builders of our prosperity.

The big freight engine with its enormous tractive power, the big steel freight car with its great carrying capacity, and the heavy rails and rock-ballasted roadbed to support the weight of the great engines and heavy trains—these are the achievements of American industrial genius which have given us low freight rates and broad markets, and have enabled us to put our products in the markets of the world in competition with foreign manufacturers.

But now come well-meaning but short-sighted leaders of American railroad workers who say to the railroad managers:

"SHORTEN YOUR FREIGHT TRAINS so that the enginemen and trainmen can haul the tonnage faster over the roads, and so make as many miles pay in eight hours as they now do in ten hours."

To the State Legislatures these same spokesmen for the railroad workers say:

"Pass laws LIMITING THE LENGTH OF FREIGHT TRAINS—we oppose big tonnage trains."

To the Farmers, Manufacturers, and Merchants they say:

"With shorter freight trains railroads can move your products faster to the markets."

To the American Public that pays every dollar of the railroad bill (and 44 cents of every dollar paid for transportation is for wages), they say:

"All that the railroads have to do to meet our demands for higher wages is to shorten their trains, move the freight more rapidly and escape the penalty of overtime wages."

What would be the result of taking these leaders of the 350,000 train employes at their word—shorten freight trains so that they can be run at higher speed?

Increasing the number of trains to handle the same tonnage would call for more employes to do the same work, more tracks, larger yards and terminals, more supervision, and it is plain that there would be more congestion of traffic and greater hazards in train operation. Hundreds of millions a year would have to be spent by the railroads to increase their facilities and to operate the bigger plant.

IT WOULD BE AKIN TO USING HAND SHOVELS INSTEAD OF FIVE-TON STEAM DREDGES TO DIG A PANAMA CANAL.

American railroads have spent enormous amounts in reducing grades, cutting down mountains and filling up valleys; in increasing the hauling power of locomotives and the carrying capacity of cars; in putting down rock ballast and heavy rails—all for one purpose, to lower the cost of operation.

It is the public that has reaped the benefit—in better and cheaper railroad service.

If the railroads moved their tonnage in shorter trains at higher speeds, the public, it is seen, would have to shoulder a great burden in the increased cost of transportation.

Would the public get value received for its money?

Of the tonnage on the roads east of Chicago 60 per cent. consists of coal, coke, ores, stone and other mine products. To the public it is of no consequence whether this freight is a few hours longer on the road, so long as there is a continuous and regular stream of it coming to the markets.

FOUR-FIFTHS OF ALL THE TONNAGE MOVING IN THE EAST IS MADE UP OF LOW GRADE, SLOW MOVING FREIGHT, CARRIED AT THE LOWEST RATES IN THE WORLD.

To abandon the big freight trains on American railroads in order to increase the speed at which the bulk of the traffic moves, and thereby enable the train employes to earn higher wages in shorter hours, would place a great burden on American industry without giving the public any tangible benefit.

LONG HOURS A RARITY.

Only Once in Five Years Does Average Trainman Exceed Legal Limit.

That long hours in train service have been reduced to a minimum is shown by a report issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Only one employe in five on the average last year was compelled to remain on duty more than sixteen hours during any one day in the whole year. Stated in another way, the chance of an engineman or trainman remaining on duty beyond this prescribed limit was reduced to once in five years.

The total number of cases of excess service from all causes reported to the commission was only 61,247 during the year ending June 30, 1915, as compared with 137,439 in 1914 and 270,827 in 1913, and with rare exceptions these represented cases recognized as due to unavoidable causes.

Statistics on this subject are collected by the Interstate Commerce Commission under the national hours-of-service law. Every time a train is so delayed by a blizzard, washout or other cause that any part of the train crew is on duty longer than sixteen hours the railroad company must report the occurrence to the commission, giving the names of the individual employes concerned and a full statement of the cause for the excess service.

For several years the railroads and the Interstate Commerce Commission have been co-operating in efforts to prevent the keeping of employes on duty for long periods. The reduction of nearly 80 per cent. in such cases which has been brought about in three years shows that the working of men long stretches of continuous service has practically disappeared except in cases of unavoidable delay.

RAILWAY MAIL PAY.

Congress Directs Interstate Commerce Commission to Investigate Subject.

Washington.—The annual Post Office appropriation bill recently passed by Congress contains a clause directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to take up for investigation, report and the fixing of rates the system of payment to the railroads for carrying mail. The Commission is authorized to test the relative merits of payment by weight and by space.

The railroads have long contended that they were underpaid for this service and that they were losing millions of dollars a year under the system of payment now in effect. It was felt that the Interstate Commerce Commission, on account of the information at its command regarding all phases of railroad operation, is in the best position to determine the merits of the case.

GOVERNMENT SHOULD REGULATE WAGES.

If a set of conditions have arisen which oblige the government to regulate rates, then it is equally obliged, on the basis of economic analysis, to regulate wages accordingly. Having taken one step, it must take the other. The logic of events is forcing this dilemma on the government. It is the public which sooner or later must pay for the increased expenses of transportation.—Professor J. Laurence Laughlin, University of Chicago.

BUSINESS MEN TRY TO AVERT STRIKE

Ask Congress to Direct U. S. Inquiry Into R. R. Wages.

FOR PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT

Members of United States Chamber of Commerce Vote Overwhelmingly in Favor of Letting Interstate Commerce Commission Adjust Controversy.

Washington.—In order to ascertain the position of the business men of the nation on the controversy between the railroads of the country and the unions of train service employes, which was precipitated by the demand of the latter for an increase in wages that would amount to $100,000,000 a year, the United States Chamber of Commerce recently submitted the matter to a vote of all its members. They were asked to express their opinion as to whether the dispute should be allowed to take its course with the possibility of a great strike that would tie up all the transportation lines throughout the country and paralyze all business, or whether they would favor the adoption to a joint resolution by the two branches of congress directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate and pass upon the matter.

The vote received was a very large one and represented business organizations in every part of the country. The result was overwhelmingly in favor of placing the matter in the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commission, 984¾ votes being cast in favor of this course and only 28¼ against it. The result showed clearly that the business interests of the country are unalterably against permitting the transportation lines to be tied up by a national railroad strike that would paralyze the commerce of the country and inflict enormous losses on all classes of citizens.

Chairman Wheeler of the Committee in charge of the matter for the Chamber of Commerce appeared before the representatives of the railroads and their employes at their conference in New York in June. He announced the result of the Committee's inquiry among the business men of the country and urged both parties to the dispute to get together and adopt the course suggested. As a result the committee of managers representing the railroads submitted a proposal that the whole subject be placed before the Interstate Commerce Commission as requested by the representatives of the business interests. As an alternative they offered to submit the demands to arbitration under the Federal law. Both offers were refused by the union leaders, who announced that they would go back to their unions and get authority to declare a strike. This they have since been doing.

Meanwhile a resolution has been introduced in Congress directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to make an investigation of railroad wages. This resolution is now awaiting action. It is believed here that if nothing further is done by Congress or by the parties to the wage dispute to bring about a peaceful settlement the business interests of the country, through the United States Chamber of Commerce, or some other organization, will appeal to the Government to take some direct and decisive action to prevent the destruction of national prosperity by a strike on all the railroad lines.

DEMANDS OF R. R. TRAINMEN.

Wage Increase of $100,000,000 a Year Would Have to Be Borne by Public.

The train service employes of all railroad lines in the United States have united in a demand for a new basis of pay for all men engaged in operating trains, except those in passenger service. At the present time they are paid on the basis of ten hours of time or 100 miles of distance, whichever gives them the higher pay; and every man receives a full day's pay, no matter how short a time he works.

The trainmen now demand that, in all but passenger service, (1) the present ten hours pay shall be given for eight hours, or less, with a guarantee of a full day's pay, no matter how little service is performed; (2) overtime to begin after eight hours, instead of after ten hours, and to be paid for at one and one-half times the hourly rate.

These demands would increase the hourly rate of pay 25 per cent, and the overtime rate 87½ per cent.

They also insist that all special extra pay provisions in the 10-hour schedules shall be included in the proposed 8-hour schedule.

These special rules frequently give double pay for the same service, and enable the employes to earn two and three days' pay in a single day of ordinary working hours.

As the increase for all the lines is estimated to amount to $100,000,000 a year the railroads say that they cannot pay it unless they are allowed to increase freight and passenger rates.

The average wages of the men engaged in train service are already very much higher than those of other employees and they receive 28 per cent of the total payroll although constituting only 18 per cent of the whole number of railroad workers.

How Margarine Is Made.

Oleomargarine, when first introduced in England, was called "bosh." As this name repelled business, it was changed to "margarine," a word derived from the freak word for a pearl, because of the pearly appearance of margaric acid.

There has been a great improvement in its manufacture in recent years, so great that the London Lancet says "the product of the present day is a triumph of the art of the refined blending of various fats, vegetable and animal, with milk." It was originally made from the fluid part of beef fat with a trifling proportion of vegetable oil. Today some of its forms contain nothing but nut oils blended with pasteurized skim milk. These are perfectly wholesome.

Huey was in the box for Burlington and Aylor for Union. Walter Brown starred for Burlington. The Union boys have been a hard proposition for every club that has tackled them this year, and another year's handling by manager Lassing will bring them to the front good and strong. Watch Union.

Lupus is very rare in America and little known by physicians. The case here has developed on a negro lad of 15 years. The front of the face, including the nose and upper lip, are affected. The lad was brought before the medical society for examination and will be treated by the doctors free of charge in their effort to baffle the disease.

SILAGE.

Undoubtedly corn is the best crop to put in the silo. It has more feeding value than anything else, except sorghum, which is a close second. Some of our feeders like the latter, not because it contains more value, but that a heavier tonnage can be grown per acre. This for cattle-feeding, both for fattening and young stock, but for the average feeder corn is the preference and for dairy cows there is no question but that it stands first.

Now as to other crops. A few farmers have ensiled clover, alfalfa and soys, but these are usually preferred as hay. Tye makes an excellent silage, especially for summer use, where the silo has been emptied before the tye comes on. The Experiment Station has proved the value of rye silage for summer feed. M. L. Trible likes barley and has had splendid results with it in the silo.

We know of one dairyman who keeps his silage machinery always limbered up during spring, summer and fall, cutting in all catch crops and finds this good practice; we call it excellent management. One trouble about silos and silage is that we do not have enough of them on the farms. We have room only for corn, while if we had more room for storage, more systematic management, we could fill our silos with corn or sorghum and one of the legumes mixed in filling, as they do down south. There they plant corn and cowpeas together and cut them into the silo and get good results from the combination.

FEDERAL INQUIRY IN WAGE DISPUTE

Railroad Managers Submit Plans to Avoid Great Strike.

ARBITRATION IS OFFERED.

Agree to Refer Demands of Men For More Pay to the Interstate Commerce Commission or to Accept Settlement Under Newlands Act.

New York.—The announcement that the strike vote which has been in progress among the train service employes of American railroads for the past several weeks has been completed, and that the final demands by the union leaders are soon to be presented to the railroad managers here, indicates that the public will soon know whether the controversy between the railroad workers and their employers is to be settled peaceably, or whether a nation-wide strike is to be inflicted upon the country.

Thus far the leaders of the four unions—the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen—have refused to consider any proposal for an arbitration of the questions in dispute, or for settlement of the controversy by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Would Cost $100,000,000.

The demands of the train service men for an increase in wages, which, it is estimated, would cost the railroads of the country $100,000,000 a year, were originally presented last March. At that time the representatives of the unions asked for a conference with a committee of railroad managers representing the various railroad lines of the country.

This conference began here in New York on June 1st, and continued for two weeks. The railroads were represented by a committee of nineteen managers, and the brotherhoods by the heads of their various national and local organizations—some eight hundred men in all.

Choice of Methods Offered.

The conference failed to reach a decision owing to the refusal of the union leaders to consider any modification of their demands, or any proposal for arbitration. At the conclusion of the meetings the railroad managers submitted a proposal to refer the whole question to the Interstate Commerce Commission, or to arbitration under the provision of the federal statute covering this matter.

The alternative suggestions which they advanced for adjusting the controversy were as follows:

"1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenues of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected, and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot, under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved; or

"2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law, entitled, "An Act Providing for Mediation, Conciliation and Arbitration in Controversies between Certain Employers and their Employees," approved July 15, 1913, and commonly known as the Newlands Act."

Unions Refuse Offer.

The union leaders declined to consider the suggestion of the railroad managers, and announced that they would seek a vote of the members of the unions asking that they be given authority to declare a strike on all the railroad lines of the country. This strike vote has been in progress for the past six weeks, and, according to reports which have been received here from time to time, will result in giving the four union leaders the authority which they asked for to halt every railroad train from one end of the country to the other.

Meanwhile a resolution has been introduced into Congress at the request of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate the whole question of railway wages and their relation to railway earnings. The commercial interests, the newspapers, and public men of the nation have gone on record as demanding that the dispute be settled peaceably.

What the Public Pays.

Out of every dollar the public pays the railroads for transportation the railroad employes receive 44 cents. The traveler who spends $100 a year for his tickets is paying $44 for railroad labor. The merchant whose freight bills amount to $1,000 contributes $440 to the railroad payroll. The merchant gets the money from his customers in the prices he charges for his wares. The public pays every dollar of the railroad bill.

GREAT R. R. STRIKE IS THREATENED

Transportation Tie-up Would Paralyze Business.

FARMERS TO FACE DANGER.

Could Not Market Crops and Losses Would Run Into Hundreds of Millions—With Factories Unable to Operate Wage-earners Would Suffer.

From the viewpoint of the public it is an intolerable situation when any group of men, whether employes or employers, whether large or small, have the power to decide that a great section of country * * *, shall undergo great loss of life, unspeakable suffering and loss of property beyond the power of description, through the stoppage of a necessary public service. This, however, is the situation which confronts us as a nation.—From the Report of the Eastern Engineers' Arbitration Board (1912) signed by Charles R. Van Hise, Oscar Straus, Frederick N. Judson, Albert Shaw, Otto N. Eidlitz and Daniel Willard.

As a result of the demands for more wages which the train service employes of the railroads have been pressing upon the transportation lines, the country is face to face with the possibility of the greatest strike and the most serious industrial catastrophe in its history. The engineers, conductors, firemen and brakemen on practically all the railroad lines have voted to place their entire interests in charge of a few leaders within their organizations, and to give these leaders authority to call a strike if they wish to do so.

What such a strike would mean to the American people cannot be set forth in mere facts and figures. It can be dimly imagined by those who realize what an intimate and vital part transportation plays in every industrial activity of the country.

Cities Would Face Starvation.

There is scarcely a person in any part of the land who would not be immediately affected if the millions of busily turning wheels on our nearly three hundred thousand miles of railway were to stop for a single day. If the tie-up continued for a week, the blow to the industry of the country would be greater than that caused by any panic of recent history. To the big cities of the country, and particularly to the cities of the eastern seaboard, it would mean a cutting off of food supplies that would place the inhabitants virtually in a state of siege.

In the case of many food products these cities do not carry on hand a stock sufficient to feed their people for more than a week, and in the case of some, such as milk and fresh vegetables, supplies are replenished daily. The stoppage of transportation therefore, would mean suffering and want to these city dwellers, and if continued for long would threaten many of them with actual starvation.

Vast Loss to Farmers.

To the farmers of the country a general railroad strike would be a catastrophe, only less serious. Cut off from his market, the farmer could not move his produce, and the price of grain and other staples would be quickly cut in two, while the market value of more perishable articles would disappear entirely. The strike would make it extremely difficult to harvest crops in many sections. It would make the disposal of the crops impossible, and would inflict losses amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars upon the farmers of the country.

The great industrial plants of the country would soon be forced to close down following the declaration of a strike because they could not obtain supplies needed for their operation, nor could they ship their finished products to market. Their plants would soon be idle, and millions of men would be thrown out of work.

With the income of practically every class of citizens either seriously cut down or suspended entirely, merchants would transact little business, because there would be few purchasers. In short, the industrial activities of the whole country would be virtually palsied from the moment the railroads ceased to operate. The injury to the railway companies and to the striking employes would be enormous, but it would be infinitesimal compared with the staggering loss that would fall upon the general public.

HIGHEST WAGES, LOWEST RATES.

American railroads today pay the highest wages in the world, out of the lowest rates in the world, after having set down to capital account the lowest capitalization per mile of all great countries of the world. No other occupation and no other employer of labor in the country can match this record.—James J. Hill.

Long Drought Broken.

The drought that had become serious was knocked out by a fine rain that began falling about 4 a. m., Tuesday. The rain was general and revived the springs and replenished the creeks and branches, dispelling considerable uneasiness on the part of the farmers who saw their supply of stock water diminishing day by day with no indication of relief. The rain will be a benefit to a great deal of corn, but there is a large acreage in this county that is past redemption and will make only a poor class of fodder. The tobacco that has been growing very slowly has plenty of time in which to grow out and make at least a fairly good crop, and the rain will be a starter for it, and the growers are feeling better in regard to their crops of tobacco.

A Dramatic Scene.

Owensboro, Aug. 13.—There was a dramatic scene in the Daviess county jail this afternoon when Mrs. Charles Wyne was escorted into the cell where her husband is held on the charge of killing Dr. M. C. Dunn, president of the Henderson School Board, last Thursday morning. It was the first time that the wife had seen her husband since he was placed under arrest. Thursday afternoon he was rushed to the Owensboro jail for safe keeping Despite the fact that Wyne recently filed a suit for divorce against her, alleging improper acts with the man he killed, she embraced him and promised to stand by him, when he is placed on trial for his life. The wife and attorney remained twenty minutes with the prisoner, and then departed for Henderson. It is understood that Wyne's defense will be that he was temporarily insane when he shot Dr. Dunn to death.

Valuable Rains.

Owensboro, Aug. 13.—During the last two days rains have fallen in Daviess county and the entire Green River district. This means hundreds of thousands of dollars to the farmers. Crops were beginning to suffer for the want of rain. There had not been a good rain since early in June. It is estimated that the tobacco crop in the Green River district will weigh 50,000,000 pounds this year, one of the largest crops in history. Only about 23,000,000 lbs., was delivered in the Green River district last year.

The farmers in this county will soon be sending all their livestock and produce to market in trucks, one or more of which will be found in every neighborhood. The shrink age saved in stock by rapid transit will more than pay the freight, to say nothing about the labor and time saved.

RECLAIMING A GREAT SWAMP

Scientific Farming on an Eleven-Thousand-Acre Tract in Western New York.

One of the largest and most scientific agricultural enterprises in the eastern part of the United States is a farm in western New York. Popular Mechanics Magazine tells of scientific methods and modern implements used on this big farm, which has been in the course of development for the last three years. This farm comprises 11,000 acres and is two miles long and nine miles wide. A trip of sixty miles is required to pay off all the help. The undertaking is backed by New York financiers and is managed by a civil engineer who is also a scientific farmer.

The land comprising this farm was originally a vast, undrained swamp, and its reclamation was accomplished only by employing a dredge which cut a deep main canal, with many lateral branches, through the tract. As the land was drained lumbermen were put on it to clear off the trees and stumps with axes and dynamite. These workmen were followed by others with five-gang plows, etc., drawn by caterpillar tractors of light construction. These light engines have almost wholly supplanted horses on the farm and are a source of special interest to the boys of the farmers. One tractor has eight times the pulling power of a horse.

Of the 4,000 acres of muck land in the tract, only about 1,000 acres have been reclaimed and are now in use. Much of the farm is devoted to truck gardening conducted on a strictly scientific basis. A cost system is maintained, and it is possible to know just what each crop costs.

All the produce is prepared for shipment according to factory methods. The crates are made on the farm, a special nailing machine being one of the labor-saving devices used in their construction. The workmen are well provided for with bungalows of modern type and with modern social conveniences, and such improvements as telephones, electric lights, etc. An evidence of the success of the enterprise is that much of the land is now valued at $500 per acre.

HOW SUNBURN MAY BE CURED

Really Painful Affliction Can Be Alleviated If Treatment Is Undertaken at Once.

Sunburn is often extremely painful. In many cases, where a girl has been out in the sun practically all day, the skin blisters and causes very real suffering. It is a wise girl who knows how to care for her own sunburn, for she will save herself a good bit of pain by doctoring it at once.

When you return to the house after a day in the open and find your arms, neck and face all rose colored from the sun, don't stop to question why, but start in treating it at once. The burn never hurts the first day and sometimes it does not the second day, but you will certainly get it the third, unless you are very careful. Don't wait until the skin begins to itch and smart before you put on a cream, but at the first sign of rose color, where white usually is, start your doctoring at once.

Cocoa butter is excellent to take the sting out of sunburn and witchhazel cream is another fine emollient. Rub either one in well at the first appearance of the burn and then again the next day and you will not be bothered so much by the pain and itch.

Increasing Motor Truck Efficiency.

In a recent issue of Factory a contributor suggests a simple yet most efficacious method of securing greater service from any motor truck. He recommends the use of a number of crates or tubs, which can be loaded at any time and handled by a derrick which places them on and removes them from a motor truck. Thus the motor truck becomes practically independent of loading operations and the minimum of time is spent in loading and unloading. If a trailer is used in conjunction with a motor truck, this system of loading is even more effective.

Will He Go?

"And where do you expect to go next?" we asked the great explorer when we had finished interviewing him about the results of his latest expedition.

"I don't know," he replied. "You see, I've been to about every place there is except one."

"And that is?"

"That's the place the taxi driver told me to go to when I refused to pay him any more than the exact legal fare."

The Immediate Problem.

"Where are the snows of yesterday?" inquired the man who quotes poetry.

"Never mind that," rejoined his wife. "The important question is, 'Where is the ice that was due to arrive this morning?'"

Lesson in Economy.

"What are you doing, Billy?" asked Mrs. Nannie Goat of her son.

"Practicing economy, maw," replied Billy, who was chewing on an old umbrella. "I'm putting away something for a rainy day."

FARM ANIMALS

CUTTING THE LAMBS' TAILS

Nothing Serious About Simple Operation—Should Be Done With Pair of Hot Pincers.

At this season of the year there is nothing serious about the simple operation of taking off the tails of lambs, and of castrating them as well. The former should be done with hot pincers made for the purpose, which sear the wound, precluding infection from knife, and at the same time preventing bleeding. When tails are taken off in this way, writes George P. Williams in Stockman and Farmer, we have observed that the lamb notices the operation much less than when the knife or chisel is used. Castration is best accomplished by first cutting the lower half or more of the scrotum squarely off with a sharp knife; if less be cut off difficulty is experienced in taking hold of the testicles and the lamb is caused unnecessary agony by reason of the unusual pinching and working with the testicles before they can be drawn out.

When tails are taken from late lambs, the stub should be well girdled with pine tar to prevent the work of flies; but this is by no means a sure preventive, and very often the eggs may be found to have been deposited regardless of the most careful precaution. These lambs should be watched till the wound be healed. In case maggots be found, catch the lamb and pour in gasoline; this will not harm or hurt the lamb, and is sure death to the worms.

GET MORE VIGOROUS HORSES

Stallion Should Be In Good Physical Condition Before Beginning of Breeding Season.

A stallion that is not fit to work is not fit to sire work horses, is the opinion of J. S. Montgomery of the animal husbandry division of the Minnesota College of Agriculture. "The horse should be in good physical condition before the beginning of the breeding season," he says. "Plenty of exercise should be provided. If it is impossible to work the horse, a large paddock should be arranged where he may play in all kinds of weather.

"A clean, roomy, light and well-ventilated boxstall should be used for him.

Purebred Sire.

It is best to have the stall where the horse is near to other horses.

"In feeding the stallion for the season," Mr. Montgomery cautions, "it should be remembered that a thin animal is just as bad off as one that is too fat. The horse should be in good flesh, preferably on the gain, to open the season. The flesh should be put on by a ration free from excessive corn or other heating and fattening feeds. Oats make a good grain ration, but may be advantageously supplemented by one-fifth—by weight—of wheat or bran. A little oil meal, up to 8 per cent, is also desirable. Bright hay should be fed at the rate of a pound a day to each hundred pounds the horse weighs. If the stallion is being worked, he should have a pound and half a day to each hundred pounds. The clover fed it should be limited to one-half the ordinary hay ration, for the excess of protein in it overworks the kidneys and is hard to eliminate from the system."

Mr. Montgomery believes that less pampering of the purebred sires would give more vigorous horses.

TROUBLE WITH FARM HORSES

Influenza or Distemper Can Be Prevented, Says Nebraska College of Agriculture.

When influenza or distemper breaks out among the farm horses, the loss from lessened working efficiency is sometimes heavy. The Nebraska college of agriculture says that this disease can very largely be prevented if the horses are vaccinated with influenza antitoxin as soon as the first case appears. Two doses should be given about six days apart. Ask your veterinarian about it.

HORSES PAY FOR THEIR KEEP

Good Interest on Investment Should Be Secured From Stock Kept on Any Farm.

Is your stock the kind that is paying you a good interest on their investment? That is the only kind that is worth keeping. It costs more than $90 per year to keep a horse. Is your method of farming such that the horses are paying for their keep?

Rested After His Run.

After a wild run in South Boston, in which the animal tore down about twenty feet of a wooden fence, smashed down a section of brick wall, broke a few windows in a schoolhouse, snapped off short a lamp post and crashed through a wooden gate, incidentally damaging the sides of two buildings, not to mention injuring the three men who were on the wagon, a horse attached to a brewery wagon wedged himself in a narrow alleyway and when found was munching contentedly such grass as he could reach from his position.

Maxim That Holds True.

"He dines not that eats alone" was a maxim which never fell upon dishonor. That we should notice similarity rather than differences, as we look backward, is but natural. The craving for well-cooked food is wholesomely human, and if the palate grows more delicate as the appetite becomes less gross the change is not peculiar to this country or that. As in poetry, so in food, the love of simplicity is the proof of a golden, if primitive, age.

Could Be Arranged.

A young woman with a party of Americans going through the parks and gardens of Warwick castle, England, lingered behind to admire the gorgeous peacock. "Do those birds ever drop any of their tail feathers?" she asked of a gardener who stood by. He looked around, lowered his voice, and replied: "They're hobstinate beasts, miss, but they drops 'em heasy at the sight of a shillin'."

For Show and for Use.

Commercially, elephants in India come under two classes—the one of pageantry, the other of utility. Every native prince or nobleman of distinction in India keeps elephants to swell his retinue, while, on the other hand, government officials and private persons, such as timber contractors, etc., require them for work.

Warfare and Rain.

It is one of the extraordinary things of warfare that a big battle invariably produces torrents of rain. History contains innumerable instances, both on land and sea, and on more than one occasion the storm or showers that followed an engagement had no small influence upon the life of nations.

Dynamite.

Dynamite, inestimably more powerful than gunpowder, is formed by soaking a solid absorbent substance with nitroglycerin. The best absorbent material is found at Hanover, Germany, and is known as "kieselguhr." When dried it is a white powder and is said to safely retain more than three times its own weight of nitroglycerin.

Mathematical Discovery.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

From John Uri Lloyd, Telling of His Boyhood Days in the Town of Burlington.

August 16, 1916.

Prof. R. H. Carter,
Burlington, Ky.

My Dear Prof. Carter:—

Your letter of August 1st, accompanied by the copy of "Purple and Gold," should have been answered sooner, and would have been, but for the fact that I have part of the time been away, and the remainder of the time so rushed with business affairs that I have had little opportunity to attend to my private correspondence.

I have gone through the pages of Purple and Gold," issued in behalf of the High School of Burlington, with exceptional interest. You may not be aware of the fact, but when my father came from New York state to Kentucky to survey a railway between Covington and Louisville, he first located in Burlington, making the village his headquarters, and bringing his family from New York to that locality. I well remember that journey to Burlington, although I was then but four years of age, my recollection of incidents connected with the journey as well as my life in Burlington being as clear today, as at the time of their occurrence. We lived in a house that belonged to Moses Rice, just beyond and diagonally across from what was then the finest house in Burlington, known as the "Toney" home stead. There have been very few changes in that part of Burlington, which pleases me, because when I pass through, as is occasionally my privilege, I like to look at the old places, even the people I knew so well are mostly gone. This leads me to say that you have presented page six, the portrait of one of my earliest friends. She was a great friend of my mother, and lived as she now lives, almost directly opposite our old home. I refer to Miss Mary A. Thompson, whose picture I look upon with much pleasure. A few weeks ago, in passing through Burlington with my family, I stopped at her home, but could fine no one about.

Inasmuch as my mother taught in Burlington in those early days, and when the company that proposed to build the railway that my father surveyed, he too taught school in Burlington, I feel a pleasure in receiving this booklet from you, by reason of the pioneer work my parents accomplished in those days, which is naturally connected with the more cosmopolitan efforts you are making, in a more modern field.

In going through your booklet, I note the names of many that were family names of the days of which I speak. On page 36 I find a question answered by "Kirtley" regarding the difference between the "Thirty Years War and the Hundred Years War," an answer that is about right, as it seems to me. I remember when "Jimmie" Kirtley, probably grandfather of this one, and his father, were among the most conspicuous Baptist ministers of Northern Kentucky. "Jimmie" Kirtley baptized my mother into the Baptist church of Burlington, an incident I well remember, because it occurred in the winter, and it seemed to me, as a little boy observer, that they might well have waited until summer time, when the pond was not covered with ice.

Let me close by complimenting you on the artistic and beautiful booklet you have issued. It is a great credit to yourself, your classes, and the people of Burlington. In looking at the picture of the High School building, page 22, I contrast it in mind with the little school house of sixty odd years ago, that stood across the "run," near the Petersburg pike. Back of it was the grave yard of Burlington, of the long ago.

Again thanking you for the remembrance, and with my kindest regards and best wishes, I am,

Sincerely Yours,
JOHN URI LLOYD.

When Differences Arise.

The most families and among friends, differences sometimes arise that are decidedly unpleasant. In nearly all cases these differences spring from misunderstandings. A time comes when explanations, apologies and reasons are in order, and a reconciliation takes place. This is a thing much to be desired, and when it comes wash the slate clean. Leave no fragments, no left-overs to be brought up at another time. Wash the slate clean as you would wipe out a faulty example. Cleanse the heart of the last drop of bitterness or resentment. Let love and good will prevail. A genial spirit brings more real happiness than a manner so reserved as to raise doubt of the pleasure of meeting, doubt that reconciliation was mutual. So forgive as to forget. It has been done and can be done. Such forgiveness wins good will and cements friendships that fill life with joy. Hold yourself ready to "wash the slate clean."

HOW MOUNTAINS ARE FORMED

Earth Crumples Up and Makes Great Hills Where Plains Once Lay.

In the region now occupied by the Wasatch mountains, a number of parallel faults were developed close together and the broken pieces of the earth's crust between them were pushed up, the rocks on one side of earth crack riding up over those on the other side until a great mountain range was formed where once lay a plain. During the long period of slow earth movement which made these mountains, flat-lying parallel beds of rock were locally turned on edge, crumpled up and folded in a wonderfully intricate manner. These upturned and crumpled rocks are well exposed in Ogden canyon. The west face of the Wasatch range is believed to mark the place of a normal fault at a nearly vertical crack in the earth's crust, the rocks on the east side of which went down. The forces which have raised these mountains are still active, for movement, along this fault has disturbed the surface recently.—U. S. Geological Survey.

Mexico To-Day.

Dr. G. B. Winton, of Nashville, Tenn., for many years a resident of Mexico, the author of a widely read book, "Mexico Today," and an authority on Mexican matters, declares that present conditions in that country are much more hopeful than is generally believed.

"There is now practically no organized opposition to the defacto government," he said when asked for a statement.

"Villa had been defeated and forced into the mountains of Chihuahua even before Carranza's recognition by the U. S. The same is true of Zapata, who is hiding in the all but impenetrable mountains nobody knows exactly where. He cannot easily be captured, but on the other hand, he can do no great harm.

"My daily paper arrives regularly from Mexico City showing that train service is practically normal. From it I learn that municipal elections are to be held thruout Mexico in September, and that the governors of states, nearly all young and progressive men, are taking special pains to guarantee freedom of the ballot and fair elections. A constitutional convention will next be called to revise the federal constitution, and after that national elections will be held, the meantime federal courts, district and circuit, have already been established thruout the country.

"The matter of public education is being pressed in Mexico City and the federal territories and is in charge of Prof. Andres Osuna, a highly educated, thoroughly equipped Christian gentleman, well known in the United States, having for several years been a resident of this country. Like a great many others of Mexico's reform leaders Osuna is a product of Christian missions. Now that the civil war in Mexico is over and the trouble with the U. S. in a fair way to early adjustment, I believe missions will have a better opportunity in that country than ever before. The people are hungry for enlightenment, mental and moral.

When a Fellow Knows It All.

There are but few country towns in existence but what have some one or more persons who "know it all." That is, the fondly imagine they know it all and most people give them credit for being better posted on everything and everybody than their neighbors are. But are they? The fellow who is a "know it all" is also most generally a free talker. He trades information for information, gossip for gossip, and scandal for scandal. Thus it is that he is often able to impart certain unimportant information to his associates in a "strictly confidential manner," giving the impression that he has been in close touch with the powers that be. But when you sift it down he has simply passed along, with embellishments of his own, information that is more or less of a public nature, and which would be received by the public in the usual routine in the course of a few days. As a matter of fact, the Know-it-all man seldom knows in advance of the really important affairs of life or of the commercial world, for no one cares to impart such information to the one who knows it all and tells all he knows. Do not tie to the man who knows it all, for in all probability he knows less than you.

Will Have to Pay.

Frankfort, Aug. 18.—Students at the State University who have been going to school on free scholarships granted by the state must pay tuition fees if the Appellate Court agrees with Attorney General Logan in his opinion today, given to President Barker. Logan holds, however, that free scholarships may be given to teachers in public schools attending the State Normal Schools. In order to fully determine the matter it is probable that a test suit will be filed so that the Appellate court may pass on this question.

A SLUGGING MATCH

In Which Union Carries Home The Bacon—A Band of Loyal Rooters With Them.

Union's slugging aggregation came over last Saturday afternoon and wiped up the earth with Burlington's reputed ball team. It is true that Union won out by a single run, but the performance was remarkable because of the fact that at the close of the first inning the score was 10 to 0 in favor of Burlington, which seemed to discourage the visitors not in the least. Burlington tried three pitchers but they all looked alike to Union and their offerings were driven to all quarters of the lot. Taylor, who pitched for Union, was hit hard in the first inning, but after that he settled down and his delivery became a puzzle. At the close of the game the score shows Burlington had made 19 hits, nine errors, four stole outs, while Union had 18 hits, 3 errors and seven strike outs.

A considerable number of rooters accompanied the Union team and they sure did root, but avoided any uncalled for thrusts at players or spectators. It seems that the further in the hole Union is put the harder its rooters pull, and never say "we are beaten" until the close of the final inning.

Following is the score by innings:

Burlington	...10 0 0 0 2 0 0 3 1—16
Union	..... 0 1 5 0 1 1 3 3 3—17

MAT S. COHEN,
President, State Board of Veterinary Examiners.

Henry Raveau, a Paris business man, at present a Sergeant-at-Arms of Engineers at the front in France, sends a friend in the United States the following amusing litany, which he says is very popular in the trenches:

"You have two alternatives—either you are mobilized or you are not. If not, you have nothing to worry about. If you are, you have two alternatives—either you are in camp or at the front. If you are in camp, you have nothing to worry about. If you are at the front, you have two alternatives—either you are in reserve or you are on the fighting line. If in reserve you have nothing to worry about. If you are on the fighting line, you have two alternatives—either you scrap or you don't. If you don't you have nothing to worry about. If you do you have two alternatives—either you get hurt or you don't. If you don't you have nothing to worry about. If you do, you have two alternatives—either you get slightly hurt or you get badly hurt. If slightly, you have nothing to worry about. If badly, you have two alternatives—either you recover or you don't. If you recover, you have nothing to worry about. If you don't and have followed my advice clear thru, you have done with worry forever."

Ban Put on Shipments.

With prospects for a bumper crop of tobacco and with a report one day that Great Britain has put the ban on shipments of tobacco thru neutral countries for Germany and Austria and a report the next day that the ban has been lifted temporarily, the lot of the growers of the export types of tobacco cannot be paralled together happy one, although the accumulated stocks of several years have been disposed of at good prices during the past year. What the conditions governing shipments later on may be would seem to be anybody's guess, as the present regulations pertain to tobacco contracted for several months ago.

It is not improbable that many tobacco growers are regretting that they have not given over more of their acreage to corn, hay and other crops and to livestock, especially swine. With hogs bringing more than $10 a hundredweight and all livestock selling at the highest prices in many years the farmers who have gone in for diversification have a distinct advantage over the one-crop farmers at the present time at least. And diversification carries with it conservation and uplift. Forage crops and livestock rejuvenate the soil, whereas tobacco debilitates it; diversified crops and livestock encourage the study of better methods and arouse a keener interest; whereas the one crop adherents sink into a rut.

The general average price of farm products is not far from the highest on record and many products are selling at record prices. A recent report by the United States Department of Agriculture shows that prices of meat animals paid to producers increased one-half cent a pound from June 15 to July 15 this year, whereas prices usually decline during that period. On July 15 the index figure of prices for meat animals was 17.6 per cent. higher than a year ago, 8.5 per cent. higher than two years ago and 19.8 per cent. higher than the average for the past six years.

On August 1 Dun's index number of whole prices showed bread stuffs meat, dairy and garden products to be more than 10 per cent. higher than a year ago and in view of the advance in wheat oats and corn since the first of the month the general tendency must be toward still higher levels.

Farmers who are diversifying their crops and going in for livestock are on the road to greater independence. Ruinously low prices for breadstuffs and meat belong forever to the past. The consuming power of the country is rapidly overtaking production. An average wheat crop, such as is being harvested this year, leaves a very small margin for export.

The most effectual level the growers of tobacco can possess themselves of is to give more attention to other crops. By doing this they can make themselves independent of blockades and the whims of domestic manufacturers. They can make conditions such that they can with some degree of certainty know that they are to realize profitable prices for their crops.—C.-J.

Inginuity of Man Still In Its Infancy.

Several years ago a cumbersome contrivance on two wheels made its appearance and created a furore of ridicule, laughter and jeers. It was the bicycle. It was called a rich man's toy and a molycoddle's plaything and a short life was predicted. But the prophets were at fault, the bicycle became the greatest craze of its day, and now is in general use as a practical necessity for people who find it necessary to cover ground hurriedly and yet cannot afford the more expensive means.

A few years later another ugly looking monster puffed and snorted and rattled its way into public notice leaving in its wake a streak of smoke and foul smelling odors. It was the automobile, and it, too, was greeted with wild shouts and grimaces of ridicule. The wise and unwise both predicted its failure as a practical vehicle of motive power. Yet the millions in use today testify to the falseness of the greatest of our prophets.

A few weeks ago there appeared in one of our Atlantic coast ports a great and powerful merchant submarine. It came from Germany and had nosed its way beneath the surface into neutral waters despite the watchfulness of the warships of the allies. Another furore was created and the newspapers were filled with accounts of the wonderful craft that had made its way across the Atlantic with a cargo of goods. Again the prophets see failure ahead, but there are those who believe the Deutschland to be but the harbinger of a great fleet of underwater craft capable of conducting commercial relations with other countries irrespective of blockades or enemy ships of war.

The few instances but illustrate the fact that the ingenuity of man is yet in its infancy, that the surface of scientific discovery has scarcely been scratched, and that our children and our children's children will look back upon 1916 as we think of the Dark Ages, when the mind of man was sleeping in its cradle of lethargy.

WINTER DAIRYING PAYS.

Significant Facts Revealed by Records of Cow-Testing Association in Northwestern States.

When asked why they preferred to have all their cows freshen in the spring, a number of farmers in a northwestern State said positively that winter dairying did not pay in that section. The agent of the cow-testing association, therefore, investigated a number of farms to determine whether it was the best practice in that region to have cows freshen in the spring because there is then plenty of grass, and "grass is a cheap feed." He found that the spring freshened cows gave milk for a time while the pasture was good, but as hot weather and flies came on, the flow gradually decreased until by fall they usually were dry. As the owners thought it did not pay to feed a dry cow, the cows were allowed to browse around all the fall, picking up what feed they could, and in many cases they were forced to "rustle" around the straw pile all winter. As a result, in the spring many cows emerged with ribs showing and were considerably weakened by the time they freshened. They therefore got a poor start in the season, and in many cases their milk records the following year were still lower. It was not surprising, the agent points out, that the average was so mishandled, could produce only about 150 pounds of butter fat a year.

Many so-called scrub cows the agent points out, if freshened in the fall and given the right kind of feed and treatment during the winter before coming on grass for the latter part of their lactation period would prove to be money makers. This opinion seems to be supported fully by the records of the cow-testing association in the same general locality. These records show that the average farm cow that freshens in the fall not only produces more milk and fat, but also is more profitable to keep. In one county many cows which freshened in the fall won a place on the association's honor list for January and continued to produce heavily during the winter. When grass came in the spring these same cows picked up their naturally waning milk flow and finished up with a good yearly production before going dry late in summer. What is still more important, however, from the profit point of view, is that the fall-freshened cows produced the larger part of their records while milk prices were best. With the common idea that "grass is a cheap feed," therefore, this agent would couple the fact that "butter fat is usually cheap at the same time."

The highest January record of this association was made by a cow which produced 1,730 pounds of milk, or approximately 200 gallons, 3.7 per cent test, or 64 pounds of butter fat. Her milk, however, was sold on a city milk route and brought 20 cents a gallon, or approximately $40 for the month. On the other hand, if the owner had sold his product on a butter-fat basis he still would have received $19.20. As it cost him five dollars and 37 cents to feed the cow, his profit on a butter-fat basis would have been $13.83.

On this farm the cows get practically all the alfalfa hay and corn silage that they will eat up clean, and in addition a grain mixture of equal parts of rolled oats, bran, and shorts. Each of the heavier producers gets about ten pounds of this mixture daily. In addition to being well fed, the cows stand comfortably sheltered in a warm barn most of the time and have access to plenty of good water.

During the month six cows in this herd averaged 51.8 pounds of butter fat, worth more than $16, while the feed cost was approximately $5.37 apiece. The records kept by the cow tester gave the dairyman exact knowledge of the cost of feed and production in the case of each animal, and thus enabled him to cull out "boarders" and regulate his feed in proportion to the milk production of each cow. The association record for the farmer, however, seemed to establish the fact that, in the region mentioned, winter dairying can be made to pay.

Good Returns from Single Farm

Leslie Colvin, who owns thirty-seven acres of his father's farm between the Cynthiana and Broad ford pikes, is putting the croakers to shame. He is certainly handling a small piece of land to the best advantage. He cut out the tobacco growing several years ago, and devoted his farm to diversified farming. His strong line is cows, turkeys, pigs and chickens. He is milking four cows and selling the cream, and feeds the skim milk to pigs, calves and chickens. The combination is bringing him in five hundred to six hundred dollars a year. You don't have to own two or three hundred acres of land in the sweet clover county of Pendleton to make a living, as it has been demonstrated time after time. The small farmers with cows, poultry pigs and calves are the ones who are helping to make the county the leading county in the State and putting the kicker on the bum.—Falmouth Outlook.

$200 or $300 MORE, AND WHAT A DIFFERENCE!

I once bought a 98-cent razor. For two weeks I shaved with it. Then I bought another one. I paid $3.50 and I still have it. Nobody can persuade me to part with it.

And I challenge anybody to convince me that a 98-cent razor is cheaper than a $3.50 one.

No, gentlemen, the $3.50 razor is cheaper by far. It costs more, keeps a keen edge, gives me a good shave every day and lasts a lifetime.

So with the Chalmers car. It costs a little more—perhaps $200 or $300 more than some other cars. And what a difference that $300 makes!

The Chalmers keeps going day in, day out; year after year. It always looks the part. About all you need do is look after the gas, oil, water and grease cups.

And Chalmers gives five-year life. The average Chalmers owner keeps his car at least five years before he sells it second-hand or trades it in.

Quite a difference between the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers and many other cars in that one respect.

Aside from all this—the performance of the 1917 Chalmers will make you catch your breath.

They Have the Same Tax Rate

The town tax in Petersburg, Burlington and Florence, each, is 50 cents on the $100 worth of taxable property.

Chartered in 1834.

The Covington and Lexington turnpike received its charter from the Legislature on Feb. 22d, 1834, on the same day that the city of Covington was incorporated.

Came Over to Buy Hogs.

Joe Ewbanks, a large dairyman at Crescent Springs, Kenton county, was in Burlington one day the past week and bought 19 nice shoats from Dr. Yelton.

Driving Nice Stockers.

Ira Lee Thompson, of Petersburg, passed thru Burlington Friday morning going south with a considerable drove of nice stock cattle, his father had placed.

More Cement Received.

W. L. Kirkpatrick received another car load of cement last week. He made five trips a day with his truck, and hauled 4,500 pounds at a load while moving the material over from Erlanger.

Sold Their Toll Gates.

The directors of the Florence & Union Turnpike Road Co., sold the toll-gate property near Union to Miss Annie J. Smith. Price not known. The toll-gate property near Florence was sold to E.H. Blankenbeker.

Two Shots Fired on the Streets.

Several of the citizens were startled by a couple of shots that were fired on the street at a late hour Saturday night. Sheriff Cropper made an investigation but was unable to find the man who was behind the gun.

Cut an Artery Near His Wrist.

Frank Kelly threw down a mowing scythe which he was using one day last week, when it rebounded striking his wrist, severing a large vein from which the blood flowed freely until Dr. Yelton arrived and took up the vein.

Will Help the Fair.

The fact that there is no longer any toll collected on the Covington and Lexington pike should increase the city attendance at the fair. If the pike was oiled the entire distance the travel would be several hundred per cent more comfortable and much larger.

Enlarging His Store Building.

The mercantile business of C. W. Myers, of Florence, has increased until it has become necessary to enlarge the capacity of his business house, and he is erecting a considerable addition on the west of the present building. Mr. Myers is a hustler and here's hoping his business will continue to expand.

A Big Robbery in Petersburg

In the Fifty Years Ago Items in last Saturday's Commercial Tribune appeared the following item:

"Heavy Robbery at Petersburg Ky., the dry goods store of John G. Gaines being entered and $1,800 belonging to Judge Hudnall, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Sixth District; $200 belonging to A. M. Botts; $20 of Mr. Berkshire's savings and $590, the property of the store's proprietor, being taken.

Last Monday Elbert Clore received one of the latest model five passenger Ford automobiles.

Congress Will Adjouru Soon.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Adjournment of Congress now awaits only on the passage of the emergency bill, repassage of the army appropriation bill with amendments to meet President Wilson's veto, completion of the general deficiency appropriation measure and final action on a few conference reports, including the Government shipping bill.

Senate leaders who have grown optimistic over the rapid progress of legislation within the last few days say they would be ready to adjourn next Saturday if the House could be prevailed upon to accept the amended revenue bill without a fight.

This does not seem likely, however, and because of some discussion that may arise over general deficiency appropriations. Congress probably will not be ready for the adjournment gavel before September 1 or 2.

Fears of indefinite delay arising from President Wilson's veto of the army appropriation bill because of its exemption from the military code of retired officers and men have almost entirely disappeared.

A heavy rain and electric storm visited this section Tuesday shortly after 3 p. m It rained for several hours, reviving vegetation, replenishing the supply of water generally. The pike at W. L. Kirkpatrick's gate was badly damaged from overflow caused by two small a culvert. The creek at the creamery was higher than it has been for a long time. Several persons from out on the East Bend road were detained in Burlington until a late hour.

The series of meetings that was held at Big Bone Springs in the tent by Rev. O M. Huey resulted in four additions to the church besides three who united last Sunday at the church were baptized at Hamilton, last Sunday afternoon at 3:30 p. m, by the pastor, Rev. Albert Maddox The candidates for baptism were Mr. Newcom and wife, Carl Edwards and sister, Robt. Walton, Mr Day and sister.

Dr. Yelton and Elbert Slayback were caught by the rain Tuesday evening in Locust Grove neighborhood in the doctor's auto. The machine showed such a preference for fence corners and ditches at the road site that it was left at Jas. Jones, from which place they came home in a buggy borrowed of Mr. Jones

Miss Hazel Akin, of Flickertown neighborhood, gave a party last Saturday night in honor of her guest, Miss Sarah Ryle. Fifty young people responded to invitations and the event of the season was the result. Miss Hazel proved herself a most charming hostess.

During the storm last Tuesday evening lightning struck John Maurer's store in Belleview, which was saved by a hard struggle on the part of a bucket brigade. The damage was small, but the scare big.

The residence of Elmer Surface, of Mt. Zion neighborhood, was destroyed by fire Tuesday afternoon. Very little was saved. It is thought the fire resulted from the explosion of a coal oil stove.

Miss Kathryn Kelly returned Sunday after a visit of several days with Miss Mary Susan Rennsker, of Dry Ridge, Grant county.

Warren Lassing, of Union, sold to J. E. Rouse, of Fayette county, one day last week, ten Hampshire rams at a fancy price.

The telephone systems in the county were badly demoralized by the storm Tuesday afternoon.

The protracted meeting at Bullittsburg Baptist church will continue over next Sunday.

John C. White and family spent Saturday night and Sunday in Big Bone neighborhood.

The rain did not reach as far down the river as the mouth of Big Bone creek.

The Belleview pike was washed badly Tuesday afternoon.

A Delightful Meeting.

The Recreation and Improvement Club of Clover Lane met at the hospitable home of Miss Pearl Botts on the 19th inst., Miss Estelle Huey presiding as chairman.

After the reading the minutes of the last meeting the roll was called and each member responded with a quotation.

Mrs. N. B Walton read a sketch from "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which was entertaining.

Little Miss Margaret Ryle very cunningly gave a short recitation.

The conumdrums by Miss Katherine Sullivan were highly enjoyed by all.

Miss Martha Randall told some very interesting things that happened while she was attending school at Bowling Green.

The recitation by Miss Mattie Kreyllch, who was the guest of honor, captivated all.

After the business meeting the guests were invited out on the lawn where they were served with apples and delicious cider which Mr. Botts had prepared.

After another hour of social enjoyment, fancy work and croquet, the guests departed for home, to meet again with Mrs. Woodie Sullivan, Wednesday afternoon, August 30th.

A Pleasant Outing.

One of the most enjoyable affairs of the mid-summer season was the outing given by Miss Nellie Rouse for her music pupils at Chester Park, Ohio, Saturday, August 19. Mr. Al Scott taking them in his auto truck. Twenty scholars and several friends ehjoyed the trip, and at noon a delightful luncheon was served, which consisted of fried chicken, cake, fruits and other good things.

The afternoon was spent in enjoying the bathing and other amusements. Supper was served at six o'clock and when the evening shadows had gathered, the merry crowd started homeward, tired but very appreciative of Miss Nell's kindness.

Miss Inez Gaines Passed Away.

Inez Gaines, oldest daughter of G. T and Sallie Gaines, died in a Cincinnati hospital shortly after noon last Sunday. She had been in ill health for some time, and was taken to the hospital for treatment only a few days before her death, which occurred unexpectedly. Her brother, Hubert and his wife were at her bedside when the end came. The remains were brought home Sunday night by Undertaker C. Scott Chambers, of Walton, and the burial took place last Tuesday at 3 p. m, after a short service conducted at the house by Revs. E. C Riley and R. H. Carter.

The deceased was 43 years old the 23d day of last February, and her many womanly traits had acquired for her the highest esteem of all. She will be sadly missed in the family circle where she shown brightest and where her counsel was always timely.

She is survived by her parents one brother and one sister, Hubert and Kittie, all of whom have the sympathy of the entire community.

The funeral was attended by a large concourse of relatives and friends.

E. E Kelly received his two ton International truck, Tuesday. In Burlington are now three trucks and eighteen passenger cars

It is so hot in Missouri that the kernels on ears of popcorn are popping. Dr. C. M. Coe brought several ears to his office in the Grand Avenue Temple this morning showing the popped grains. The intense heat of the past week caused the premature popping, according to experts who examined the corn. The Weather Forecaster tod ay says cooler weather is due tomorrow, which will save the popcorn crop.—Kansas City Cor. Los Angles Times.

Tuesday evening Judge Lassing's auto in which R. A. Brady and wife, Mrs. Lassing and son and Mrs. Emma Brown were coming from Union, slipped off the road near Hubert Beemon's on the Florence pike, where it remained until Wednesday morning. Edgar Riley happened along with his machine and brought the stranded parties into town. Mr Shoats, who was at the wheel was attempting to pass a road wagon.

A BIG CONVENTION

The Sunday School Convention Held at Petersburg Well Attended.

Many Inspiring Talks Made.

The Boone Co., Sunday School Convention, held at Petersburg, Friday, was attended by a large crowd of delegates and other visitors from different Christian Bible schools of the county. The program during the morning was very interesting. Dinner was served under the trees on the river bank and the good things were enjoyed by all. In the afternoon several very interesting speakers were on the program. Rev. E. C. Lacy, of Walton, was the first speaker and, his subject being "Bible School in the church and the church in the Bible School." His talk was very helpful and should inspire the Sunday school workers to do more work in their different communities. Bro. Freese talked on several subjects which were all interesting. Rev. Carter spoke on "Visions caught at Conventions' and his talk was very good, helpful and inspiring. Rev. A. F. Hensey, Missionary to Africa, gave an extremely interesting talk on "Africa," and his work there. He took his audience on an imaginary trip to the heart of Africa and with him we visited a heathen village and saw all the queer customs. Then we visited a Christian African village and he showed us the difference in all things. His talk was very inspiring and gave his hearers a greater vision of missionary work in "Darkest Africa."

State News.

Frankfort — Lister Grossfield walked out of his home in Louisville 15 years ago and never returned. His wife ultimately thought he was dead and taught his daughters, four and nine years old then, to believe he was. He entered the grocery of his brother, Wood Grossfield, here and asked about his family. Wood told him his wife had remarried after getting a divorce, and his daughters were now Mrs. Wick Seabolt and Mrs. Forest Wheeler, both of Fern Creek, Louisville.

Warsaw, Aug. 18.—Crops have been especially excellent in Poland this year and apparently there is plenty of food here, but the poor complain that they have not tasted meat for a year.

After a year of German occupation, Warsaw appears gay and busy. The factories are closed, however, and there is tremendous amount of unemployment, especially among men of military age.

The Germans are building roads around the city at a cost of about $8,000,000 to facilitate marketing of crops.

Paris.—In order that the old Bourbon fair may not cease to exist forever, a movement was started here to form a company, capitalized at $10,000, divided into 200 shares, at $50 each, to buy the fair grounds, which was sold to the People's Deposit Bank at a forced sale. An option has been secured on the fair grounds by the promoters of the project for exactly the sum paid by the bank, and if the plan is successful the grounds will be bought and converted into a park or rented out for amusements.

Considerable damage was done to the plastering and ceiling on the second floor of the court house about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon when the heavy weight which runs the striking apparatus fell without warning. The weight probably weighs a ton and it tore a large hole in the second floor lobby. Mr. Kidd Allan and Asa Martin had just started to climb into the tower to see why the clock failed to strike. Neither was hurt and both are congratulating themselves on their narrow escape.—Winchester Democrat.

Whitesburg, Ky.—Acting County Superintendent of Schools A. C. Jenkins has just visited a large number of schools of Letcher-co., and reports greater interest and a larger attendance in the schools than ever before. Educational interests are advancing in every section of the mountains, due to the industrial development in progress, it is said. This year's school per capita, owing to the increase in revenue from dog tax, will be the largest in the history of the county. It will total $5.10. A large increase is also noted in most of the other mountain counties. Letcher this year gave a larger increase in pupil children than any other county.

Papers Reducing Size.

As a result of a series of meetings of the newspaper publishers of Philadelphia, called to consider the serious situation confronting them, caused by what are practicly famine conditions in the news print paper market, the following agreement was reached unanimously:

All daily, evening and Sunday newspapers will immediately reduce the size of their issues to the extent of a total in excess of eight pages weekly.

That, beginning Sept. 1 next, the accepting from wholesale purchasers of unsold copies of all morning, evening and Sunday newspapers will be discotinued. Heretofore this privilege has been granted to newsboys, news stands, newsdealers and carriers.

At this meeting of publishers facts and figures were submitted showing that the mills have been unable to supply the enormous increased demand for white paper. Not only have the mills been unable to lay in a reserve stock during the summer months, as in former years, but they are at present below their normal supply.

Many prominent dailies throughout the State of Pennsylvania have notified Philadelphia publishers that they will follow their lead in reduction in size of output and in cutting off returns of unsold copies.

The Tobacco Crop.

The best stand of recent years is reported in Fayette county.

Tobacco has not been hurt materially in Fleming county by the dry weather and is looking fine

In Nicholas county the crop is beginning to fire. Hail played havoc with many crops in that section.

The Montgomery county crop is as good as it was at this time in 1915, and growers seem to think it will be a good one for weight and that there will be some of the very highest type in quality.

With proper care from sunburn and in the barn there is no reason why Fayette should not have a splendid crop of tobacco both in quality and quantity.

Prospects for fine tobacco crop in Clark county are good. While some parts of the county have suffered from dry weather, other parts had no scarcity of moisture and crops are well advanced.

The sixty-eighth annual session of the Rogers Association of Universalists will convene at Manchester, Ind., Dearborn county, Sept., 1, at 2 p. m., and continue through Saturday and Sunday. All interested are cordially invited to be present.

Lucy Hurst, Clerk.

The Election in Maine.

The Maine election has a special interest this year to the campaign managers of both parties. It will give them their first line on the present whereabouts of the Progressive vote.

In 1912 the Wilson vote was 51,113, the Taft vote 26,545 and the Roosevelt vote 48,038, which exceeded the Wilson vote by 23,925.

In 1914 there were 62,039 votes cast for the Democratic candidate for Governor, 58,862 for the Republican candidate and 18,225 for the Progressive candidate. The total vote in 1914 was nearly 19,000 over 1912, and the combined Republican Progressive vote exceeded the Democratic vote by 15,048.

In order to carry Maine this year, the Democrats will have to win 12,000 of the votes cast for Taft and Roosevelt in 1912. That would mean approximately 25 per cent of the total Roosevelt vote. On the basis of the 1914 vote, a change of 8,000 would be enough but this would be practically 45 per cent of the vote cast for the Progressive candidate for Governor two years ago.

Neither side knows how this Progressive vote will split, and thus an importance attaches to the Maine election this year which has brought great anxiety to the campaign managers of both parties. That is why the Republicans are sending Mr. Hughes and Mr. Roosvelt to Maine in a desperate effort to hold the Progressive vote in line for the Republican candidates.

A Railroad Man's Prayer.

An old railroad man was converted, and was asked to lead in prayer. He said:

"O Lord, now that I have flagged Thee, lift my feet off the rough road of life and plant them safely on the deck of the train of salvation. Let me use the safety lamp known as prudence, make all couplings in the train with the strong link of Thy love. And, Heavenly Father, keep all switches closed that lead off to sidings, especially those with a blind end. O Lord, if it be Thy pleasure, have every semaphore blocked along the line, show the white line of hope that I may make the run of life without stopping. And, Lord, give us the ten commandments as a schedule time, and when my train shall have pulled into the great dark station of Death, may Thou, the Superintendent of the Universe, say with a smile: "Well done, thou good and faithful servent; come up and sign the pay roll and receive your check for eternal happiness."

NEWS FROM INDIANA.

Lewis L. Jarrell has bought the Frank Emmert residence property on east High street for $550.

At a meeting of the Boosters' Association Friday evening it was decided to hold a farmers' fair on Saturday, October 14.

A tabernacle with a seating capacity of 1,500 will be erected for the Bulgin union meeting which will begin Sunday, Sept. 10. This will be the largest auditorium ever constructed in Lawrenceburg.

T. D. Porter, who with his wife is spending the summer in Lawrenceburg, says that beginning July 4th there were thirty-eight successive days that the temperature was 90 or higher. This is probably the record for continuous warm weather in this locality.

Among the attractions of the annual Tanner's Creek Pioneer Association meeting at West Fork church on Saturday, Sept. 2, will be a race for "boys" over sixty and under 100. A nice prize will be given by the association to the one who proves the fleetest of foot.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Contentment is the true philosopher's stone. The poor are rich who have it, the rich are poor who possess it not.

Contentment comes not from outward possessions, but from the inward life.

GOOD THINGS TO KNOW.

When making cake a good plan is to add the soda or baking powder to a little of the flour the very last thing, stirring it in well before adding the whites of the eggs.

Keep absorbent paper in the kitchen on which to drain fried cakes, croquettes and any fried food.

A little beefsteak chopped fine and mixed with cooked rice, salt, pepper, and a little onion made into small cakes or used as filling for peppers, makes a tasty dish.

A common currycomb will clean the brush of the carpet sweeper of threads and hairs.

Spareribs With Sauerkraut.—Trim off the edges of two sets of spareribs, break the bone across the middle, rub well with salt, pepper, and sprinkle with flour. Fill with sauerkraut which has been parboiled 20 minutes. Save the water in which the kraut was cooked, sew the ribs tightly, place on the rack in a roaster, then pour the kraut liquor around it. Cook slowly. Turn once, and when tender serve with mashed potatoes.

Cornmeal Griddle Cakes.—Take a cupful of yellow cornmeal, add a cupful of boiling milk, a half teaspoonful of salt, teaspoonful of baking powder, one tablespoonful of melted butter and a tablespoonful of molasses with a well-beaten egg. Mix well and bake on a hot griddle.

Cornmeal With Raisins.—Take a cupful of cornmeal, two cupfuls of milk, one cupful of seeded raisins, one egg, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one teaspoonful of salt. Mix the cornmeal and milk together and the well-beaten egg and melted butter, add the salt, baking powder and raisins which have been well cleaned and put through the meat grinder. Mix all together and pour into a well-greased pan. Bake in a hot oven.

An egg broken into a pan with a little hot butter stirred until thick and well cooked, then seasoned and spread on buttered bread makes a most tasty sandwich filling.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Let your standard be high—and though you may not reach it, you can hardly fail to rise higher than if you aimed at some inferior excellence.

DISHES OF CORNMEAL.

Cornmeal is rich in fat and mineral matter, and being comparatively cheap when compared with other grain products is a food that can be used profitably in exchange with them for variety, as well as to cut down expenses.

Steamed Corn Bread.—There are few people who do not enjoy the nutty, brown loaf of steamed bread, and this may be varied by adding different fruits or nuts to it so that it never becomes monotonous. Take four cupfuls of cornmeal, two cupfuls of graham, a cupful of finely chopped suet, mix well, then add three-fourths of a cupful of dark molasses, two teaspoonfuls of salt, three cupfuls of sour milk and a teaspoonful of soda. The soda may be mixed with the molasses. Add a cupful of stewed prunes cut fine, or a cupful of raisins, and steam in well-greased molds for four hours.

Cornmeal Mush.—A good old New Englander will not ask for a more tasty dish than a good bowl of well-cooked cornmeal mush and rich milk, with perhaps a wisp of salt codfish for an appetizer. To prepare the mush add a cupful of cornmeal very slowly to a quart of boiling water and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Let it cook slowly for an hour. The mush that is left may be poured into a mold and fried in butter after cutting in neat slices.

Scrapple is made by putting the pork scrapple into the hot mush, stirring until well mixed, then pouring into a mold to cool. This is cut in slices and fried and is a great delicacy.

Fried mush with cheese sauce is another well-liked dish. Prepare the sauce by using a tablespoonful of bubbling hot butter stirred with three tablespoonfuls of flour, a half teaspoonful of salt, a half teaspoonful of mustard and two cupfuls of milk. When smooth and thick add a cupful and a half of finely grated cheese, a rich American cheese is best, and when melted serve on the mush.

Grated maple sugar or maple sirup is good on fried mush or small fresh fruits such as strawberries served with sugar and cream makes a most tasty dessert.

HORSES PIGS and CATTLE

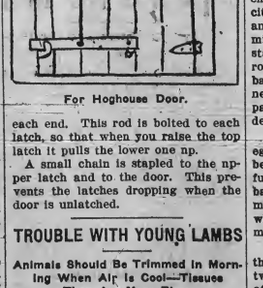
OUTBREAKS OF HOG CHOLERA

Increase Noted During Latter Part of August or Early in September—Feed Corn Sparingly.

It has been observed that an increase in the number of outbreaks of hog cholera occurs during the latter part of August or the first part of September, and that the outbreaks increase in numbers and violence until the latter part of October or November, when the disease gradually declines, writes H. K. Wright in National Stockman and Farmer.

Properly Fed on Balanced Ration.

The occurrence of cholera is dependent solely upon the hogs becoming infected with the specific cholera micro-organism. Practically all hogs are susceptible to the disease when fed balanced rations, but when improperly fed and allowed to become infested with parasites the chance of contracting cholera on exposure is greatly lessened. At this time new corn is beginning to be fed and care must be exercised or indigestion will result, thus lessening the vitality of the animals, and if exposed to cholera infection death should follow. New corn should be fed sparingly at first and the amount gradually increased. Never start by feeding it exclusively.



Should an outbreak of cholera occur, immediately isolate and quarantine the sick hogs. Notify your neighbors so that they may stay away from your hog lots and thus prevent spread of the infection. Get antihog cholera serum and inoculate all healthy hogs. Kill the sick hogs and burn the carcasses. No treatment can be relied upon to save one visibly sick.

DEVICE FOR FASTENING DOOR

Impossible for Hogs to Escape by Pushing on Bottom—Chain Holds Latches in Place.

Here is a very handy device for fastening doors where hogs are kept. It is impossible for them to break out by pushing on the bottom of the door.

The latches are made of wood and are bolted to the door. They are connected by an iron rod with eyes in each end. This rod is bolted to each latch, so that when you raise the top latch it pulls the lower one up.

For Hoghouse Door.

A small chain is stapled to the upper latch and to the door. This prevents the latches dropping when the door is unlatched.

TROUBLE WITH YOUNG LAMBS

Animals Should Be Trimmed In Morning When Air Is Cool—Tissues Then Are More Firm.

In castrating lambs, if the drawing ont of the cord should cause a rupture, simply replace the intestines and tie a twine securely around the scrotum as near the abdomen as possible. Lambs should be trimmed in the morning when the air is cool, as they bleed less, and as the tissues are more firm and rupture is not liable to occur. Rupture in castrating lambs is usually due to one of two causes; either the lamb is too young and the tissues not yet firm, or the lamb has been overheated and the tissues rendered too lax to stand the strain of pulling the cord.

Lambs No Longer Heard.

The bleating of lambs upon the hillsides is no longer heard in many parts of the country where such sounds used to be familiar, and yet both the wool and the carcass of a sheep bring good prices.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

When a man is his own enemy it's only because he's too much his own friend.—Oliver Twist.

There are certain polite forms and ceremonies which must be observed in civilized life, or mankind relapse into their original barbarism.

FOR THE TABLE.

In setting the table no matter how simple the equipment, there can be a daintiness and care in its arrangement which shows thought and love of the beautiful. No matter how poor one may be the air of neatness is always indicative of refinement. A simple centerpiece of green, a five-cent fern or a flower always adds beauty to the table. Then the conversation is most important; where there are children whose ideals must be formed, the table talk may be the means of shaping their entire lives. Petty gossip, criticism and time for general correction makes an otherwise pleasant meal most uncomfortable. Table manners should be taught to children, but example will do much, with an occasional kindly correction.

Come to the table in a bright and happy mood, keep the conversation in pleasant and instructive grooves. One of our great educators always had an atlas, an encyclopedia and a dictionary in the dining room to be consulted during the meal when it was necessary to use reference books. The children from that home went out with a broad and general education that could never have been acquired from books or college training. In the tender years of a child's life impressions may be made, facts learned without conscious effort on his part, that will remain in the memory as long as the mind lasts.

Wholesome food is one of the necessities of a well-balanced body, and wholesome thought is just as vital to a well-balanced mind. We believe these things and nod approval when they are spoken or written, but we get nowhere unless we ourselves work to accomplish results. We often hear remarks made of certain families of children, "they are so well-mannered, they were just born that way." The fact is, if those lives were investigated, that the parents have spared no pains or time, no comfort, to teach and train them. This training is not always seen, but it must be given to get good results.

GOOD FOREIGN CAKES.

These cakes are good to keep and will be appetizing as long as they last.

Lebkuchen.—Boil a pint of honey and a cupful of sugar together, cool and add a half cupful of flour. Beat three eggs slightly, add a cupful of brown sugar and stir twenty minutes. Add a fourth of a teaspoonful of cloves, the same of cinnamon, a teaspoonful of soda, the grated rind of a lemon and orange, a half pound of chopped almonds, four ounces of sliced citron, a half teaspoonful of nutmeg and two and a half cupfuls of flour; mix all ingredients together and let stand over night, well covered, after rolling out in the form it is to be baked. An extra cupful of flour will need to be added as it is ready for the pan. Frost when baked with powdered sugar and water.

Kisses.—Beat the whites of five eggs until stiff, and a pound of sugar, beat half an hour and add a teaspoonful of vanilla. Drop on a tin and bake in a moderate oven. These cakes may be slit on the side and filled with whipped cream or any desired filling, making a most dainty cake.

Blitz-Kuchen.—Take four egg yolks, three ounces of sugar; mix together for twenty minutes. Cream three ounces of butter and add it to the first mixture, then add three ounces of flour. Drop on a tin and spread a fourth of an inch thick, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and bake in a moderate oven.

Peppernuts.—Boil together a can of karo sirup and a cupful of sugar, add a half cupful of butter and a half cupful of lard; when melted add a teaspoonful of soda, then mix with four pounds of flour, three teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, two of cloves, and two of anise. Mix well and make into small balls and bake. They may be dipped in confectioners' sugar and water if desired.

A cake to be fine grained must be well mixed. The butter may be softened but not melted, as the melting of the butter spoils its texture and will spoil the grain of the cake.

Peace and War.

One Perennial Pleasure.

Everything in life grows monotonous except pay day.—Florida Times-Union.

Believing that the rise in the cost of news print and other paper is rapidly bringing this country to the point where the question of producing paper from crop waste and plants must be considered, Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, will have a series of conferences with government scientists to ascertain whether the time is ripe for the manufacture of paper out of cotton stalks. Senator Smith intends to confer with officials of the bureau of plant industry of the department of agriculture and with the bureau of standards regarding the situation.

Daniel Coleman, who was killed by lightning while standing in the door of his home, near Milford, was one of the odd characters of Bracken county. He was about 70 years of age, and had lived with his sister since his mother's death about fifteen years ago. He has owned 100 acres of good land. He has never allowed a plow to be stuck in it or a tree to be cut on it. He would not sign a paper connected with the settlement of either his father's or his mother's estate, and as far as he is concerned neither has been settled, although his father died nearly 20 years ago. He did not go to Milford often, although nearby, and when he did he had but little to do with anyone. It is said that he never worked a day in his life, and cared very little about what was going on anywhere. — Falmouth Outlook.

The President is wise in abandoning the purpose to make a campaign tour of the country, if at any time he has entertained it. There are many good reasons against it, chief of which is that, whilst propriety would seem to interdict, no exigency requires it. The precedents are dead against it. The splendid speeches of Stephen A. Douglas in 1860 did not make him votes and the swing around the circle of Jas. G. Blaine in 1884 lost him the election. Mr. Hughes is weaker today than he was when he set out upon his scolding crusade and he will lengthen the distance between himself and the White House every mile he travels. He has said never a word to help the Republicans, or hurt the Democrats. He has shown the lawyer's lack of political instinct at the same time that he has lowered his dignity and lessened his reputation. Mr. Wilson can afford to give him all the rope he will take. He should pay no attention to his cackle—not even mention his name. The record is already made up. The Administration must stand or fall by it. The President has attorneys enough to talk for him and need not stoop to plead his own cause. Let him from the portico of Shadow Lawn give the country a frank, statesmanlike exposition of his hopes and aims, leaving the past to speak for itself, and thereupon stand pat with the calm assurance of the believing Christian who holds four aces and a razor!—C-J.

When to Cut Tobacco.

Forty-nine years ago I began growing tobacco. A few years later I decided that there were certain days better than others on which to cut tobacco for it to cure up nicely and have a rich, "waxy" and heavy body. To find out the way to tell these dates, and to tell them ahead has been a hard job, and I was finally successful.

To explain, let me say that tobacco has an oily substance, which is its natural possession. It has a sap water like other vegetation. When the sap rises it runs the oil out thru the pores of the leaves, on the principle that oil and water won't mix, and the oil being the lighter, is pushed out by the sap. Tobacco cut in this State will be light and "chaffy." You see there is nothing but sap in the tobacco, and when cured this sap is gone. It evaporates and leaves the tobacco light and worthless. But cut tobacco when the sap is down and the oil has full sway, you can cure it up nicely and with a heavy body; it will be rich and "waxy."

This happens because the tobacco is full of oil, instead of sap, and the oil can't evaporate and remains in the tobacco to make it rich and heavy. It has been my experience that we must cut tobacco when there is oil in it if we expect to have oil in it when cured. For instance, you have experienced cutting one week and having excellent luck, and then cut a few days later, probably off the same piece of ground and with riper tobacco, and have no luck at all.

I shall be pleased to answer any correspondence from tobacco growers who may want to write me, provided postage is sent for reply.—D. V. Davis, Fork, N. C., in Farmer's Home Journal.

Letting Road Contracts.

At Kenton-co. Commissioners' meeting Thursday, in Covington, Claud Harris was granted the contract for rebuilding a section of the Madison pike. His bid was $23,000. About five miles of the pike will be reconstructed, two and a half miles running from Independence toward Covington, and about the same distance running from Covington toward Independence. The Covington section will be divided into three sections and each section will be made of different material. This is done to determine which material is the best for use in the making of roads. The Independence section will be made into a macadam road.

A Common Mistake.

One of the most common mistakes in the feeding of dairy cows on the farm is that the good cows are not given a sufficient quantity of feed above that required for their physical maintenance to obtain the maximum quantity of milk they are capable of producing. Successful feeding of dairy cows involves the providing of an abundant supply of palatable nutritious feed at a maximum cost and feeding in such a way as to receive the largest milk production from the feed consumed. Feeding for profit is defined as liberal feeding, or feeding to the full capacity of the cow.

Managers Offer to Leave Question of $100,000,000 Wage Demands to an Impartial Federal Tribunal to Prevent Disaster of a Nation-wide Strike.

New York.—What is probably the most elaborate study of wages ever made in any industry has just been completed by the National Conference Committee of the railways.

For six months railway accountants throughout the country have been engaged in collecting the payroll records to show the actual wage payments to every individual employe among the 300,000 engineers, conductors, firemen and brakemen now voting on a national strike for a new wage scale.

That these employes are one of the highest paid groups of workers in any industry is disclosed by the summary made public today by the railroad managers.

The average yearly wage payments to all Southern train employes (including those who worked only part of the year), as shown by the 1915 payrolls, were:

	Passenger.	Freight.	Yard.
Engineers	$3,144	$1,712	$1,313
Conductors	1,723	1,438	1,157
Firemen	1,096	865	633
Brakemen	1,013	845	863

Three-quarters of these men (including those who put in a full year's service), earned these wages:

Engineers (road), $1,455 to $3,983; (yard), $1,156 to $2,424.

Conductors (road), $1,353 to $2,896; (yard), $1,055 to $1,749.

Firemen (road), $649 to $1,652; (yard), $406 to $1,302.

Brakemen (road), $755 to $1,854; (yard), $754 to $1,405.

For the whole country the average wages of three-quarters of the employes were:

	Passenger.	Freight.	Yard.
Engineers	$2,067	$1,892	$1,526
Conductors	1,860	1,719	1,310
Firemen	1,203	1,117	824
Brakemen	1,095	1,013	1,076

The railroads have considered every man whose name appears on the January and December payrolls as an employe for a year, no matter how little service he performed in the other ten months. It is pointed out by the managers that these averages are, in consequence, an understatement of the earning power of these employes.

An Appeal to the Public.

The National Conference Committee, in making these wage figures public, says:

"Do you believe in arbitration or industrial warfare?

"The train employes on all the railroads are voting whether they will give their leaders authority to tie up the commerce of the country to enforce their demands for a $100,000,000 wage increase.

"The railroads are in the public service—your service. This army of employees is in the public service—your service.

"You pay for rail transportation $3,000,000,000 a year, and 44 cents out of every dollar from you goes to the employes.

"A $100,000,000 wage increase for men in freight and yard service (less than one-fifth of all employes) is equal to a 5 per cent advance in all freight rates.

"The managers of the railroads, as trustees for the public, have no right to place this burden on the cost of transportation to you without a clear mandate from a public tribunal speaking for you.

"The railroads have proposed the settlement of this controversy either under the existing national arbitration law, or by reference to the Interstate Commerce Commission This offer has been refused by the employes' representatives.

"Shall a nation wide strike or an investigation under the government determine this issue?"

TRAINMEN'S HIGH WAGES.

When I note from the reports made to the Interstate Commerce Commission that these men receive average yearly wages 50 per cent higher than those of all other railway employes, and practically double those of the average American wage-worker, it occurs to me that they at least have less cause for complaint than most others. When I consider that the average locomotive engineer has an income of over $2,000 a year, and that most of the engineers who have been long in service make from $2,000 to $3,600 a year, and when I compare their hours, labor and responsibilities with those of the average small merchant, carpenter or doctor, whose income is far less, it seems that in all [illegible] are well paid.—[illegible], Chicago Mercantile.

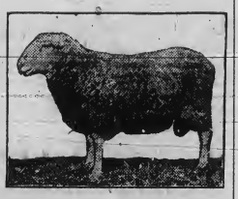
QUICK PASTURES FOR SHEEP

Rye, Wheat, Barley, Oats, etc., Are All Excellent—Cowpea Is Favorite Among Legumes.

For a quick-growing sheep pasture some of the grain plants are excellent. Rye, wheat, barley, oats, etc., are all used. Some of the peas and other legumes are often used, the common cowpea being a general favorite for this purpose. Sorghums are a big help when sown in the spring to furnish sheep pasture during the dry deather of midsummer, when the meadow grasses are brown and the bluegrass is apparently dead.

There is a great list of grasses that may be used in establishing a temporary sheep pasture. When a pasture is needed in a short time it is necessary to pick a grass that will establish itself at once and begin furnishing forage. Timothy is fairly satisfactory and so are all the clovers. Take timothy and red clover as a combination to be sown early in the spring, with a nurse crop of oats and you have a mixture that is hard to beat. Cowpeas sown in the corn will make a fine late pasture for sheep and lambs.



Alfalfa has been recommended as a sheep pasture. It has points in its favor, but these are more than offset by its disadvantages. It will grow quickly and furnish a vast amount of grazing, but unless it is well mixed with other grasses its value is doubtful for this reason: It is likely to cause bloating. This, with the harm to the alfalfa that will be caused by the characteristic close grazing of the sheep makes it a poor plant for a sheep pasture.

SHEEP FLOCK IS PROFITABLE

Particularly Adapted to Rougher and Hilly Regions Where Much Land Is Going to Waste.

When you take into consideration the prices that wool and mutton are bringing at the present time it is easy to see how any farm can support a flock of sheep and make a good profit therefrom. In fact, it is hard to see how any farm in the rougher and more hilly regions, where there is a great deal of waste land, can afford to do without sheep.

make a big return on his investment if he lives in one of those regions where the dog nuisance is more or less under control.

A few years ago a good many sheep farmers were holding their lambs over the first winter instead of selling them in the fall for the holiday and winter markets. The demands of the lamb market during the last year have been such to hurry the youngsters into the markets as soon as they would weigh from 55 to 60 pounds. There is every sign that the lamb markets of this season will be fully as active as those of last fall and winter.

MAKING HOG CHOLERA SERUM

Object of Treatment Is to Stimulate Production of Antibodies in Animal's System.

Serum is blood taken from a healthy hog which has received special treatments consisting of injecting large quantities of virus or hog cholera blood directly into its veins or circulation.

The object of this treatment is to stimulate the production of antibodies or immune bodies. A hog that is made immune to hog cholera by the use of serum has a sufficient quantity of antibodies to protect itself, but has not enough to protect others, consequently, we must create an excess of antibodies in its system, which is done as described above.

The blood taken from a hog thus prepared with the addition of a very small amount of preservatives constitutes hog cholera serum as placed on the market today.

ALFALFA FAVORED FOR SHEEP

Greater Gains Made in Test With Western Range Animals Than Those Fed Mixed Hay.

Greater gains are made by sheep fed on alfalfa than on any other hay. In a test where four lots of western range sheep were fed for 126 days on wheat screenings and different kinds of roughness, those receiving alfalfa gained .29 pound daily per head, while those receiving the mixed hay gained but .12 pound.

CHANGING MANKIND.

It would be a glorious privilege to live for 25 years to see what is to become of this old world. There is going to be a great change in that time. The crushing materialism that has become so topheavy is going to dwindle away. It will not wholly disappear, but it will not rule the hearts and minds of people as it is doing now. The spirit of a nobler manhood is slowly possessing the heart of humanity. Mankind has been passing through a fearful ordeal, and that is helping on the evolution of the spirit, which is the sole purpose of God's economy today. Men will think in better and truer lives than they do today. Already the noble deed is gaining its rightful pre-eminence. It is getting more and more unpopular to do anything low and mean. The man who does his work well and leads a clean life is the apostle of tomorrow, and their number is increasing fast, says Ohio State Journal. It is all working out Christ's mission on the earth, and whoever takes no lot or part in it doesn't belong to the mission.

Many queer things have been discovered by the drill since and before Colonel Drake discovered that oil could be obtained by the artesian process, but the most unique one is that recently struck in the Philippines. It is located in the town of San Fernando, on the island of Ticao. At the depth of 405 feet an enormous vein of water was struck, with such a gas pressure that the volume was thrown 80 feet in the air. It was only by exerting every possible effort that a small flood was averted, says Oil City Derrick. The flow was finally checked, however, and the water directed out and downward through two small pipes, through which it continues to rush with undiminished force. Samples of the water taken show that it is heavily charged with carbonic acid gas and appears and tastes like ordinary soda water, but analysis is not yet completed. The man in charge of the drilling, who has had 40 years' experience in drilling artesian wells in many parts of the world, maintains that he has never before seen or heard of the equal of the Ticao island phenomenon.

One of the latest improvements in hospital equipment is the invention of a shadowless light for the operating table. This has been secured by a fixture containing eight electric lights placed so that their rays meet at an angle of 45 degrees. This makes better vision possible in the examination of wounds, and also eliminates the possibility of a delicate operation being hindered by the shadows of a surgeon's hands, as is frequently the case with lights ordinarily placed. It is claimed that the shadowless light might lessen the number of accidents in many industrial establishments.

The railways of the United States are growing safer. A report from the interstate commerce commission indicates that during July, August and September of last year—the latest quarter for which complete figures are available—fewer people lost their lives on American railroads than in any similar period since the commission was created.

INDUSTRIES MUST BE EDUCATED FOR WAR

Howard E. Coffin Proposes Plan By Which Suplies Can Be Assured.

By David Tunnecliffe.

The mobilization of the industries of the country so that in the event of trouble they might immediately begin to deliver munitions of war, might properly be described as the education of the industries. Howard E Coffin of the naval consulting board has devised a plan by which the education of the industries may be carried on.

But before explaining the system Mr. Coffin first disposed of the theory of government plants for munitions of war. "Whatever our individual views may be upon government owned plants," he said, 'in the last equation, no government in the world can afford to own all the plants for the production of army and navy materials in sufficient quantities to carry any army through a modern war. In the last analysis it must be the private plants upon which we must depend to furnish the materials needed."

In England with her great and powerful allies in the field, has 80 per cent, or as some claim even 90 per cent of her industries working to supply the needs of her armies, than the accuracy of Mr. Coffin's statement is beyond question, and the early education of the industrial army is fully as important as the raising of the fighting army.

"We must place drawings, instructions, and gauges in the hands of the skilled workmen of the manufacturing plants throughout this country, and do it in time of peace or they will never be able to meet our needs in the munitions of war in time of emergency," declared Mr. Coffin. "We must place small educational orders with these various factories, together with the blue prints, jigs and gauges, if we are to enable them to get such a general practical working knowledge of what is required that in time of stress they may be enabled to jump in quickly and pick up the work without fatal delay.

"As an illustration of what it means not to be prepared to handle these things, I want to tell you that many concerns in our country taking orders from foreign governments—orders placed a year and a half ago—have scarcely done anything in the way of quantity delivery. Heavy shipments have been made to European powers, but the great mass of such shipments has been of stuff which is not strictly munitions of war in the popular conception of the term, but materials like barbed wire or other things of such kind as we were pretty well able to supply off the shelf. When it has come to the production of shells and munitions of war and rifles, many of these concerns are way behind what they expected they would be able to do. This applies also to many of our arms manufacturers, whom some of our lovely optimistic people would say could manufacture in a week enough arms to supply an army. I know one concern in Cleveland which took a big shell order. They promised deliveries of something like 1,500 a day at a certain date. The job looked very easy, but it took them 4 months beyond the promised date to get even 200 shells a day through the plant.

"There is one body of men in the United States who have the ability thru their training and through the fact that they have been instrumental in the development of all American industries, qualified to render the most efficient service to the army and navy. I refer to our engineers The officers of the army and navy are the equal in personnel of the officers of any similar position in the world. Many of us think they are the superiors. They have been educated at West Point and Annapolis. They have lived with these problems of naval warfare and land warfare, and they have studied fighting and all the rules of strategy and are masters in their line. But, generally speaking, these men have not had the hard knocks. In the commercial end and in that manufacture of goods in quantity which will best fit them to go out and institute a general mobilization of the industrial resources of this country. They cannot be expected to do that, but they are specialists in their own line. We, engineers and manufacturers, do not know anything about the fighting end of the business. We could not tell these gentlemen how they should handle their troops or how they should handle their fleet, but we do not know the industrial game, and when the time comes, all theory aside as to what might be done or ought to be done, the people in this country who will have to bear the brunt of war will be the manufacturers and engineers, who will have to organize almost to a man in support of the forces doing the actual fighting.

"In the working out of this plan in a concrete way we have as the five national Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Mining Engineers and American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Institute of Electric Engineers, and the American Chemical Society, a group of 36,000 men, representing every phase of industrial life in this country. It is this group of men already organized, and working in cooperation with the officers of the navy and army, who will be able to do the industrial organization work which must be done before we can be truly prepared. The only way to make our resources available—the only way to organize the industries of the United States for national service—is to do it quietly and efficiently in time of peace. We cannot do it at the last minute when we are trying to turn a back somersault because there has been a declaration of war the night before. We have had a pretty fair lesson in the Spanish-American war, and we will probably have another lesson in the Mexican affair before we are thru with it, and that is a good lesson, and wake us all up to what war in 1916 means.

"That these manufacturers and engineers will do this work there is not the slightest doubt in the world. They will do it; not because they hope for material advantage to accrue to them or to the concerns which they control—and many of them are the leading business men of the country—but they will do it, if you please, upon the same basis, that we all carry fire insurance. I refuse to believe that patriotism in any less of a vital influence in America—but put this upon the cold-blooded basis of insurance if you like. I believe that there are thousands of concerns in this country who have never had one dollar's worth of government business, and who would not consider taking one dollar's worth of government business, for war materials in time of peace. It would conflict with their regular lines of work, and their regular lines of work, and they are rushed to death with business in these regular lines. My own concern, two or three years, has had subdealers' names on the books, who have scarcely ever seen one of our motor cars which they themselves have owned. Unfortunately, this is not a mere figure of speech, so why should we ask for government business? We are willing, however, to take a standing order for a certain small number of shells or any other material of that character which our equipment is fitted to produce and deliver that material each year under government inspection. Goods produced under this educational system could be sent in to depots which preferably should be located in the middle West. This would be merely on the basis of organization and education, to fit the factories to swing in on this complicated new work if it should ever be necessary.

"By taking a small order, say ever for ten shells of one size, we shall have broken in every department of our works as to the handling of that particular munition. Our purchasing department will learn stores and how to buy materials. Our factory will learn how to machine, how to best treat, how to test and inspect the government standards. The engineering department will have in its files up-to-date drawings and specifications for quick use. We have enough manufacturing equipment in this country so that we can concentrate and specialize a concern on some one thing and as Gentlemen, in case of war this is the particular thing we are going to call upon you for in such and such quantity," and if Congress will give to our navy and war departments power to exercise judgment in placing these small educational orders throughout the country, it will have done as much to fit this country to defend itself as through appropriating money for a tremendous increase in army and navy. Army and navy will be taken care of as a matter of course. These other things cannot be handled except through the closest kind of cooperation between a nationally organized industry and the various departments of the government."

NEWS FROM CARROLL COUNTY

The Carrollton and Milton turnpike was designated as the interstate-county-seat road 10 miles to Madison, Ind., and that application be made for State aid.

The regular August term of the Carroll circuit court begins next Monday. There are 11 equity and four ordinary appearances and 29 equity and 17 ordinary continuances on the docket. There are 54 Commonwealth's cases.

After a four days' session the Sanders Fair closed the most successful meet on the record of the books—and everybody enjoyed it. At no time has a better class of horses been on exhibition nor has there been a finer field of show horses, saddlers and combined.

A PLEASANT VISIT

To the Scenes of His Childhood After an Absence of a Quarter of a Century.

C. C Roberts visited Varona and neighborhood last week. It was there where he cavoited so merrily about fifty years ago, at which time he knew every man, woman and child, black or white and every cat and dog, white, black and and spotted, bob-tailed or otherwise; but not so now. The scenery and the people there then have changed so much since he cast his lot in Burlington about a quarter of a century ago, that when he returns to Verona now he feels like a stranger among strangers in a strange land, so few of his old associates being there to welcome him back. But Lewis Jenkins and Charlie Lewis are on top of the sod to call to his memory the hilarity they use to indulge in on the knobs of Mudlick creek and in the sacred precincts of Bullock Pen, while Dr. Fimmell in one other reminder of thrilling by-gones. He found that the town of Verona has advanced from a struggling and almost obscure cross-roads village to a country town of considerable pretentions, the citizens of which are on the jump developing their educational and commercial interests to keep in the procession of progress. The fact is that while in many respects Mr. Roberts' visit to his old home was very pleasant, but so many of his old friends and associates have taken their departure that he lay awake o' nights calling them to memory and living over with them in memory the past.

THE WASTE IN PAPER.

How Some Publications Are Increasing the Growing Famine.

I heard William Singerly, who who owned a mill say that it required only 22 hours to convert a standing tree into a printed copy of his newspaper.

They have shortened the time since then, but the trick is to get the trees with which to make the paper. A tree should not be less than 70 years old. Young fiber is not good.

Thousands of acres of trees are cut ever year to produce the world's paper. I know of no other commoaity of equal worth which is wasted so shamefully.

Philadelphia newspapers have been printing at least 75,000 more copies every week when they have sold. Newsdealers and newsboys order that many extra copies, all of which were returned, and so became a sheer loss to the publisher

Together the five morning and three evening newspapers in Philadelphia sell more than 1,250,000 copies every week.

Those figures will give you an idea of the saving which will come with the reduction in size which the publishers have now agreed upon.

Were each paper to print an average of one page less eash day an economy of 1,250,000 pages would result. Add to that the sensible policy of cutting off entirely the unsold copies and the result will help immediately to relieve the paper famine.

Maybe you have forgotten what William L. Elkins told Joseph B McCall, President of the Philadelphia Electric Company. "Give the public something for nothing and you will have to give a hell of a lot of it."

That is exactly how it has been with the free return of insold newspapers.

What other manufacturers are so free with their output? Fancy a steel mill regularly throwing away 10 per cent of its finished steel.

What shoe factory would permit a store to turn back a tenth of its purchases, provided every shoe so returned would have to be thrown upon the scrap heap?

A returned newspaper is worthless to the publisher. A returned magazine has no value to the publisher. No other article which post an equal sum to produce sell for so small a price as the newspaper.

To-day Bobinson Cruso and his man Friday could have a paper for the cost of a cigarette.

Moved to Petersburg.

Mr. and Mrs R. H. Carter moved to Petersburg the latter part of last week, where Mr. Carter has been employed as principal of the school. During their sojourn here Mr. and Mrs Carter have made many friends who were sorry to see them take their departure for their new home, and all join in wishing them health and success at all times in the future.

Investigating Road Machinery.

Esq. R H. Tanner, County Road Engineer Charles Goodridge and County Attorney N. E Riddell were in Lexington last Friday inspecting road machinery that is being used in the construction of Fayette county roads. The fiscal court of this county contemplates buying some road machinery, hence their tour of inspection.

TO DIVIDE FLORIDA.

Agitation Started To Make Two States Out of One.

Because of differences of climate and the character of the people between North and South Florida, agitation has been started to divide the state by a line running along the 29th parallel. Another suggested division line is the Suwanee River, some twenty-five miles north of the 29th parallel. The northern portion would contain about 27,000 square miles, a little larger than West Virginia and larger than Vermont, New Hampshire and New Jersey together. South of the 29th parallel there is something like 41,000 square miles, slightly more than Ohio and a little less than Tennessee.

It has been proposed to name the new state, the northern half of Florida, Jefferson, in honor of Thomas Jefferson, while the south half would retain the name of Florida.

The suggestion for the division of the state into two states was made as early as 1914, but the matter was dropped. Recently the state has been thrown into a turmoil over the selection of a Democratic candidate for Governor. The northern part of the state is pulling in one direction and the other part in another. The northern part of the state is inclined to prohibition, while the southern part with Key West and Tampa, would apparently prefer to retain the old order of things.

While no formal campaign has been launched looking to creating sentiment for a division of the state, the prospects are that one will be under way before many months.

Learning to Smoke.

The moderate indulgence in alcoholics is pleasant to taste and agreeable in its effects from the very first glass, so that it is easy for a thoughtless youth without experience or opportunity for observation to be drawn on step by step, until he finds retreat to be so difficult as to be practically almost impossible.

But it is not so with the tobacco habit. At the very first the use of tobacco is a dreadful disgust. It is even worse than this. It inflicts upon its future victim a nausea, a retching, a vomiting, a headache, to which the horrors of sea-sickness are not to be compared. There is the blue upper lip, the livid, ghastly hue of the face, like that of a dead fish, the limbs limp and powerless, the muscles pulpy and flacid a violent and painful vomiting, every symptom of death, which it would soon be in reality if the unutterable horror of the suffering did not compel the poor fool to postpone the attempt to become a man in that way. Here endeth the first lesson. The silly boy resolves always that he will never touch tobacco again, and holds to his purpose and he has entirely recovered from the effects of his first lesson. He then sees other youngsters like himself who succeeded in conquering their disgust at tobacco. They have done it. Why not he? They laugh at him as white-livered; they assure him that the worst of it will be over in a few days or week, at most. They strut thru the street or in public places so grandly; they have such a manly way with them; there is such a grace in their style holding the cigar between finger and thumb, and striking off the ashes with the little finger. When they put the cigar in their mouth again, it is with such a flourish, and heads are thrown back, a little one side, with so much selfsciousness, their eyes at the same cast right and left, to see who observes and admires them! Ah! this is quite irresistable, and our poor, foolish youngster goes off behind the barn, or some other out-of-the-way place, and takes the second lesson. All this is carefully concealed from the parents, so tobacco-pupil can go to bed before sup per under the pretense of headache. Pretense? It is no sham, he has a racking splitting headache, with the return of dreadful nausea. In a few more weeks more or less, our youngster has learned to smoke or chew, as the case may be.—Ex.

Method of Locating Guns.

Science has discovered that gunfire affects the earth's surface much as an earthquake, so it is not surprising to learn that guns are being located by the seismograph—the delicate little instrument which records terrestrial tremors. An Austrian authority on the subject of earthquake disturbances announces that the seismo graph can record the position of hostile artillery as well as the caliber of the guns.

In a fairly recent engagement between Italian and Austrian troops on the Isonzo, the tremors induced by the heavy cannonade were duly registered by the apparatus, and the operator was able to detect, by means of diagrams of artificial movements of the ground, the difference between the shocks produced by the fall of projectiles and those caused by the recoil of the guns. Moreover, the form of the tracings revealed to the practised eye the number as well as the caliber of the latter.—Popular Science Monthly.

A Vacation Meditation.

I sit on this bank and watch the wind as it waves and sways the multitude of chestnut, birch and maple trees, closely huddled together on the far hillside before my vision. It is a peaceful sight, and the voices of the various trees are peaceful too; I came here with the desire for harmony and peace within my mind and heart, and a thought comes to me as I look and listen. People irritate and rasp and strain us. Why? Because we do not give them room. What do you mean? Just this. These trees look crowded, but as the wind brings its touch to bother boisterous, or tender, each tree bends and gives a place to the next one, and this with no conflict, but in most perfect harmony, the birches as twinkling and sparkling and chatty as cheerful neighbors, the chestnuts bend one way and then the other, more ponderously, swaying only from the hips, and give sage advice to their companions on either side, but their tall friends listen and give them ample room and time, though they are slower of speech than the swift tongued birches. I have my lesson Give others room for their vagaries, their hobbies, their eccentricities, their irritating ways, if need be, even for their irritating speech, but don't try to force them into your sphere of thought or life. Each must keep his circle a perfect one, and see that it does not chafe another's, otherwise will come the friction, and thunder and lightning will be the inevitable result; and few enjoy thunder showers. Yes, these trees are bewitchingly neighborly and peaceful. Make the space within your own circle an oasis, but do not try to compel others to adopt your methods of irrigation.—Louise W. Caldwell

Arthur Goforth, of Shaker Bend neighborhood, made a high dive from the Brooklyn bridge into the Kentucky river, last Saturday, the dive being witnessed by a number of residents there. Mr Goforth is an accomplished swimmer and diver and a young man who has made some sensational dives before, but none quite so high as this. It is fifty feet from the bridge to the water.—Wilmore Enterprise.

Middlesboro officials are narrowing the path for the liquor men. Not only have the city commissioners practically made it impossible to conduct soft drink stands by recent legislation, they go farther by requiring a license fee of $500 for soliciting orders or distributing order blanks for mail order liquor houses, and providing a fine of $10 for each order solicited in violation of same.—Pineville Sun.

Pendleton county will have the finest tobacco crop she has had in many years. During the past two weeks the crop has made the most remarkable growth ever known. Many crops have grown so large it is almost impossible to get thru to sucker it. Cutting began this week, and will continue right along. The tobacco is ripening nice and regular, and this denotes the fact that it will cure with a good color.—Falmouth Outlook.

S. V Robinson, of the Friendship section of the county, was in the city, yesterday, and stated to the Leader representative that he has a bird dog that went to the tobacco patch with him every morning, and that she would worm tobacco almost as good as a man. She looks around on the plant until she finds the worm, and with her teeth roots it up carefully and then kills it and eats it. She keeps this up throughout the day, or as long as Mr. Robinson stays in the patch, and Mr. Robinson says that money cannot buy her.—Princeton Leader.

Sunday afternoon a hailstorm swept over a narrow strip of the county between here and Sparta and also over a part of the lower end of the county. Some tobacco was damaged and the hail totally destroyed two acres of the weed for Newt Furnish, who resides on the Dr. S B. Robinson farm between here and Sparta. During the same storm period lightning struck and instantly killed a horse belonging to Miss Sally Furnish in the same neighborhood.—Warsaw Independent

Oil has been discovered on the farm of Mrs Gadby in Metcalfe county, a few miles from Sulphur Well. The production is seven barrels per day. This is the first oil discovery in Metcalfe county that has been reported to the Times during the present oil revival. If oil should be discovered in abundance up there it would mean a great thing for the county of Metcalfe, and the county would come by leaps and bounds, and we would like to see this happen to her. This well is a flowing well and oil was found only two feet below sand.—Glasgow Times

B. D. Hardesty, who resides on the Shakertown pike, was very dangerously gored by a vicious bull last week. He was attempting to drive the animal into a barn when the brute turned suddenly and gored Mr. Hardesty, tearing the abdomen open. He was quickly brought to the Danville hospital, where his wounds were dressed. It was at first thought there was no chance for his recovery, but the attending physicians are now more hopeful. Mr. Hardesty's many friends in this community were greatly shocked and grieved to hear of his misfortune.—Richmond Climax-Madisonian.

On Sunday the 11-year-old son of Richard Hicks, who resides near High Bridge, on Kentucky River, was bitten on the ankle by a copperhead snake. The reptile planted its fangs so deeply in the boy's flesh that it was dragged fully twenty feet before it released its hold. Two physicians were summoned, who worked with the lad for several hours, and it is thought now that he will recover. The snake was killed and it measured three feet. There are an unusual number of copperhead snakes along the river this year, and it is supposed that they are brought from the mountains by the large amount of driftwood that has flooded down the stream on the high water caused by the frequent rains of the past summer.—Harrodsburg Herald.

Andy Furmall, of the Lamb Fountain Run country, died Wednesday of last week, aged 99 years one month and 11 days.

Mr. Furmall is said to have been as clever and honorable a man as ever lived in his section. Naturally he was "old fashioned" and lived in "the good old way." He raised and produced almost everything consumed on the farm, only purchasing "store things" when it could not be avoided. One strict rule of his was never to go in debt under any circumstances, even for a day. He was a great fisherman and up to almost the last was in the habit of walking four or five miles to the river and fishing, almost always going alone. He would plant his trot line, tie his canoe to a bush and curl up in the boat and go to sleep where "no snakes could reach him." After the turn of the night he would wake up, try out his line, take the fish off and go to sleep again. He was loved and revered by all who knew him, everybody calling him familiarly "Uncle Andy." He lived in an age passed, but was cheerful and enjoyed the world in which he lived until about two weeks before his death, when he was taken ill.—Glasgow Republican.

CHALMERS MOTOR CO. Detroit, Mich. U.S.A.
Quality First

A LITTLE MORE QUALITY ALWAYS PAYS

A friend of mine bought a lawn mower. I forget what he paid, but it was the cheapest he could find.

He cut his lawn twice, then took the lawn mower to the repair shop.

Every time he finished mowing the grass the cheap machine had to go back to the repair shop to be sharpened or tuned.

"That's the most expensive lawn mower I ever owned" he told me one day.

He had learned the lesson I've been trying to teach people about motor cars. And that lesson is—the cheapest car is often the most expensive. It pays enormously to pay a little more.

By paying $1090 for a Chalmers, for example, you get a five-year car. A car that will do everything you expect of it for at least five years.

And at the end of that time it will be in fair condition.

The motor—it's the famous 3400 r.p.m. It will never worry you. Never cause you to lose your temper.

For it has been tested in the hands of 30,000 owners and found 99.21 percent perfect.

Caution: Don't take the cheap-lawn-mower attitude in buying motor cars.

To Friends:

Ohio has been a free road State for many years, had occasion to go through Hamilton, Montgomery and a part of Green county, Ohio. Traveled over about eighty miles of some of the main pikes around and between Dayton and Springfield, on different pikes. Half did not look any better than our Belleview pike. There was a part of the pike that was impassable and had to go off to the side to get around it. At this place there was four holes about six feet long and looked to be 12 or 14 inches deep, tapering up to the surface of the pike. There was mud holes now and then as we usually see in pikes. Not a pike did I go over that looked any better than our Burlington and Florence pike before it was repaired. The gentleman I was with who knew the roads well, whenever he would come to some cross roads would say we will not go out that way the pike is so bad we can't get through. Then looking out from the auto I could see pikes that looked very much like rough, mud roads. Then I passed through two ancient looking covered bridges that looked very much like those on the Petersburg pike, only about three times as large.

Now the counties mentioned above pay about three times our tax and many times our bond issue with railroads, traction lines manufacturing establishments and other business that draws in a heavy tax, and yet I failed to see a pike that looked any thing like the ones that was pictured to you while they were clamoring for a bond.

Now why were their pikes in such a condition under such a heavy tax? Oh it may be the farmers wanted too much for their rock but more than likely a heavy increase in office salaries caused a deficiency in the road bonds.

J. E HALL

P. S—Outside the mission I was on I enjoyed the home looking pikes and bridges, therefore have not spoken to condemn them neither at home or abroad.

Hunting Melons.

Geo. C Goode, of Covington, passed thru Burlington, Sunday, in his big touring car with a trailer attached. He was going towards Belleview, presumably headed for the melon fields in that locality to load the car and the trailer with melons.

A Birthday Celebration.

About forty friends and relatives assembled at James Kelly's home out on the Belleview pike, last Sunday, to celebrate Mrs. Kelly's birthday. A sumptuous dinner was served and the day was spent in a most delightful manner.

Enlarged the Culvert.

The culvert on the Florence pike near W. L. Kirkpatrick's gate was taken out last week and the passage for water enlarged several times, and the probability is it will not clog again.

"GOVENORS" AND MILITARY DAY

EXPORTS OF TOBACCO

During Month of June Were Large—Fiscal Year Record Shows Good Gains.

The export trade of the United States in leaf tobacco and its manufactured products shows no signs of being seriously handicapped by the European war. In fact, if anything, the war has served to increase the demand for American made tobacco products and made necessary the drawing upon our supply of unmanufactured leaf more freely by foreign manufacturers. For the month of June, 1916, the only branches of the trade to show decreased shipments in comparison with the corresponding month last year are plug tobacco and smoking tobacco. For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916, increased exportation of leaf tobacco and stems and trimmings is recorded, while among the manufactured products shipments of cigarettes were considerably heavier than the preceding fiscal year. Values for both the month of June and the entire fiscal year show material gains.

The total volume of leaf tobacco exported from the U. S during the month of June, 1916, was 60,853,626 pounds, an increase over the corresponding month last year of 25,289,293 pounds, or 71 per cent. Increased shipments to France and the United Kingdom were mainly responsible.

CANADA THISTLE PEST

Prickly Plant Is Found in Almost Every Part of Country.

No Other Weed Has Ever Received So Much Unfavorable Attention. —Roots, Rather Than Tops, Must Be Destroyed.

In the states north of the Ohio river, probably no plant bears such a bad reputation as does the so-called Canada thistle. This marvelously prickly plant abounds in grain fields, pastures, and meadows throughout the central West, and is locally common in the northeastern states. It is found in parts of West Virginia, Kentucky, and Missouri, and of late years has been increasingly troublesome in the grain-growing sections of the Northwest. Canada thistle, or simply "thistle," has been condemned in the laws of 25 states, and at least one hundred local communities, no other three plants together having received so much unfavorable attention. Certainly no plant is more generally and heartily disliked, unless it be the sand bur of the southern coastal plain.

The cause of the remarkable vitality of Canada thistle and the point that distinguishes it from other prickly plants that are commonly mistaken for it is the long cordlike perennial root. This root penetrates the soil at a depth of eight to fifteen inches, or more, and gives rise at frequent intervals to leafy shoots. Thus it will often be found that an entire patch of thistles is attached to one root, and is in reality but one plant. The root is exceedingly hardy, and can live over winter or through a prolonged drought in a dormant condition. Pieces of the root that are broken off by a plow or cultivator and carried to other places will await a warm, moist period, and then begin to send up leafy shoots, thus establishing a new patch forthwith. If the leafy stems are cut down, others will be sent up to take their place, and this process may be repeated from two to eight times before the root becomes exhausted.

The point that must be kept in mind in fighting Canada thistles is that it is the roots, rather than the tops, that must be killed. Simply cutting off the tops a few times has much the same effect as pruning an apple tree. But if the tops are cut off deep and frequently, the root must eventually suffocate through lack of leaves.

BETTER PRICES FOR PRODUCE

Bringing About Improved Methods and Closer Attention to Scientific Growing of Crops.

Better prices for farm products are bringing about better methods and closer attention to the scientific growing and handling of crops and soils, according to A. N. Brown, editor of Fruit Belt, who declares that the first and fundamental step is to know soils and to know what elements of fertility should be supplied to aid growing crops. If care be not taken to keep the soil supplied by the addition of manures and fertilizers, the yields become smaller each year, but when the soils are managed properly the fertility is maintained and productiveness is increased.

BREEDING FOWLS ARE CHEAP

Possible to Purchase Birds Now for Half What They Will Cost Next Fall or Winter.

Many breeders are giving special value on their breeding birds at this time of year and if you are in need of a good cock bird, a hen or two or a pen for breeding next year or for exhibition this fall or winter you are overlooking a good bet if you do not buy now. The same quality along in December will cost you double.

SYSTEM OF FEEDING CALVES

Animals Should Not Be Fed Together Any More Than Bunch of Pigs—Fix Individual Stalls.

Skim milk calves ought not to be fed together, any more than a bunch of hogshead pigs, for some of the calves soon learn to gulp down their share of the feed, then crowd others away from theirs. Individual stalls or booths form the only correct system of feeding the skim milk calves, so that each one will be assured of his portion.

Horticultural Advice

RENEW OLD STRAWBERRY BED

Young Plants Should Be Given Chance to Develop—Heaviest Crop From First Fruiting.

(By E. P. SANDSTEN, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

As soon as the picking season is over, the strawberry bed should be mowed and raked off. The dead leaves around the old crowns should also be removed and burned. The rows are generally crowded with plants in the center, and these should be thinned out and the rest thoroughly cultivated with the hoe. Then the beds should be given a coating of well rotted barnyard manure worked into the ground, and a liberal supply of water applied.

In many cases where the rows are heavily matted and the young plants have taken root between the rows, it is advisable to plow up the center of the rows, leaving the younger plants to form the new row.

Wide Hedgerow System.

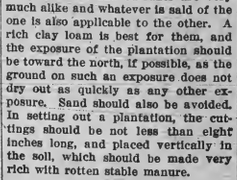
Strawberry plants produce the heaviest at the first season's fruiting and decline very rapidly after that time. For this reason, it is advisable to remove the old plants and give the younger ones a chance to develop. The old plants can easily be told from the young plants by the roots. Old plants have dark-colored roots, while young plants have light-colored. Also, the crowns of the old plants become black and elongated, while on the young plants the crowns are short and light-colored.

Good fruit growers will ordinarily not fruit the beds more than two seasons, it being cheaper and more profitable to set out a new bed. But where only limited ground is to be had, the renovating system above described can be utilized to advantage.

SOIL FOR THE BUSH FRUITS



Rich Clay Loam Recommended for Gooseberries and Currants—Sand Should Be Avoided.

Gooseberries and currants are very much alike and whatever is said of the one is also applicable to the other. A rich clay loam is best for them, and the exposure of the plantation should be toward the north, if possible, as the ground on such an exposure does not dry out as quickly as any other exposure. Sand should also be avoided. In setting out a plantation, the cuttings should be not less than eight inches long, and placed vertically in the soil, which should be made very rich with rotten stable manure.

in the ground with the large end projecting. Rocks are placed around it and it is provided with a cover. Several extensions are attached to the six-inch opening and the end permitted to project slightly from the ground. Rocks are also placed about this opening. The rabbit enters the trap at the small opening and is free to come and go from the burrow. By closing the small opening, the quarry may be taken out at the large opening.—Popular Mechanics Monthly.

FARM STOCK

SHADE IS GREAT NECESSITY

Astonishing to Note How Many Farmers Fail to Provide Shelter During Hot Summer Days.

The necessity for providing shades for hogs in summer is overlooked by the majority of farmers throughout the country. It is astonishing to note how many herds of hogs are compelled to lay in the sun and suffer during the summer days. If the herd has access to an orchard or wood lot they will not need artificial shade. However, if they are confined in open lots, they should have sunshades built to protect them. A cheap and efficient shade can be erected in a few hours, and at practically no cost, aside from the labor. A few posts, some old boards or saplings, and a straw or hay roof makes an ideal shade. It is preferable to one of boards, and the straw or hay roof is cooler than one of lumber.

In building sunshades it is better to build them at the highest point in the field, so that the hogs will get the full benefit of every breeze. Few farmers realize the great losses that are due directly to overheating, and such losses can be guarded against only by providing a retreat for the animals during the heat of the day. Days when the weather is extremely hot it is an excellent plan to sprinkle the soil under the shades with water. One barrel of water will help keep down the temperature during the middle of the day.

HACKNEY HORSE IS POPULAR

Breed Originated in England From Crossing Thoroughbred Stallions With Native Mares.

The English Hackney, a typical head of which is pictured herewith, is, perhaps the most popular of all the so-called heavy harness horses. The breed originated in England from crossing thoroughbred stallions on good native driving mares. The term Hackney is derived from hack, originally meaning any horse suitable for drawing carriages and similar vehicles with considerable speed. Speed development beyond a reasonable limit has not been emphasized in this breed, but great attention has been given to action and endurance.

In form this horse is rounder and smoother than the trotting horse, with less tendency to angularity. In height he stands from 14.2 to 15.3 hands. In movement he resembles the French and German coach horses. Knee action is unusually high. In motion, the foot describes a circle.

Hackney and Coach horses are chiefly used as park animals and for driving in boulevards and city streets. The prevalence of the automobile has done a great deal to discourage the production of horses of this type on a large scale in this country. From the farmers' standpoint the Hackney is desirable for driving purposes, but too small for work in the field.—Farm and Home.

TAKE GOOD CARE OF PIGLETS

Necessary That Young Animals Have Plenty of Exercise—Keep Them Out of Cold Rain.

It is very necessary that the little pigs have plenty of exercise and all the sunlight that can be given them. Do not allow the pigs to run out during a cold rain. If possible, provide green feed or roots. These keep the sow healthy and cheapen the ration. Encourage the pigs to eat grain after they are three or four weeks old. Build a creep for them so they can feed alone. At this age feed for bone and muscle. Give them all the skim milk you can. If skim milk is not available, give them some meal and plenty of pasture. In about eight or ten weeks the pigs will have practically weaned themselves. After they have been successfully weaned the most perplexing job is over.

Keep Colt Growing.

Keep the colt growing. It takes longer and costs more to make up for a pound of lost growth than it does to add two pounds of gain under favorable conditions.

Record Breeding Dates.

Keep a careful record of the dates when all animals are bred.

The KITCHEN CABINET

A word of appreciation in the home often works wonders. Nothing is more ungracious than passing over without remark and apparently without thought the many little efforts and attentions which are intended to sweeten domestic life.

WAYS WITH VEGETABLES.

The need of vegetables in our diet is one which is well recognized by all who study the needs of the body. The elements we get from vegetables which they take from the soil keep the blood in good condition and help in the resistance of disease.

Cabbage should always be cooked uncovered to allow the escape of the gases which cause intestinal trouble, and it also, when unconfined by cover, leaves a less objectionable odor in the house. Drop the sliced cabbage into rapidly boiling water and let it cook well until tender, then drain and serve with butter and vinegar, salt and pepper.

Parsnips.—Cook parsnips until tender in boiling salted water, then drain and cool. When it is time for the meal, cut in halves and fry in butter on both sides until brown. Sprinkle a very little sugar over them to insure a nice brown surface. Boiled parsnips, mashed and mixed with fritter batter, then fried in deep fat is another much liked dish.

Onions With Apples.—Fried onions are so rich and indigestible, but withal so tasty, that one dislikes to eliminate them from the diet. When cooked with tart apples, using one part onion to two parts apples the dish is fully as delicious and more digestible. Put a small amount of drippings in the frying pan, add the sliced onion and brown a little, then add the apple and a small amount of boiling water, a sprinkling of sugar, salt and pepper and cook until all are well done. This dish may be baked in the oven and requires less care.

Potatoes a la Maitre d'Hotel.—Usually new potatoes are served in this manner, but freshly cooked diced potatoes are also good. Cook the potatoes until tender, drain them, then toss them in melted butter, well mixed with minced parsley, adding lemon juice to taste, season with salt and cayenne and serve hot.

A pot of parsley may be grown all the year around so that one may have the touch of flavor for various dishes as well as for garnishing.

OTHER GOOD RECIPES.

Celery is so infrequently served except fresh or in salads that few people know how good it is cooked outside of soups. As an escaloped dish it is most tasty. Arrange it in layers with buttered crumbs and top the last layer with tomatoes, season well and bake.

Another unusual dish is corn with canned pimentos. Put the corn in the baking dish with layers of the chopped pimentos between, with bread crumbs and seasoning, cover with milk and bake as usual.

Add stuffed chopped olives to the macaroni and cheese dish some time if you want a savory change from the ordinary.

A little grated ginseng root added to the chicken dish, no matter how served, stewed, fried, fricasseed, is a new flavor for America but one which you are sure to like.

Boiled Cabbage.—Brown a chopped onion in two tablespoonfuls of butter, add a quart of cabbage, finely shredded, cover and cook ten minutes, then add a quart of boiling water, salt and pepper, and cook uncovered until tender. Sprinkle with a little sifted flour, add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and serve hot.

Liver Dumplings.—Take a pound of liver and run it two times through the chopper, add two onions and four stalks of celery, all finely cut, two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter and the crumbs from fourteen crackers rolled. Add enough flour to make the mixture stiff enough to roll into balls the size of a walnut and serve after cooking ten minutes in any kind of soup stock. Serve with the soup.

Orange Pie.—Grate the rind of an orange, add a tablespoonful of flour to a cupful of sugar, mix well, add salt, a cupful of water and a tablespoonful of butter with three egg yolks. Fill the crust and use two whites for frosting.

Graham Gems.—Take a cupful each of graham flour and sour milk, one egg, a teaspoonful of soda, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and three tablespoonfuls of melted shortening, add salt and bake in buttered gem pans in a hot oven.

A Good Catch.

A few days ago Grant Williamson, who lives down on Woolper creek at Flickertown, caught a 7¾ pound blue cat fish in a hole of water near his house a few days ago. His brother had previously hooked the fish with a pole and line, when it snapped the line with ease. Lines and hooks attached to large bottles were thrown in the hole of water and the fish got hung on one of them but broke loose again before it could be landed. Finally a hand line with hooks on it proved a success and the monster was taken.

Wants Free Advertising.

The management of the Cincinnati speed-way that is being constructed at Sharronville, has been very energetic in an effort to dead head its advertising in the country papers. Numerous readers, purely advertising, have been provided the country press, with the hope it would be used as news, and in some instances this copy has been so handled. If the Cincinnati speedway has any pull on the country papers entitling it to special favors that fact has not been ascertained at this office, and its generous supply of free copy is finding its way into the waste basket with uniform regularity.

Property Exempt From Taxation.

A discussion as to what property is exempt from taxation arose one day the past week, and to settle the matter the laws of the State of Kentucky were consulted and in the Constitution which is the supreme law of the State the following very clear section on the subject was found and settles the question beyond dispute:

"There shall be no exempt from taxation public property used for public purposes; places actually used for religious worships, with the grounds attached thereto and used and appurtenant to the house of worship, not exceeding one-half an acre in cities or towns, and not exceeding two acres in the country; places of burial not held for private or corporate profit, institutions of purely public charity, and institutions of education not used or employed for gain by any person or corporation, and the income of which is devoted solely to the cause of education; public libraries, their endowments, and the income of such property as is used exclusively for their maintenance; all parsonages or residences owned by any religious society, and occupied as a home, and for no other purpose, by the minister of any religion, with not exceeding one-half acre of ground in town and cities and two acres of ground in the country appurtenant thereto; household goods and other personal property of a person with a family, not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars in value; crops grown in the year in which the assessment is made and in the hands of the producer; and all law exempting or commuting property from taxation other than the property above mentioned shall be void.

State News.

Eddyville, Aug. 24.—Tom Springs a prominent farmer of the lower part of the county, dropped dead while working in the field, heart trouble being the cause of his death.

Carlisle, Aug. 24.—The wheat market will soon close in Nicholas county, owing to the fact that there is now but approximately 10 per cent, left in the hands of the growers. Local market quotations continue at $1.40 per bushel

Maysville, Aug. 24.—Wade Hampton, a farmer of Tollisboro, was bitten by a horse suffering from the rabies. His brother was bitten by a pup, which was suffering from the same disease. They were both sent to Bowling Green for treatment.

Williamsburg, Aug. 24.—Petitions have been circulated in Whitley county asking for a vote on the question of estabishing the commission form of government this fall. This question has not been agitated much here and it is doubtful if it will carry at the first vote.

Murray, August 24. — Tobacco worms have appeared in this county in large numbers. Paris green is proving ineffective and the old-time method of pulling them off by hand is being resorted to. The tobacco crop in the county is about 25 per cent. over the average and of fine quality.

Owensboro, Ky., Aug 24.—The record prices for hogs and flour have been made during the past few days on the local market. Hogs sold for $10.25 a hundred on the local market yesterday, and flour is selling for $7.85 per barrel. It is predicted flour will be selling for $10 within the next few days.

Hickman, Aug. 24.—The cotton crop is showing up far beyond all expectations, it being feared that the hard rains of the late spring and early summer had damaged it a great deal, the cotton coming out wonderfully and the farmers getting a good stand, and cotton is now beginning to open in this section. Those raising cotton this year are assured of high prices.

Lexington, August 21.—The Lexington Board of Education today adopted the following rule: "No teacher shall be elected who has not had a physical examination by the School Medical Inspector or physician who is a member of the Fayette Medical Society, and who does not thereby hold a certificate of good health and physical vigor from such examining physician. Such examination shall have been made within 3 months before election."

Hopkinsville, Ky., Aug 24.—The heavy exportation of negroes from this region and from many sections thru Kentucky and Tennessee, and possibly other Southern States, has been given a political aspect by some who claim to have kept in touch with such affairs. According to these persons such hegiras of negroes from the South to the North occur about every four years, and nearly always in Presidential election years. Furthermore, these wiseacres point out, the negroes are always sent to Northern States, where their votes will do the most good.

HIGH COST OF MEAT.

Specialists of the United States department of agriculture have been engaged for some time in an investigation of the increased and increasing cost of meat. They have found—and publish their findings in Part I of an exhaustive report now being prepared—that most of the trouble is due to the fact that we eat more meat than we produce. The public at large, however is no stranger to this verdict. It has come heretofore from packers and others connected with the marketing of meat, but, because of its source, perhaps the public has not been very deeply impressed by it. Now, though the government confirmation gives it an authority that is not to be ignored.

And no relief, it appears, is in sight—not immediately at any rate. Even under normal conditions—that is, before the European war—meat production the whole world over, says the report, did not keep pace with the demand. At the same time, with the demand greater than the supply, the cost of production also increased. Higher prices, therefore, were inevitable, and since meat can not be produced in a day, these higher prices will prevail for some time to come. Some encouragement, however, may be derived from the fact that the government statistics show a "gradual expansion" of cattle raising.

But there is evidently a check to this "gradual expansion," as far as actual results are concerned in the more general prevalence of disease. The losses traceable to this source are enormous. More than a million cattle die annually from sickness and more than half a million from exposure. In 1894 the loss of hogs due to cholera amounted to 2,300,000 head; in 1914, 7,000,000 died from the same cause. "If these 7,000,000 hogs had been saved, "says the report "they would have produced enough meat to furnish every family in the U. S. with forty pounds of pork."

Farmers who raise cattle, sheep and hogs would do well to read what the experts have to say. It would seem that their report ought to prove an excellent argument for raising more cattle, hogs and sheep. When a demand for a product is far greater than the supply, not in one section of the country, not in one country alone, but throughout the world, and will continue to be greater for many years to come, the advisability of increasing production is self-evident. Those who can ought to grasp the opportunity.

FARM ANIMALS

PLANS FOR DIPPING CATTLE

Solution May Be Applied With Scrubbing Brush or Animals Can Be Immersed in Tank.

Where the animals are few and easy to handle, dip may be applied to the animals. To do this use a scrubbing brush, sponge, etc., and apply the dip. All parts should be rubbed, and care taken to see that the dip is evenly applied.

The second method is to immerse the animals in the dipping solution. There are at least two kinds of vats.

Healthy, Vigorous Type, Free From All Vermin.

One is the cage vat used for a few cattle. It consists of a cage in which the animal is placed and then lowered into the vat of solution. But where a large number of animals are to be dipped, the swimming vat is desirable. In this type the animals are forced to swim through the vat and thus become immersed in the solution when they plunge into it.

The coal-tar dips advertised are made from some of the products of the distillation of coal tar. When mixed with water they form a milky emulsion having a strong odor of coal tar. Most of these products have a decidedly deadly effect upon parasites, and in addition are used as disinfectants in hospitals, barns, poultry yards, hog-houses, etc.

SHEEP BUSINESS OF COUNTRY

Generally in Healthy and Prosperous Condition—More Mutton and Wool Are Demanded.

The sheep business of the country is generally in a very healthy and prosperous condition. The ranges and farms are not crowded; in fact, there is a scarcity of sheep to supply the demand. Sheep owners find there is as much clear money in raising sheep and producing wool at present prices as there is in most other live stock operations.

The evidences of better bred sheep, whereby more mutton and wool are produced, is the argument that counts in these days. The demand is for mutton first, then the largest fleece of good merchantable wool. The ability of man to increase both mutton and wool qualities by selection of breeding stock is a plain and workable proposition.

HANDY AS WATERING TROUGH

as shown in the sketch, writes John Hoeck of Alamada, Cal., in Popular Mechanics Magazine. The openings were plugged and a section was cut on three sides and bent back to form a support, giving an opening at which the animals could drink.

Good Weed Killers.

Sheep are good weed killers. The fleece will more than pay for the feed eaten. The lambs are clear profit. Buy a few head as an experiment.

Pigs in Right Place.

Pigs in alfalaf mean alfalfa in pigs—a good illustration of the right thing in the right place.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Give us, oh give us, the man who sings at his work. Be his occupation what it may, he is equal to any of those who follow the same pursuit in silent sullenness. He does more in the same time—he will do it better—he will persevere longer.—Thomas Carlyle.

WHAT TO EAT.

Prepare a slice of veal from the leg by cutting in serving-sized pieces and pound them to about a half inch in thickness. Roll in flour and saute in hot fat salt pork until brown on both sides. When brown remove to a casserole, pour broth or hot water into the frying pan and boil until all the browned juices are removed, then add this to the casserole. Salt and pepper should be added, cover and let cook in a moderate oven for an hour. Serve from the casserole. Tomato puree may be added if desired.

Pineapple Cream.—Boil a third of a cupful of grated pine apple, juice and pulp, to the soft-ball stage, then pour in a fine stream on an egg, beaten stiff. When cold fold in a cup of beaten cream. A tablespoonful of lemon juice may be added to intensify the flavor of the pineapple.

Pear Salad.—A most dainty and appetizing salad is one of canned pears cut in half and placed on white leaves of lettuce, the cut side down. On top of the pear arrange a tablespoonful or two of skinned seeded white grapes, cut in half, and a spoonful of mayonnaise dressing.

Stuffed Tomatoes. — Select. eight smooth, small-sized tomatoes; chill, remove the skin, cut out a portion around the stem and remove the centers with a spoon. Have ready three-fourths of a cupful of shredded cabbage, one green pepper chopped fine, the pulp taken from the tomatoes, a tablespoonful of scraped onion, and a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of paprika. Mix all together and fill the tomatoes. Set them on crisp heart leaves of lettuce and dispose generous spoonfuls of mayonnaise above the filling in each tomato.

India Relish.—Chop together, three onions, one large red pepper, eight green tomatoes, eight large green apples, one-half pound of raisins, one-half pound of sugar, one-quarter of a cupful of salt, one and a half pints of vinegar, one dessertspoonful of ginger and cinnamon and half a spoonful of cloves. Boil half an hour, then seal while hot.

Success in life depends on staying power. The reason for failure in most cases is lack of perseverance. Men get tired and give up.—J. R. Miller.

If it wasn't for the optimist the pessimist wouldn't know how happy he isn't.

MORE GOOD THINGS.

Cornmeal is a valuable food, being rich in fats and minerals.

Spider Corn Bread.—Mix together a cupful and an eighth of cornmeal and a half cupful of bread flour, a tablespoonful of sugar, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt; mix well, then add a cupful and a half each of sweet milk and a beaten egg. Add two tablespoonfuls of drippings into a hot frying pan and pour in the mixture. Bake in a moderate oven 30 minutes. Serve with jelly.

Cornmeal Crisps.—Mix together two cupfuls of cornmeal, two teaspoonfuls of salt; beat in gradually two cupfuls of boiling water, add two tablespoonfuls of butter and spread an inch thick in a large dripping pan. Bake until crisp, about fifteen minutes. Cut in squares and serve as crackers.

Savory Mush.—Stir into a quart of mush a teaspoonful of sage or of poultry dressing. When ready to fry cut in slices and dip in flour, fry in a little hot bacon fat and serve with fried bacon at breakfast.

Popcorn Balls.—Boil a cupful of corn sirup with a tablesponful of vinegar until it hardens in water. Pour over the corn while hot and butter the hands well before forming the balls.

Potato Pancakes.—To a cupful of cold mashed potato add a cupful of milk, mix until well blended. Sift together a half cupful of flour, a teaspoonful each of sugar and salt, unless the potatoes are already seasoned, a teaspoonful of baking powder, beat well, then add a tablespoonful of melted butter, beat again hard and long.

Crumble Torte.—Take a cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of flour, two well-beaten eggs, one cupful of pecans, a cupful of dates; both nuts and dates cut fine, a tablespoonful of baking powder, all mixed well and bake slowly in a shallow pan, or in two layers. Put together with sweetened and flavored whipped cream. Bake a half hour.

Of Which The Flying Dams of Covington, Were Thoroughly Convinced Last Saturday.

The Union base ball team added another scalp to its string last Saturday when it defeated the strong Flying Dams, of Covington 5 to 1, the visitors putting their one tally over in the fifth inning. It was a fast contest from start to finish, Aylor holding the Dams safe at all stages of the game, allowing only six hits which were kept well scattered, while his support was full of pep and on its toes all the time.

THE GROWING CROP.

Tobacco is booming in Bracken county.

The crop is the best in years in Woodford county.

Trimble county's tobacco crop is beyond all expectations.

Tobacco in Jessamine county is being cut and housed. In the lowlands the water stood so long the crop is almost ruined.

The recent rains gave tobacco in Bracken county a new start and it now promises to be the largest in the history of the county.

The weed is ripening very fast in Montgomery county and cutting is on in real earnest. The crop gives every indication of bright color.

Cutting is being pushed in Fleming county. The crop is better than usual for the time of year and one of the largest crops ever produced in this county.

The outlook in Bourbon county is good though in some sections this crop has been badly burned. The acreage is less but the crop is expected to be heavier than last year.

In Fayette county prospects are better for a big crop than at any time during the past twenty years. The crop, however, is in danger of being severely injured by suckers being allowed to grow.

Worms made their appearance in Calloway county in swarms the first part of this month. Paris green proved ineffectual and the growers are resorting to old time method of pulling them off by hand. The crop is fine in quality, and about 25 per cent. over average.

The most sensational crop of tobacco and perhaps the champion crop in Shelby county and may be in the State was grown this year on "Englewood" stock farm, two miles east of Shelbyville. This crop was cultivated by Leo Gibbs and Lawrence Long, and contained about twelve acres. It was set May 23, and they began cutting August 7th. Just 77 days from setting. It is phenominly uniform; will average six feet in height and has no tips. The top leaves are just as good in size as the others. A loose leaf buyer of many years experience, pronounced it the finest crop he had ever seen, for quality and color.

Nelson will preach at Taylorsport, East Bend and Burlington in September.

No doubt many people of Boone county were sky-gazing Saturday evening from about 8:30 until 9:45, when a great path of light swept across the sky from east to west. It seemed of the same substance as the clouds, yet transparent, as the stars shown thru it. The path occasionally broke, wavered, came together, bent and straightened; then faded and brightened again. Some called it the reflection of a comet, others, the "milky way," others called it a rainbow in the night. But no one knows what it was, from whence it came or where it went, and we avait with interest the verdict of the astronomers.

A REAR END COLLISION

In Which Two Autos Were Badly Wrecked—Occupants Escape Serious Injury

Shortly afternoon last Sunday Ivin and Rose Conrad, sons of John Conrad, who lives on the John T. Craven farm near Hopeful church, were near Clem Kendall's, coming toward Burlington in their auto in which three other persons were riding, two of them young ladies. Ivin Conrad was driving the machine which was followed by a large Studebaker in which were four people, the machine being driven by a Mr. Wolfe, of Ludlow. Just after passing Mr Kendall's the Conrad machine was slowed up, turned across the road and driven into the ditch at the side of the road to be turned around. Ivin Conrad thought he had allowed ample room for the machine that was following him to pass, but when in a few yards of him it went into the ditch, and when it was swung back into the pike, it seems the driver lost his head and allowed it to strike the Conrad machine near the rear wheel, turning it over and throwing the passengers out, but fortunately none of them was hurt much, although the machine was badly wrecked. The Ludlow machine was put out of commission but none of the occupants were injured. Mr Wolfe conceded that it was to blame for the accident and said he would pay the damages. Several persons were at the scene of the accident in a few minutes after it occurred and were surprised to find none of the occupants of either of the autos were seriously injured.

Sunday's makes the eighth automobile accident to happen on the Burlington and Florence pike, and no person has been seriously hurt in any of them.

Auto Gossip.

The United States Motor Truck Company, of Cincinnati, held its annual meeting yesterday. The stockholders voted to increase the capital stock from three hundred thousand dollars to one million dollars, stock divided into both preferred and common. The preferred stock is cumulative 7 per cent. and participates in the earnings with the common stock up to 10 per cent. A large amount of the increased stock was subscribed for at the meeting by the present stockholders; part of balance of the issue will be offered to the public. The Directors authorized and declared the regular annual dividend of seven per cent on preferred stock, and placed quite a large sum to the credit of surplus from the excess earnings of the company.

R. C Stewart, President of the company, in his report, showed a tremendous increase in sales and production during the past six months.—Cincinnati Enquirer, August 13th, 1916.

At the great public baptizing in Licking River, at Berry, Monday, fifty converts were immersed. The services were witnessed by a crowd estimated at close to a thousand visitors, who packed the bridge on both sides of the river, near the mill. The Revs Taylor and Dowd both conducted the baptizing, each alternating immersing a convert in the line assembled in the water. The baptismal services lasted over an hour.—Licking Valley Journal

HINTS ON PROPER SPRAYING

Buy Paris Green in Original Package, Guaranteed Pure—Arsenate of Lead Is Also Popular.

In the use of paris green to kill insects the right proportions are one and a half pounds of the poison to one pound of fresh lime and 200 gallons of water. But note in using this that it must be kept stirred, else the poison will settle, as it is heavier than water. Buy the green in the original package, guaranteed pure. In this formula the lime is used to overcome the caustic poison which might otherwise injure foliage.

For fungous troubles add to this same mixture six or eight pounds of copper sulphate or bluestone. The bluestone is always to be dissolved in water in a separate vessel and not mixed with the limewater until just before using. The bluestone is best dissolved by inclosing in a burlap sack and suspending it in the water.

Another poison largely used instead of paris green is arsenate of lead. This has some advantages over the other. It remains in solution longer, it adheres to the foliage better and there is less danger of injury to the foliage. Two pounds of the arsenate to fifty gallons of water is the right proportion. This may be added to the bordeaux mixture also.

A substitute for the bordeaux is the lime-sulphur solution, and some fruit men prefer this when the trees are dormant.

This is doubtless the best treatment for scales and all sucking insects. The lime-sulphur is a commercial article and may be bought in all sized packages up to barrel size. One gallon of this to eight of water is the proper mixture, but does not apply to growing plants. Arsenate of lead may be added if a poison is desired.

DAMAGE BY SAN JOSE SCALE

Pest Attacks More Than One Hundred Different Kinds of Trees and Shrubs—Hard to Detect.

(By L. HASEMAN, Missouri Agricultural College.)

The San Jose scale will attack more than 100 different kinds of trees and shrubs, but it is most often found on apple, peach and pear trees and on currant and fire-bush. When it first begins to appear on a tree it is difficult for one to detect it, for the small gray circular armors are no larger than a pin-head. A bad case of encrustation should be readily seen by any fruit-grower, for the armors form a scurfy covering over the bark. By running a knife blade or finger nail over an infected limb a yellow liquid, from the crushed bodies of the insects, appears. Many fruit-growers first find the scale on the fruit by the red blotching which develops about the point of attack. The blotch is deep red in color with a light spot in the center and may vary in size from a mere spot to a distinct blotch. The pest seemingly injects poison while extracting sap, which causes the red blotch.

All trees and fruit should be frequently examined and in all cases where there is any question about the presence of the scale in an orchard, samples of bark, twig and fruit should be sent to the Missouri agricultural experiment station at Columbia, for examination. It is a waste of time and material to spray for the scale where it is not present, and it is expensive to let an orchard go unsprayed where the pest is present, so make sure about the presence of the pest first.

AMERICAN FISHERMEN TRY TO TRAP U-BOAT.

Berlin, Aig. 24—The German commerce submarine Deutschland eluded at least eight English warships and a whole fleet of American fishing schooners in the employ of the Allies when she dashed out to sea from the Virginia capes on the night of August 2d, it was learned here today.

Great crowds greeted Capt. Koenig and his crew when the first submersible to cross the Atlantic returned to her home port at Bremen last night.

Capt. Koenig had no fear of allied warships, but had not counted on the fishing schooners hired to help trap him. The fishermen had dropped their nets ostensibly to fish.

Their real purpose, Capt. Koenig said, was to make soundings for the Deutschland, aiming to signal allied warships if the submarine plunged thru their nets.

Koenig telegraphed the Ocean Co., owners of the vessel, that the American Government observed correct neutrality throughout the Deutschland's stay.

Messengers were dispatched to the homes of members of the Deutschland's crew, and bells were rung throughout the city.

Two-thirds of the city's population gave the submariners a great ovation when they drew up to the dock at 7 o'clock.

Ther were affecting scenes when the Deutschland's sailors, pressing thru the crowd that swarmed in about them, were greeted by relatives.

In some instances families of the submariners knew nothing of their departure on such an adventurous trip until after their arrival in America.

The men were all in good health, and showed no signs of having undergone any severe hardships.

Both British and French warships respected American rights and made no attempt to approach within the three-mile zone in their efforts to trap the submarine. How many French warships were engaged in the patrol, he did not know.

During the whole journey of 4200 miles the Deutschland was submerged only for 110 miles.

The weather was splendid at the beginning of her voyage, but became stormy later. The blow ceased as the Deutscland approached the English coast, but some difficulty was experienced because of the heavy fog.

The necessity for feeling her way slowly in the thick mists delayed the Deutschland's arrival several days.

Upon entering the North Sea the submarine encountered severe storms. She proved her excellent seacraft, her engines working perfectly, despite the fact that she was being rolled by mountainous waves.

Only a few vessels were sighted and not a single iceberg was encountered. The Deutschland promptly submerged when another ship appeared on the horison, and her Captain expressed doubt that she had been seen by any other vessel.

It was three o'clock yesterday afternoon when the Deutschland anchored in the Weser River, after a short stop at Heliloland. Word of her coming was telegraphed to Bremen, and the city was instantly beflagged.

The Coatless Man.

Coroner Hoffman of Cook county, Illinois, has risen in his might as the champion of men. Chicago restaurants refuse to entertain the coatless man, while permitting women to dine with him in thin, low-necked waists.

The issue is nationwide in its application. In the good old summer time the average man suggests by his costume that he belongs to the more conservative and reactionary, and therefore to the weaker sex. He refuses to adapt his attire to the weather, a reasonable step taken long ago by American women. Years before the men of this country had abandoned braces in hot weather in favor of belts, women had discarded high-necked long-sleeved upper garments for summer wear. On the hottest day this month of more than 100 men in a subway car 80 per cent. wore waistcoats and at least 20 per cent. were dressed in black. Every woman in that same car was dressed with out sacrifice of modesty in a fashion that assured the greatest possible coolness and comfort.

Why should a coatless man in a becoming shirt and using a belt instead of braces be persona non grata to the most exclusive restaurant in Chicago? Is this life less precious to the nation than that of the cooly garbbed woman who dines with him? All hail to Coroner Hoffman of Chicago! He has started a crusade in behalf of masculine comfort that will draw millions of becoated, overheated men to his banner. Equality between the sexes in all places and under all circumstances is all that they demand.—New York Sun

Paducah, Aug. 24—Hobert Albritton, eighteen, was convicted of the murder of Lucy Brigham, colored, at Murray, and sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary. The evidence, all circumstantial, was held to show the boy assaulted and shot the girl, whose body, badly gnawed by hogs, was found several days after death in a thicket.

Some tobacco has been cut in the county the past week. Chas Kratz was one of the first growers to begin cutting, getting some of the weed cut Monday. The cutting so far, however, is light, and a relatively small proportion of the crop has been knifed thus far. The heavy fog and moderately cool nights during the past ten days have added wonderfully to the weight of the tobacco, thickening the leaf and improving it greatly in all respects.

NORTH KENTUCKY FAIR

Good Show and Fair Attendance During The Meeting—List of Winners.

The initial exhibition of the North Kentucky fair last Thursday, Friday and Saturday was very satisfactory to the public as well as to the company. Had the weather Friday and Saturday mornings been favorable the attendance each of these days would have been a record breaker, but as it was the gate receipts were large enough to put the company on easy street in so far as the expenses of the fair are concerned.

Those who attended the fair last week were impressed with the permanent improvements that had been made since the new company took hold, and predict that in a few years the North Kentucky fair will be second to no county fair in Kentucky in the matter of first-class accommodations.

NOTES.

In the matter of points in the school exhibit Burlington had 126, Walton 109, Hebron 53, Florence 27, Verona 14.

At the annual election held on the fair grounds Saturday, the old board was reelected for the ensuing year.

Friday a considerable delegation of men prominent on the Cincinnati tobacco market were guests of President John E. Williams

The total gate receipts were a little larger than an average for the last five years of the old association.

Splendid order prevailed every day, and there were no accidents of any consequence.

The enlargement of floral hall was a great assistance to the exhibition.

The school exhibit was large and attracted much attention. It was in charge of Profs. Caywood and Carter, who took great interest in it.

GOOD AND BAD ROADS.

Old Conditions In United States Contrasted With New Ones.

Men who are not yet very old can remember when the United States was a country of bad roads, says D. S E. Forman in St. Nicholas. Twenty-five years ago it was only in the neighborhood of towns and cities that the roads were good. With the coming of the bicycle, however, our roads in about 1890 began slowly to improve, and with the coming of the automobile a few years later they began to improve very rapidly. The movement for better roads has gained strength year by year, and today the time does not seem to be far distant when the United States will be a country of good roads.

But an enormous amount of work will have to be done and a vast sum of money will have to be spent before our roads will be as good as the roads of most European countries actually are. There are in this country nearly 2,500,000 miles of public roads. Of this total about 250,000 miles consists of improved, surfaced roads. So for every mile of good roads we have eight or nine miles of bad ones. In some of the states the proportion of improved roads is much greater than this. In Massachusetts more than half and in Indiana nearly half of the public roads are surfaced. Since one mile of good macadam road costs anywhere from $5,000 to ten thousand it will require billions of dollars to put all our roads in good condition. Yet, costly as good roads are, the people are meeting the expense in a free handed manner and are spending each year more than $250,000,000 on roads. This is about half as much as is spent for public schools, but it is money well spent, for good roads are among the most valuable assets of a nation.

Wheat Growing in the Mountains.

With prices of flour sailing sky high, mountain farmers are getting together upon wheat growing and will this year sow large areas of the staple preparations for seed being made. In some sections wheat grower associations will be organized, which will do much toward enthusing interest in wheat culture.

CARE OF MILK CANS.

Thorough Washing and Sterilization in the Production of Clean Cans.

In justice to the farmer, milk dealers should give considerable attention to the question of washing the cans before they are returned. If the cans are allowed to go back unwashed to the farmer, it is a very difficult task for him, with his limited facilities, to clean them.

In a circular letter recently sent to milk dealers by the Dairy Division of the department, it was pointed out that bacterial counts made from cans which had been washed and rinsed in the ordinary manner showed that there were from 300,000 to 18,000,000 bacteria in each can, with an average of 4,600,000. If 10 gallons of milk were put into one of these cans there would be added more than 100 bacteria to each cubic centimeter of the milk. That is to say, this is the least number that would be added. Whereas, it was pointed out, with a little steaming these same cans could have been rendered practically sterile.

One dealer who recently installed a modern washing machine, employed a bacteria to test the results. It was found that less than 200,000 bacteria were in a can, and among them were no undesirable types. Bacterial counts of cans treated by a less efficient steaming device which this dealer had formerly employed ran as high as 200,000,000 bacteria to the can, including some undesirable kinds.

There are a number of different types of cleaning machines on the market. The aim of all the efficient ones, however, is the thorough cleansing with washing powder and water, rinsing, sterilization with steam, and rapid drying. After this the can should be covered and kept from contamination.

One of the simplest machines is a jet device by means of which sprays of cold and hot water and of steam are successively forced into the can. This type also is equipped sometimes with a drying attachment by means of which a draft of dry air is forced into the can. Another type is the brush machine, in which cans are brushed out with washing powder and water and then rinsed. After washing they may be steamed by a spray of steam. Some of the largest machines are fitted with powerful pumps, the cans in an inverted position being run thru the machine and sprays of soap and water, rinse water, hot water and steam successively forced into them under considerable pressure. They are then dried in the same machine.

The drying of the cans is an important factor, for it not only leaves them in a much better condition, but it tends to prevent rust. The cover also must not be neglected. It is as important that it be as thoroughly cleansed and sterilized as the can itself. It is not a good plan to put the cover on the can until the latter is quite dry. In the interval the can should be kept in a clean place where there is no dust or contamination.

On the farm, cans, pails, and other utensils may be sterilized very efficiently with an inexpensive sterilizer which is fully described in Farmers' Bulletin 748. This bulletin may be obtained upon application to the department.

Raising Frogs in Louisiana.

Swepson Earle, chief engineer of the Conservation Commission of Maryland, is making an investigation as to the possibilities of creating a new industry in the state by catching bullfrogs and marketing them.

"In Maryland," said Mr. Earle, "there are many streams and fresh water ponds where the bullfrog thrives and where his kind can be caught in paying quantities.

"As the outlay necessary to take these frogs from the waters is practically little or nothing, while the returns by way of profits are many hundred-fold, thousands of dollars could be made by the citizens of the State from this undeveloped industry. That frog catching will pay here one has only to look at the recent report of the Conservation Commission of the State of Louisiana.

"While in Louisiana in 1914 my attention was called to the frog industry, which has developed in large proportions. The following is taken from a recent report from the State of Louisiana:

"The frog industry was worth approximately $110 000 to this State for the calendar year ending December 31, a gain of $10,000 over the year 1913.

"According to the most reliable and available information that we have regarding this product, 1,000,000 frogs were shipped out of the State in the year 1915, also 100,000 were used in New Orleans, and about as many consumed elsewhere in the State. Early in the season Louisiana frogs sold at from one dollar to $1.50 per dozen; in midsummer from 50 to 75 cents a dozen."—Baltimore Star

Livestock in Kentucky and Tennessee is growing in importance. There is a meat shortage thruout the world, and it cannot be soon supplied. The States of Kentucky and Tennessee and Northern Alabama should add greatly to the world's supply of meat.

HOW TO DETECT SYMPTOMS

And How to Prevent Spread of Infantile Paralysis.

Dr. C Bolduan, director of public education of the New York City health department, and Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the SRockefeller Institute, explained how to detect symptoms of infantile paralysis and how to ward off the disease and prevent its spread.

The fist symptoms are fever, bowel disturbances, headache and irritability.

After a few hours pains develop, usually in the lower part of the legs and in the feet.

Sometimes there are also pains in the region of the spine, in the arms and neck—stiff neck.

Within twelve hours the patient is unable to move his arms or legs and sometimes cannot talk.

Vomiting, delirium, twitchings and convulsions accompany the progress of the disease.

A temperature of from 100 to 106 degrees lasts two or three days.

Sometimes but rarely, the patient has chills, sore throat and skin eruptions.

Health is no protection. Often children go to bed apparently well and awake in the night with the first symptoms and are partly paralyzed by morning.

Cleanliness is the only known preventive.

The isolation of children in the house is next in importance.

Have children wash their hands and faces often.

Avoid buying candy, ice cream and fruits which are eaten without being cooked from peddlers and storekeepers who are not careful of their wares.

Don't kiss children on their mouths.

Keep their noses clean. This applies especially to young babies.

Don't cough in their faces.

Protect them from flies.

The germs of this disease, which are so small that they cannot be seen with microscopes and which pass through germ filters, almost always enter the bodies of their victims through the mucus membrances of the nose and throat.

Keep children away from their mates in the streets or at moving picture shows.

Report all cases at once to the board of health, so that the city's doctors can immediately investigate and remove the patients to hospitals.

Adults are not free from the disease. If your hands are dirty or if you are not careful about the preparation of your children's food, remember that you can give your little ones the disease as readily as can outsiders.

Select Seed Corn Now.

Are you going to wait till spring to pick out seed ears for your next corn crop? Although this may be a custom, the experience of the most successful growers shows that seed selected from standing corn in the fall yields more than corn taken from the shock or crib. By fall selection the best ears growing under ordinary conditions may be chosen. By selecting either at husking time or from the crib, the grower picks out ears that grow on unusually fertile spots or often where the whole plant in a hill. The [illegible] Station has observed an increase in yield of more than [illegible] bushels per acre by [illegible] in the fall from stalks

HINTS ON PROPER SPRAYING

Buy Paris Green in Original Package, Guaranteed Pure—Arsenate of Lead Is Also Popular.

In the use of paris green to kill insects the right proportions are one and a half pounds of the poison to one pound of fresh lime and 200 gallons of water. But note in using this that it must be kept stirred, else the poison will settle, as it is heavier than water. Buy the green in the original package, guaranteed pure. In this formula the lime is used to overcome the caustic poison which might otherwise injure foliage.

For fungous troubles add to this same mixture six or eight pounds of copper sulphate or bluestone. The bluestone is always to be dissolved in water in a separate vessel and not mixed with the limewater until just before using. The bluestone is best dissolved by inclosing in a burlap sack and suspending it in the water.

Another poison largely used instead of paris green is arsenate of lead. This has some advantages over the other. It remains in solution longer, it adheres to the foliage better and there is less danger of injury to the foliage. Two pounds of the arsenate to fifty gallons of water is the right proportion. This may be added to the bordeaux mixture also.

A substitute for the bordeaux is the lime-sulphur solution, and some fruit men prefer this when the trees are dormant.

This is doubtless the best treatment for scales and all sucking insects. The lime-sulphur is a commercial article and may be bought in all sized packages up to barrel size. One gallon of this to eight of water is the proper mixture, but does not apply to growing plants. Arsenate of lead may be added if a poison is desired.

DAMAGE BY SAN JOSE SCALE

Pest Attacks More Than One Hundred Different Kinds of Trees and Shrubs—Hard to Detect.

(By L. HASEMAN, Missouri Agricultural College.)

The San Jose scale will attack more than 100 different kinds of trees and shrubs, but it is most often found on apple, peach and pear trees and on currant and fire-bush. When it first begins to appear on a tree it is difficult for one to detect it, for the small gray circular armors are no larger than a pin-head. A bad case of encrustation should be readily seen by any fruit-grower, for the armors form a scurfy covering over the bark. By running a knife blade or finger nail over an infected limb a yellow liquid, from the crushed bodies of the insects, appears. Many fruit-growers first find the scale on the fruit by the red blotching which develops about the point of attack. The blotch is deep red in color with a light spot in the center and may vary in size from a mere spot to a distinct blotch. The pest seemingly injects poison while extracting sap, which causes the red blotch.

Using Spraying Apparatus in Missouri Orchard.

All trees and fruit should be frequently examined and in all cases where there is any question about the presence of the scale in an orchard, samples of bark, twig and fruit should be sent to the Missouri agricultural experiment station at Columbia, for examination. It is a waste of time and material to spray for the scale where it is not present, and it is expensive to let an orchard go unsprayed where the pest is present, so make sure about the presence of the pest first.

PICKING AND PACKING RULES

Horticultural Specialist of Minnesota College Prepares Regulations for Orchardist.

R. S. Mackintosh, horticultural specialist of the agricultural extension division, Minnesota College of Agriculture, has prepared these profitable rules to govern picking and packing:

Pick by hand.
Cool before packing.
Grade carefully.
Pack only one variety, grade, and size in a package.
Mark plainly outside the variety, grade, size, and grower's or packer's name.

AMERICAN FISHERMEN TRY TO TRAP U-BOAT.

Berlin, Aig. 21—The German commerce submarine Deutschland eluded at least eight English warships and a whole fleet of American fishing schooners in the employ of the Allies when she dashed out to sea from the Virginia capes on the night of August 2d, it was learned here today.

Great crowds greeted Capt. Koenig and his crew when the first submersible to cross the Atlantic returned to her home port at Bremen last night.

Capt. Koenig had no fear of allied warships, but had not counted on the fishing schooners hired to help trap him. The fishermen had dropped their nets ostensibly to fish.

Their real purpose, Capt. Koenig said, was to make soundings for the Deutschland, aiming to signal allied warships if the submarine plunged thru their nets.

Koenig telegraphed the Ocean Co., owners of the vessel, that the American Government observed correct neutrality throughout the Deutschland's stay.

Messengers were dispatched to the homes of members of the Deutschland's crew, and bells were rung throughout the city.

Two-thirds of the city's population gave the submariners a great ovation when they drew up to the dock at 7 o'clock.

Ther were affecting scenes when the Deutschland's sailors, pressing thru the crowd that swarmed in about them, were greeted by relatives.

In some instances families of the submariners knew nothing of their departure on such an adventurous trip until after their arrival in America.

The men were all in good health, and showed no signs of having undergone any severe hardships.

Both British and French warships respected American rights and made no attempt to approach within the three-mile zone in their efforts to trap the submarine. How many French warships were engaged in the patrol, he did not know.

During the whole journey of 4200 miles the Deutschland was submerged only for 110 miles.

The weather was splendid at the beginning of her voyage, but became stormy later. The blow ceased as the Deutschland approached the English coast, but some difficulty was experienced because of the heavy fog.

The necessity for feeling her way slowly in the thick mists delayed the Deutschland's arrival several days.

Upon entering the North Sea the submarine encountered severe storms. She proved her excellent seacraft, her engines working perfectly, despite the fact that she was being rolled by mountainous waves.

Only a few vessels were sighted and not a single iceberg was encountered. The Deutschland promptly submerged when another ship appeared on the horison, and her Captain expressed doubt that she had been seen by any other vessel.

It was three o'clock yesterday afternoon when the Deutschland anchored in the Weser River, after a short stop at Heliloland. Word of her coming was telegraphed to Bremen, and the city was instantly beflagged.

The Coatless Man.

Coroner Hoffman of Cook county, Illinois, has risen in his might as the champion of men. Chicago restaurants refuse to entertain the coatless man, while permitting women to dine with him in thin, low-necked waists.

The issue is nationwide in its application. In the good old summer time the average man suggests by his costume that he belongs to the more conservative and reactionary, and therefore to the weaker sex. He refuses to adapt his attire to the weather, a reasonable step taken long ago by American women. Years before the men of this country had abandoned braces in hot weather in favor of belts, women had discarded high-necked long-sleeved upper garments for summer wear. On the hottest day this month of more than 100 men in a subway car 80 per cent. wore waistcoats and at least 20 per cent. were dressed in black. Every woman in that same car was dressed without sacrifice of modesty in a fashion that assured the greatest possible coolness and comfort.

Why should a coatless man in a becoming shirt and using a belt instead of braces be persona non grata to the most exclusive restaurant in Chicago? Is this life less precious to the nation than that of the cooly garbed woman who dines with him? All hail to Coroner Hoffman of Chicago! He has started a crusade in behalf of masculine comfort that will draw millions of becoated, overheated men to his banner. Equality between the sexes in all places and under all circumstances is all that they demand.—New York Sun

Padtcah, Aug. 21— Hobert Albritton, eighteen, was convicted of the murder of Lucy Brigham, colored, at Murray, and sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary. The evidence, all circumstantial, was held to show the boy assaulted and shot the girl, whose body, badly gnawed by hogs, was found several days after death in a thicket.

Some tobacco has been cut in the county the past week. Chas Kratz was one of the first growers to begin cutting, getting some of the weed cut Monday. The cutting so far, however, is light and a relatively small proportion of the crop has been knifed thus far. The heavy fog and moderately cool nights during the past ten days have added wonderfully to the weight of the tobacco, thickening the leaf and improving it greatly in all respects.

NORTH KENTUCKY FAIR

Good Show and Fair Attendance During The Meeting—List of Winners.

The initial exhibition of the North Kentucky fair last Thursday, Friday and Saturday was very satisfactory to the public as well as to the company. Had the weather Friday and Saturday mornings been favorable the attendance each of these days would have been a record breaker, but as it was the gate receipts were large enough to put the company on easy street in so far as the expenses of the fair are concerned.

Those who attended the fair last week were impressed with the permanent improvements that had been made since the new company took hold, and predict that in a few years the North Kentucky fair will be second to no county fair in Kentucky in the matter of first-class accommodations.

NOTES.

In the matter of points in the school exhibit Burlington had 126, Walton 109, Hebron 53, Florence 27, Verona 14.

At the annual election held on the fair grounds Saturday, the old board was reelected for the ensuing year.

Friday a considerable delegation of men prominent on the Cincinnati tobacco market were guests of President John E. Williams

The total gate receipts were a little larger than an average for the last five years of the old association.

Splendid order prevailed every day, and there were no accidents of any consequence.

The enlargement of floral hall was a great assistance to the exhibition.

The school exhibit was large and attracted much attention. It was in charge of Profs. Caywood and Carter, who took great interest in it.

GOOD AND BAD ROADS.

Old Conditions In United States Contrasted With New Ones.

Men who are not yet very old can remember when the United States was a country of bad roads, says D. S. E. Forman in St. Nicholas. Twenty-five years ago it was only in the neighborhood of towns and cities that the roads were good. With the coming of the bicycle, however, our roads in about 1890 began slowly to improve, and with the coming of the automobile a few years later they began to improve very rapidly. The movement for better roads has gained strength year by year, and today the time does not seem to be far distant when the United States will be a country of good roads.

But an enormous amount of work will have to be done and a vast sum of money will have to be spent before our roads will be as good as the roads of most European countries actually are. There are in this country nearly 2,500,000 miles of public roads. Of this total about 250,000 miles consists of improved, surfaced roads. So for every mile of good roads we have eight or nine miles of bad ones. In some of the states the proportion of improved roads is much greater than this. In Massachusetts more than half and in Indiana nearly half of the public roads are surfaced. Since one mile of good macadam road costs anywhere from $5,000 to ten thousand it will require billions of dollars to put all our roads in good condition. Yet, costly as good roads are, the people are meeting the expense in a free handed manner and are spending each year more than $250,000,000 on roads. This is about half as much as is spent for public schools, but it is money well spent, for good roads are among the most valuable assets of a nation.

Wheat Growing in the Mountains.

With prices of flour sailing sky high, mountain farmers are getting together upon wheat growing and will this year sow large areas of the staple preparations for seed being made. In some sections wheat grower associations will be organized, which will do much toward enthusing interest in wheat culture.

CARE OF MILK CANS.

Thorough Washing and Sterilization in the Production of Clean Cans.

In justice to the farmer, milk dealers should give considerable attention to the question of washing the cans before they are returned. If the cans are allowed to go back unwashed to the farmer, it is a very difficult task for him, with his limited facilities, to clean them.

In a circular letter recently sent to milk dealers by the Dairy Division of the department, it was pointed out that bacterial counts made from cans which had been washed and rinsed in the ordinary manner showed that there were from 300,000 to 18,000,000 bacteria in each can, with an average of 4,600,000. If 10 gallons of milk were put into one of these cans there would be added more than 100 bacteria to each cubic centimeter of the milk. That is to say, this is the least number that would be added. Whereas, it was pointed out, with a little steaming these same cans could have been rendered practically sterile.

One dealer who recently installed a modern washing machine, employed a bacteria to test the results. It was found that less than 200,000 bacteria were in a can, and among them were no undesirable types. Bacterial counts of cans treated by a less efficient steaming device which this dealer had formerly employed ran as high as 200,000,000 bacteria to the can, including some undesirable kinds.

There are a number of different types of cleaning machines on the market. The aim of all the efficient ones, however, is the thorough cleansing with washing powder and water, rinsing, sterilization with steam, and rapid drying. After this the can should be covered and kept from contamination.

One of the simplest machines is a jet device by means of which sprays of cold and hot water and of steam are successively forced into the can. This type also is equipped sometimes with a drying attachment by means of which a draft of dry air is forced into the can. Another type is the brush machine, in which cans are brushed out with washing powder and water and then rinsed. After washing they may be steamed by a spray of steam. Some of the largest machines are fitted with powerful pumps, the cans in an inverted position being run thru the machine and sprays of soap and water, rinse water, hot water and steam successively forced into them under considerable pressure. They are then dried in the same machine.

The drying of the cans is an important factor, for it not only leaves them in a much better condition, but it tends to prevent rust. The cover also must not be neglected. It is as important that it be as thoroughly cleansed and sterilized as the can itself. It is not a good plan to put the cover on the can until the latter is quite dry. In the interval the can should be kept in a clean place where there is no dust or contamination. Pails, cans, pails and other utensils may be sterilized very efficiently with an inexpensive sterillzer which is fully described in Farmers' Bulletin 748. This bulletin may be obtained upon application to the department.

Raising Frogs in Louisiana.

Swepson Earle, chief engineer of the Conservation Commission of Maryland, is making an investigation as to the possibilities of creating a new industry in the state by catching bullfrogs and marketing them.

"In Maryland," said Mr. Earle, "there are many streams and fresh water ponds where the bullfrog thrives and where his kind can be caught in paying quantities.

"As the outlay necessary to take these frogs from the waters is practically little or nothing, while the return in the way of profit is many hundred-fold, thousands of dollars could be made by the citizens of the State from this undeveloped industry. That frog catching will pay here one has only to look at the recent report of the Conservation Commission of the State of Louisiana.

"While in Louisiana in 1914 my attention was called to the frog industry, which has developed in large proportions. The following is taken from a recent report from the State of Louisiana:

"The frog industry was worth approximately, $110,000 to this State for the calendar year ending December 31, a gain of $10,000 over the year 1913.

"According to the most reliable and avilable information that we have regarding this product, 1,000,000 frogs were shipped out of the State in the year 1915, also 100,000 were used in New Orleans, and about as many consumed elsewhere in the State. Early in the season Louisiana frogs sold at from one dollar to $1.50 per dozen; in midsummer from 50 to 75 cents a dozen."—Baltimore Star

And How to Prevent Spread of Infantile Paralysis.

Dr. C Bolduan, director of public education of the New York City health department, and Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the SRockefeller Institute, explained how to detect symptoms of infantile paralysis and how to ward off the disease and prevent its spread.

The fist symptoms are fever, bowel disturbances, headache and irritability.

After a few hours pains develop, usually in the lower part of the legs and in the feet.

Sometimes there are also pains in the region of the spine, in the arms and neck—stiff neck.

Within twelve hours the patient is unable to move his arms or legs and sometimes cannot talk.

Vomiting, delirium, twitchings and convulsions accompany the progress of the disease.

A temperature of from 100 to 100 degrees lasts two or three days.

Sometimes, but rarely, the patient has chills, sore throat and skin eruptions.

Health is no protection. Often children go to bed apparently well and awake in the night with the first symptoms and are partly paralyzed by morning.

Cleanliness is the only known preventive.

The isolation of children in the house is next in importance.

Have children wash their hands and faces often.

Avoid buying candy, ice cream and fruits which are eaten without being cooked from peddlers and storekeepers who are not careful of their wares.

Don't kiss children on their mouths.

Keep their noses clean. This applies especially to young babies.

Don't cough in their faces.

Protect them from flies.

The germs of this disease, which are so small that they cannot be seen with microscopes and which pass through germ filters, almost always enter the bodies of their victims through the mucus membrances of the nose and throat.

Keep children away from their mates in the streets or at moving picture shows.

Report all cases at once to the board of health, so that the city's doctors can immediately investigate and remove the patients to hospitals.

Adults are not free from the disease. If your hands are dirty or if you are not careful about the preparation of your children's food, remember that you can give your little ones the disease as readily as can outsiders.

Select Seed Corn Now.

Are you going to wait till spring to pick out seed ears for your next corn crop? Although this may be a custom, the experience of the most successful growers shows that seed selected from standing corn in the fall yields more than corn taken from the shock or crib. By fall selection the best ears growing under ordinary conditions may be chosen. By selecting either at husking time or from the crib, the grower picks out ears that grow on unusually productive spots or often with a single plant in a hill. The Station has obtained increases in yield of more than ten bushels per acre by selecting seed ears in the fall from stand-

Mrs. Caroline Harrell, the beloved wife of Charles Harrell, of Verona, died last Wednesday, after a long illness incident to old age, she being eighty years old July 26. Mrs Harrell was a sister of Judge Taylor J. Crowe, who moved from Walton to Covington two years ago. She was married three times, her first husband was named Holder, her second Black, and her last husband survives her and has the sympathy of many friends in his bereavement. Several children also mourn her loss. She was a good christian woman and had a host of friends. The funeral took place Monday, the services being conducted by Rev. D. E. Bedinger of the Methodist church. The remains were laid to rest in New Bethel cemetery.

Monday afternoon Hobart Hopperton, the young son of Charles Hopperton, while carlessly handling a 22 calibre rifle accidentally discharged it, being the same old story, "Didn't know it was loaded," and the bullet found lodgment in the breast of a young girl named Ida Mullins, a sister of Mrs. Hopperton. The wound is a serious one as the bullet penetrated the lung, and a complication is feared. Dr G. C. Rankins was called and gave the sufferer the necessary aid, but was unable to extract the bullet, but as soon as conditions will justify the young lady will be taken to Cincinnati and an X-Ray made to ascertain the exact location of the bullet and then an effort will be made to remove it. Miss Mullins resides near Crittenden and was here on a visitor to her sister and was at the residence of Chas. Hopperton when the accident occurred.

One of the most sorrowful happenings that brought a tear to many an eye in Walton was the death of Miss Myra Gordon Stroth which took place last Saturday night at nine o'clock at the home of her parents Judge and Mrs. Charles Strother, after a futile struggle with that insidious disease typhoid fever. Miss Strother was a most lovable young lady, and by her kindly disposition and sunny nature won her way into the hearts of all with whom she came in contact, and her death caused all to feel the loss of one that was near and dear. Miss Strother was born at Owenton, July 15th, 1896, and had therefore just passed out of her 20th year. When 12 years old she took up the Master's cause, uniting with the M. E church at Owenton, and on moving to Walton transferred her membership here, and took an active part in the Sunday school work, being the teacher of the infant class. In all of her relations she was a modest, kind, christian young lady, the impress of whose life has been left as a sunny smile for the betterment of all. The funeral took place Monday at her late home, her pastor Rev. D. E. Bedinger, assisted by Rev. Ogus Hamilton of the Baptist church, Dr. W. W. Evans of the Presbyterian church and Rev. Geo. D. Prentiss, conducted the services, after which the remains were taken to Owenton where short services were held at the Baptist church and the body was laid to rest in the Owenton cemetery. The sympathy of a host of friends is tendered the grief stricken relatives in their great bereavement. There was a large number accompanied the remains to Owenton from here, and the funeral was in charge of Edwards Bros.

PRESIDENT WILSON ACCEPTS LINCOLN'S BIRTHPLACE

ABE LINCOLN'S BIRTHPLACE

(Courier-Journal.)

Hodgenville, Ky., Sept 4.—No one in this little Kentucky town noticed a small, barefoot boy, clad in homespun, who a century ago dangled his humble toes in Knob Creek, three miles south of here.

Because that backwoods boy swam in that stream, however, and because he was born and lived with his parents on a red clay farm in nearby hills, Hodgenville today found itself the Mecca for thousands of patriotic pilgrims, led by no less a personage than President Woodrow Wilson. Each had come to pay homage at America's new national shrine, the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln.

With the sun shining bright on the grave emancipator's old Kentucky home and in the presence of 20,000 cheering Americans, President Wilson this afternoon accepted from the Lincoln Farm Association the hallowed ground that now is a national memorial park, destined to rank with Mt. Vernon in the affections of the American people.

Standing with bared head beneath the flag that flies from the staff at the foot of the granite steps leading upward to the handsome memorial hall that shelters the rude log cabin in which Lincoln was born, the President delivered an address in which he eulogized in the highest terms his martyred predecessor.

Dies At the Home of Her Daughter in Los Angeles, California.

Word was received in Burlington, last Friday, of the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Ryle, widow of the late Oscar J. Ryle, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. L. Clutterbuck, in Los Angeles, California. She was a daughter of the late William and Charlotte Reed, and was born in Burlington sixty-eight years ago last March. Besides two children, Mrs. R. L. Clutterbuck and William O. Ryle, of Los Angeles, she leaves three sisters, Mrs. Joln Q. Elstun and Mrs Charlotte Davrainville, of San Antonio, Texas, and Mrs. F. A. Hall, of Burlington, and two brothers, Robert B. Reed, of Covington, and Joseph F. Reed, of Walton.

Frank Thatcher Dies.

Frank Thatcher, for many years prominently identified with Campbell county politics, died yesterday at his home in Alexandria. Mr. Thatcher was 72 years of age and for 12 years was a Deputy Sheriff. Later he served as Circuit Court Clerk. He was born and reared in Campbell county and all his life was spent in raising blooded horses. At one time he owned one of the finest stables of trotting horses in this section of the country. He is survived by a family of grown children. The funeral arrangements will be announced later.—Monday's Commercial Tribune.

Large Enrollment.

The Boone County High School began its fall and winter session last Monday with an enrollment of 36, the largest in its history. The total enrollment in the school was 112. Fourteen visitors attended the opening and enjoyed a very interesting program. The school's prospects for this year are very flattering.

Ring Neck Pheasants.

Dr. R. L. Finnell reports that he has on his farm near Verona a covy of 15 young Ring Neck Pheasants. One of the old birds has not been seen for some time. Dr. Finnell has taken extra care of his birds.

Mr. F. A. Hall has a peach tree on which was a bushel of nice fruit, but the tree is dying and the fruit shriveling. A nice shade tree in front of C. C. Robert's residence is dying. No cause can be assigned for the death of either of the above mentioned trees.

The work of reconstructing the Covington and Lexington pike from the end of the car line to the railroad crossing at Erlanger will be a very great inconvenience to many Boone county people, but when the road is completed it will be fine.

When the gap in the Petersburg and Belleview pike and the Rabbit Hash and Landing pike are completed, a person can travel from Constance to Hamilton on a pike and be in sight of the Ohio river a great portion of the time.

Lloyd Ernst, of Hebron, lost his watch or it was stolen from him at the fair last week. It has his wife's picture in it. By returning it to him at Hebron the favor will be appreciated.

Comfortable Log Houses.

A contractor writes to the Hardinsburg Record-Press that he is tearing down a loghouse built at Forke-of-the-Rough in 1780 and that the logs are as sound as they were when they were hewn. The good yellow poplar and white oak which abounded in Kentucky at that time, and which still are abundant in a considerable section of the State, made excellent building material. They made also residences which would be, with modern heating arrangements, and with modern ventilation, exceptionally comfortable in winter and summer.

A house made of hewn logs resists extremes of temperature. As we have in this climate extremely hot weather at one season and extremely cold weather at another, there is no better year-round house. Tle old fashioned means of heating by wood fireplaces was inadequate from the modern point of view at least. And few of the old log houses which survive had enough windows in them, or windows large enough, to meet the requirements of a period in which the health-giving qualities of fresh air are appreciated more highly than they once were. But nature provided in the American wilderness building material which has not been surpassed by any other; impenetrable alike to the tropical heat of temperate zone summer and the almost artic temperature of occasional winter cold waves.

Where it is possible to make the old log house fit into the plan of the larger frame residence that is to be built it is worth saving, not for sentimental reasons merely, but because it has a considerable value. Yet so attractive is the idea of a complete change that few log houses are retained, and the fire insurance companies look upon them as somewhat undesirable risks, figuring a great deal of depreciation due to age, and taking into consideration the probability that the owner would rather have a modern residence and might on that account be careless with matches.—C-J.

If the Trains Stopped Runnting.

What would happen in case of a general and prolonged railroad strike? Evidently the American people would be up against one of the greatest practical exigencies that a civilized society ever confronted.

But human ingenuity has marvelous gifts of meeting such situations. There would be a few weeks of chaos. But the American people are resourceful. They would immediately set themselves to work to devise sybstitute sys tems of transportation.

As the pending controversies relate only to freight traffic, it has been said that passenger business would not be much interfered with. But it would be a mistake to keep men busy running passenger trains who would be needed in the more vital work of handling freight.

Half of the passenger traffic could stop without doing any very serious harm. People could take their outings at home. Suburban dwellers could depend on trolleys and jitneys. Business men could use the telephone. As the mail trains would probably be kept running, letters and circulars could serve. The tendency is to give traveling salesmen compact territory to cover. The greater part of them could make their route by automobile.

The stoppage of freight trains would paralyze all industry. Food distribution today is an amazingly complex machine. The breaking down of the system means famine in a few days. At all hazards public sentiment would demand that the freight business be maintained.

The calamity is so great as to be almost unthinkable. Yet it may take some such disaster to arouse public sentiment to the need for some system for settling labor disputes. The suffering of a strike might be worth while, if it could be settled once for all that neither labor unions nor corporations own the whole United States and that neither has any right to inflict suffering on the public in order to gain their own ends.—Owensboro Inquirer.

HAS KEPT FAITH, SAYS PRESIDENT

Record Shows Promises Fulfilled, Declares Mr. Wilson.

HIS SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE

National Defenses Are Provided For, Trusts Against Trusts Simplified, Tariff Revised, Banking System Reformed, Remedial Measures Benefit Workingmen and Farmers and Merchant Marine Restored.

In his address at Shadow Lawn, Long Branch, N. J., accepting the Democratic nomination for president, Woodrow Wilson said:

"Senator James, Gentlemen of the Notification Committee, Fellow Citizens—I cannot accept the leadership and responsibility which the national Democratic convention has again, in such generous fashion, asked me to accept without first expressing my profound gratitude to the party for the trust it reposes in me after four years of fiery trial in the midst of affairs of unprecedented difficulty and the keen sense of added responsibility with which this honor fills (I had almost said burdens) me as I think of the great issues of national life and policy involved in the present and immediate future conduct of our government. I shall seek, as I have always sought, to justify the extraordinary confidence thus reposed in me by striving to purge my heart and purpose of every personal and of every misleading party motive and devoting every energy I have to the service of the nation as a whole, praying that I may continue to have the counsel and support of all forward looking men at every turn of the difficult business.

"For I do not doubt that the people of the United States will wish the Democratic party to continue in control of the government. They are not in the habit of rejecting those who have actually served them for those who are making doubtful and conjectural promises of service. Least of all are they likely to substitute those who promised to render them particular services and proved false to that promise for those who have actually rendered those very services.

Explicit Promises Fulfilled.

"Boasting is always an empty business, which pleases nobody but the boaster, and I have no disposition to boast of what the Democratic party has accomplished. It has merely done its duty. It has merely fulfilled its explicit promises. But there can be no violation of good taste in calling attention to the manner in which those promises have been carried out or in adverting to the interesting fact that many of the things accomplished were what the opposition party had again and again promised to do, but had left undone. Indeed, that is manifestly part of the business of this year of reckoning and assessment. There is no means of judging the future except by assessing the past. Constructive action must be weighed against destructive comment and reaction."

Mr. Wilson asserted that the Republican party was put out of power because of practical and moral failure, because it had served special interests and not the country at large. Banking reform, the interests of the farmer and the army and navy had been neglected.

Set Free to Move.

"So things stood when the Democratic party came into power. How do they stand now? Alike in the domestic field and in the wide field of the commerce of the world, American business and life and industry have been set free to move as they never moved before.

"The tariff has been revised not on the principle of repelling foreign trade, but upon the principle of encouraging it upon something like a footing of equality with our own in respect of the terms of competition, and a tariff board has been created whose function it will be to keep the relations of American with foreign business and industry under constant observation for the guidance alike of our business men and of our congress. American energies are now directed toward the markets of the world.

"The laws against trusts have been clarified by definition with a view to making it plain that they were not directed against big business, but only against unfair business and the presence of competition where there was none, and a trade commission has been created with powers of guidance and accommodation which have relieved business men of unfounded fears and set them upon the road of hopeful and confident enterprise.

"By the federal reserve act the supply of currency at the disposal of actual business has been rendered elastic, being its volume not from a fixed body of investment securities, but from the liquid assets of daily trade, and these assets are assessed and accessed not by distant groups of bankers in control of unavailable reserves, but by bankers at the many centers of local exchange who are in touch with local conditions everywhere.

"Effective measures have been taken for the re-creation of an American merchant marine and the revival of the American carrying trade indispensable to the emancipation from the [illegible] foreigners have so long [illegible] the concentration, the [illegible] power, the [illegible] of our commerce with other countries.

"The interstate commerce commission has been reorganized to enable it to perform its great and important functions more promptly and more efficiently. We have created, extended and improved the service of the parcels post. So much we have done for business. What other party has understood the task so well or executed it so intelligently and energetically?

"For the farmers of the country we have virtually created commercial credit by means of the federal reserve act and the rural credits act. They now have the standing of other business men in the money market. We have successfully regulated speculation in "futures" and established standards in the marketing of grains. By an intelligent warehouse act we have assisted to make the standard crops available as never before both for systematic marketing and as a security for loans from the banks.

"The workingmen of America have been given a veritable emancipation by the legal recognition of a man's labor as part of his life and not a mere marketable commodity; by exempting labor organizations from processes of the courts, which treated their members like fractional parts of mobs and not like accessible and responsible individuals; by releasing our seamen from involuntary servitude; by making adequate provision for compensation for industrial accidents; by providing suitable machinery for mediation and conciliation in industrial disputes and by putting the federal department of labor at the disposal of the workingman when in search of work.

"We have effected the emancipation of the children of the country by releasing them from hurtful labor. We have instituted a system of national aid in the building of highroads such as the country has been feeling after for a century. We have sought to equalize taxation by means of an equitable income tax. We have taken the steps that ought to have been taken at the outset to open up the resources of Alaska. We have provided for national defense upon a scale never before seriously proposed upon the responsibility of an entire political party. We have driven the tariff lobby from cover and obliged it to substitute solid argument for private influence.

A Record of Promises Kept.

"This extraordinary recital must sound like a platform, a list of sanguine promises, but it is not. It is a record of promises made four years ago and now actually redeemed in constructive legislation. We have in four years come very near to carrying out the platform of the Progressive party as well as our own, for we also are progressives."

This program, Mr. Wilson declared, was resisted at every step by interests which the Republican party had fostered at the expense of the country, interests which had fought the reform of the banking and currency system and which were now planning for the amendment of the federal reserve act by the concentration of control in a single bank which the "old familiar group of bankers" can keep under their eye and direction. But while the "big men" who used to write the tariffs and command the assistance of the treasury have been hostile—all but a few with vision—the average business man knows that he has been delivered unless the party that consulted only the "big men" should return to power. They still select its candidates and dictate its policy, he said.

Foreign Affairs.

Concerning foreign affairs, we have been neutral because it was the traditional policy of the United States to stand aloof from European politics, Mr. Wilson declared. Property rights of our citizens can be vindicated by claims for damages, but the fundamental rights of humanity cannot be.

"The loss of life is irreparable. Neither can direct violations of a nation's sovereignty await vindication in suits for damages. The nation that violates these essential rights must expect to be checked and called to account by direct challenge and resistance. It at once makes the quarrel in part our own. These are plain principles, and we have never lost sight of them or departed from them. The passions and intrigues of certain active groups and combinations of men among us who were born under foreign flags injected the poison of disloyalty into our own most critical affairs, laid violent hands upon many of our industries and subjected us to the shame of divisions of sentiment and purpose in which America was contemned and forgotten. It is part of the business of this year of reckoning and settlement to speak plainly and act with unmistakable purpose in rebuke of these things in order that they may be forever hereafter impossible. I am the candidate of a party, but I am above all things else an American citizen. I neither seek the favor nor fear the displeasure of that small alien element among us which puts loyalty to any foreign power before loyalty to the United States."

The Mexican Trouble.

Concerning Mexico the president stated that we believed that small and weak states have the right to expect to be dealt with exactly as big and powerful states would be. Our recent pursuit of bandits into Mexican territory was no violation of that principle. We ventured to enter Mexican territory only because there were no military forces in Mexico that could protect our border from hostile attack and our own people from violence.

Many serious wrongs against the property, many irreparable wrongs against the persons of Americans have been committed within the territory of Mexico herself during this confused revolution, but we could not act directly in that matter ourselves without denying Mexicans the right to any revolution at all which disturbed us and making the emancipation of her own people await our interest and convenience.

"The people of Mexico have not been suffered to own their own country or direct their own institutions. Outsiders, men out of other nations and with interests too often alien to their own, have dictated what their privileges and opportunities should be and who should control their land, their lives and their resources—some of them Americans, pressing for things they could never have got in their own country. The Mexican people are entitled to attempt their liberty from such influences, and so long as I have anything to do with the action of our great government I shall do everything in my power to prevent any one standing in their way. It is hard doctrine only for those who wish to get something for themselves out of Mexico. I have heard no one who was free from such influences propose interference by the United States with the internal affairs of Mexico. Certainly no friend of the Mexican people has proposed it.

The "Unspeakable Huerta."

"The people of Mexico are striving for the rights that are fundamental to life and happiness—15,000,000 oppressed men, overburdened women and pitiful children in virtual bondage in their own home of fertile lands and inexhaustible treasure. Some of the leaders of the revolution may often have been mistaken and violent and selfish, but the revolution itself was inevitable and is right. The unspeakable Huerta betrayed the very comrades he served, traitorously overthrew the government of which he was a trusted part, imprudently spoke for the very forces that had driven his people to the rebellion with which he had pretended to sympathize. The men who overcame him and drove him out represent at least the fierce passion of reconstruction which lies at the very heart of liberty, and so long as they represent, however imperfectly, such a struggle for deliverance I am ready to serve their ends when I can. So long as the power of recognition rests with me the government of the United States will refuse to extend the hand of welcome to any one who obtains power in a sister republic by treachery and violence. No permanency can be given the affairs of any republic by a title based upon intrigue and assassination. Mistakes I have no doubt made in this perplexing business, but not in purpose or object."

To Play a Leading Part.

The president declared that we must be prepared both in resources and in policy to play our part when Europe's war is over. There must be a just and settled peace, and the nations of the world must unite in joint guarantees that whatever is done to disturb the whole world's life must first be tested in the court of the whole world's opinion before it is attempted.

"We have created in the federal trade commission a means of inquiry and of accommodation in the field of commerce which ought both to coordinate the enterprises of our traders and manufacturers and to remove the barriers of misunderstanding and of a too technical interpretation of the law. In the new tariff commission we have added another instrumentality of observation and adjustment which promises to be immediately serviceable. The trade commission substitutes counsel and accommodation for the harsher processes of legal restraint, and the tariff commission ought to substitute facts for prejudices and theories.

"We can no longer indulge our traditional provincialism. We are to play a leading part in the world drama whether we wish it or not. We shall lend, not borrow; act for ourselves, not imitate or follow; organize and initiate, not peep about merely to see where we may get in.

"We have already formulated and agreed upon a policy of law which will explicitly remove the ban now supposed to rest upon co-operation among our exporters in seeking and securing their proper place in the markets of the world. At home we have put all kinds of unfair competition under the ban and penalty of the law. We have barred monopoly. We ought both to husband and to develop our natural resources, our mines, our forests, our water power.

"We must hearten and quicken the spirit and efficiency of labor throughout our whole industrial system by everywhere and in all occupations doing justice to the laborer, not only by paying a living wage, but also by making all the conditions that surround labor what they ought to be. We must co-ordinate the railway systems of the country for national use and must facilitate and promote their development with a view to that co-ordination and to their better adaptation as a whole to the life and trade and defense of the nation."

In conclusion Mr. Wilson said that he had sought to interpret the spirit and meaning of the St. Louis platform, and that the people knew that that platform was a definite pledge which would be kept. The day of little Americanism, with its narrow horizons, when methods of "protection" and industrial nursing were the chief study of our provincial statesmen, was past and gone.

"We are Americans for big America and rejoice to look forward to the days when all mankind shall look upon our great people with a new sentiment of admiration, friendly rivalry and real affection as upon a people who, though keen to succeed, seeks always to be at once generous and just and to whom humanity is dearer than profit or selfish power. Upon this record and in the faith of this purpose we go to the country."

THE LUSCIOUS PRUNE.

Prunes are so wholesome, so easy to prepare and withal so reasonable in price that they should be served often in families where there are children and workers who take little active exercise.

Prune Sandwich.—Remove the pits from prunes that have been soaked over night, then gently simmered until tender. Do not add any sugar, as there is plenty of sweetness in the fruit itself. Press through a sieve and mix with a few chopped nuts; spread on buttered bread.

For a delicious dessert, take this prune pulp prepared as above, mix with a little sweetened whipped cream and heap on rounds of sponge cake that have been soaked in a little of the prune juice. Sprinkle with chopped nuts and garnish with a fine, shapely prune.

Prune Pudding.—Mix well two beaten eggs, a pint of milk, a cupful of prunes that have been stewed and pitted, a cupful of bread crumbs. If sponge-cake crumbs are used no sugar need be added; if bread, add sugar enough to sweeten, and a pinch of salt. Bake in a slow oven until firm. Serve with whipped cream or a lemon sauce.

Prune Jelly.—Stew two cupfuls of well-washed prunes that have been soaked over night, until soft; pit and press through a colander; add an ounce of gelatin that has been softened in cold water to cover; add lemon juice, and sweeten to taste, then add a half cupful of boiling water; turn out to mold after it has been well mixed and the gelatin is thoroughly dissolved. Serve with sweetened whipped cream.

Prune pie may be served in more than one way. Bake a shell, fill with the stewed fruit, cover with a meringue and brown in the oven. Or put into an uncooked pastry shell, fill with prunes, cover with latticed strips of pastry and bake. Serve with whipped cream or a meringue.

HELPFUL HINTS.

If a tile becomes loose in the fireplace or floor do not let it remain loose as it will be apt to become broken. A few cents worth of plaster of Paris will do the work. Mix with vinegar or water and set it, wipe off the paste and let it set for a few minutes when it will be firm.

If the faucet leaks do not think it is necessary to call a plumber, turn off the water, remove the faucet and put on a new washer. Purchase a few washers and have them on hand when needed. A wrench will be needed to remove the faucet.

Sometime the drain is stopped by lint and congealed fat. If boiling water poured down the drain in a large quantity does not open it up, just unscrew with a wrench the plate at the bottom of the trap shaped like a letter S. Clean out this pipe, for more times than any other this is the cause of the stoppage. Use sal soda in boiling water often to flush the pipes, this will dissolve all fats and keep the pipes clean.

When chair bottoms made of reed or rattan sag, stand them in a tub and pour boiling water through the rattan, being careful not to wet the wood. This treatment will make the cane shrink and they will be as taut as ever when dry.

Have the faucets of the kitchen sink, at least one of them, with threads at the bottom to attach the garden hose; this may prove a great comfort in time of fire in the house or one can use the hose to wash the porches.

When serving canned pears, drain off some of the pear juice which may be served for other uses and add orange juice with a little sugar. The flavor is most agreeable and improves the pears greatly.

When whipping cream in a bowl with a Dover egg beater put the beater handle through the bottom of a paper bag which has been slipped over the bowl to save the spattering of the cream.

When slicing tongue do not cut straight across the tongue; but diagonally; this makes better slices and there are no small dry tips left.

President Wilson At Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., Sept 4.—Republicans gathered in Lexington tonight as an advance guard to greet Charles E. Hughes, the party candidate for President, tomorrow, when he opens the State campaign for the Republican party, witnessed the most remarkable demonstration ever given to a national figure here when President Woodrow Wilson appeared on the rear platform of his special train at Union station tonight, on his way from Hodgenville to Washington.

Thirty minutes before the special train was scheduled to arrive every foot of space within two city blocks of the station was jammed with men, women and children, and when the train pulled in the gatekeepers were unable to keep back the throng and the iron fencing separating the depot proper from the tracks was literally torn down by the vast crowd, eager to get close to the President and shake his hand.

It had been planned by local Democratic leaders for the President to make a short speech during the time his train stopped here to change engines, but the crowd surging about the rear platform was so dense and the uproar so great it was impossible for President Wilson to utter a word that could be heard five feet from where he stood. Seeing that he could not be heard, President Wilson confined his activities to shaking hands with the throng, and it was estimated that during the brief period the train stopped here, perhaps ten minutes, he grasped the hands of more than 1,000 people. During the time the Nation's Chief Executive was busy shaking the hands of his admirers, Mrs. Wilson looked out of the window of the private coach and continually bowed to the thousands who were unable to get close enough to the platform to grasp the hand of her husband.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES.

Many of the religious journals have commented on the fact that practically all the candidates for President and Vice-President on the Democratic, Republican and Prohibition tickets for 1916 are religious men.

It is well known the country over, that President Wilson and Vice-President Marshall occupy the position of elders or bishops in the Presbyterian church.

Charles E. Hughes, who heads the ticket for the Republicans, is a prominent member of the Baptist church, and doubtless a good man. If Mr. Hughes should be elected next November he will be the first Baptist, so far as the writer knows, ever elected to the presidency.

Ex-Gov. J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana, is the Prohibition candidate for President, and he stands high in the councils of the M. E church. Mr. Hanly's running mate, Dr. Landreth, now of Boston, Mass., is one of the strong men in the Presbyterian church. Dr. Landreth is a noted educator, a man of the Woodrow Wilson type, a fine platform orator.

Between the platforms of the two dominent parties there is little difference. But between these platforms and that of the Prohibitionists there is a world of difference. The Republican and Democratic parties have turned down, ignored the greatest question that ever concerned humanity.

Hanly and Landreth stand on the greatest political platform that was ever formulated. This ticket is the writer's first choice, and that from principle.

But if this race is to be between Wilson and Hughes, then by all means give us Wilson

What has become of T. R? Has he crawled into his hole? This would be the thing for him to do. He has gone square back on his great reform principles he advocated four years ago—and why? Simply to beat Wilson. Poor Teddy! Is he not a man today without a party?

Coming Into Our Own.

Fifteen cent cotton, the highest price reached by the staple since 1910, is already here. Sixteen cent cotton is on the way.—Not only that, it is coming to stay and to go still higher. It would not be surprising if, before there is a backward drop of any moment, it went up to somewhere around the record breaking figures of the period immediately following the close of the civil war.

The south is at last coming into its own and coming rapidly, regardless of the continuance of the European war and of the doubtful termination of that conflict.

If the European conflict were to end tomorrow it would send cotton up in a more remarkable and more spectacular manner than the history of the market has ever recorded. It would mean record breaking prices for the staple for two years to come, regardless of the size of the crop. Contracts for actual cotton would be made for delivery 18 months hence, and the southern producer would be in the heyday of a prosperity he has scarcely known in a quarter of a century.—Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

Columbia, Aug. 31.—While road hands were blasting for rock on land that belongs to the Zion church building, four miles from Columbia, they struck a pool of oil a nd became greatly excited. Some of the oil was gathered and placed in bottles. It looks and burns like crude oil. It has long been believed that there was oil in the section of the county.

The Test of Education.

A great professor in the university of Chicago told his pupils that he should consider them educated in the best sense of the word when they would say "yes" to every one of fourteen questions he should put to them. It may be of interest to you to read the questions so here they are.

Has your education given you sympathy with all good causes and made you espouse them?

Has it made you public spirited?

The Commnnity Bellwether.

Every farmer who raises sheep knows to what the above refers. The "bell wether" is the leader of the flock. He usually wears a bell, and wherever he and his bell go thither his flock obediently follows. For good or ill, to safety or into danger, where he leads they go. If he happens to be a wise old fellow his followers profit by his wisdom, but if he develops vicious and unreliable traits disaster is almost certain to overtake the flock.

Have you ever paused to think how like sheep are we humans in this respect? Look around in almost any community and you will easily spot the bell wether. And not only can you locate him, but a little study of local conditions will invariably disclose to the careful observer his true characteristics as a leader.

If the community is progressive prosperous, law abiding and happy, you may put it down that this state of affairs results largely from the fact that these qualities are inherent in the leaders of com munity life.

We know that many people like to think and assert that we are all equal and recognize no leaders, but this is purely a figment of the imagination. Nine out of every ten of us are too busy with our own affairs to take time to attend to the details of community life. There are a thousand and one questions of public import that must fall to the lot of some one who has the time and the capacity to grapple with them and under such conditions community leaders are developed. If, happily, he possesses wisdom, coupled with a spirit of unselfish devotion to the interests of the community, then the community is indeed fortunate. But when he develops vicious traits and an inclination for selfseeking, then, like the sheep, his followers are in danger.

While, as we have said, most of us are too busily engaged in our own pursuits to assume these burdens of civic responsibility, we yet may keep a watchful eye upon those who have assumed the burdens and assist them in the faithful discharge of their trusts.

This we can and should do, every one of us. This is a pretty good old world, after all, and safe leaders and public officials can easily be found, and every public spirited citizen should join the hunt.

Harlan, Aug. 28.—Deputy Sheriff George Dean was shot and instantly killed by a spectator at a ball game at Croxton, six miles east of Harlan. The spectators were crowding on the base line when Sheriff Dean requested them to move back.

Franklin, Aug. 28.—A hog, five months and seventeen days old, and weighing 225 pounds, was shipped to the Louisville market from the Franklin station. The animal weighed sixty-eight pounds May 17 last and had been fed in the pen with one of the Pig Club hogs.

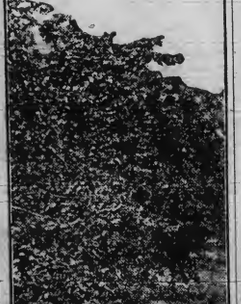
Maysville, Aug. 28.—Farmers in this section are making preparations to harvest the largest and best tobacco crop grown in many years. Only a few have sold their crops, the majority holding for the loose leaf markets, where they have been promised all sorts of high prices.

It is an old but true adage that many a fellow with a too loquacious tongue frequently gets his "foot in his mouth," but a few days ago it fell to the lot of a horse belonging to Will Tom Tolliver to equal that dexterous performance of man. Seeing the animal down in the stable lot, Mr. Tolliver hurried to its assistance, when he discovered that it had one of its hind feet securely fastened in its mouth and was perfectly helpless. By prying and pulling he at last succeeded in relieving the animal from his precarious position, but not until several of the animal's teeth had been broken by the calk of the shoe. How the horse ever got in that position is a mystery.—Morehead Mountaineer.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

PROFIT FROM HOME ORCHARD

Good Returns Can Be Obtained by Paying Attention at Proper Time—Won't Stand Neglect.



That the average home orchard is a liability rather than an asset is a thing much to be regretted. However, this is true, for some orchards are too much neglected to produce even a good home supply of fruit. Such an orchard occupies valuable farm land on which it pays neither taxes nor interest on the money invested. The orchard is not at fault, it is the owner. If a grain crop or bunch of live stock was neglected it would return even less than a neglected orchard. But with attention at the proper time the orchard, like the grain crop or live stock, will yield good returns. The experimental work conducted for a number of years at Purdue has demonstrated that orchards can be made paying investments.

The net profits of a properly managed orchard will average $126.34 per acre every year. These results may be obtained from the average neglected farm orchards. Every farm should have an orchard, but it should not be so large as to demand more attention than the owner can give it. If proper attention cannot be given the fruit trees it is better that they be cut down and the space they occupy be given to other crops.

INJURY BY RED APPLE BUGS

Comparatively New Pest, But Has Done Enormous Amount of Damage in New York Orchards.

The apple red bug is a comparatively new pest, but it has done an enormous amount of damage in apple orchards in many parts of New York for the past two or three seasons. It is not often seen, but the results of its work are all too apparent at picking time, when the fruit is found to be more or less deformed so that it will not pass for "A" grade. The injury is caused by punctures which the insect makes in young apples in order to suck out the juice. The tissue does not develop normally around these punctures and a slight depression is left in the fruit. A small, greenish core may also be seen when cutting across one of these depressions, of which there may be as many as 100 on a single apple. The Northern Spy seems to be especially subject to attack by this insect.

New York Apple Orchard.

The remedy is to spray with some contact insecticide, when the insects are present and before they begin to work on the young fruit. Experiment stations agree that a tobacco extract is effective in controlling this insect.

KEROSENE MADE INTO SPRAY

Hard or Soft Soap and Boiling Water, With Oil Added as Desired, Favored for Aphides.

Dissolve half a pound of hard soap or one quart of soft soap in one gallon of boiling water. Add two gallons of kerosene and churn with a force pump by pumping it back and forth for five or ten minutes until the oil is thoroughly emulsified, forming a creamy mass with no drop of oil visible. This stock emulsion may be diluted to contain the desired per cent of kerosene.

For aphides one part of stock solution should be diluted with from ten to fifteen parts of water, giving from four to six per cent kerosene in the spray.

PLANS OF EXPERIENCED MEN

Buy Only Standard Varieties Which Have Done Well—Not Caught by Fake Nursery Agents.

Experienced fruit growers buy only the standard varieties which have been tested and have done well in their vicinity. They experiment only in the smallest way with novelties. They are never caught by fake nursery agents. They deal only with salesmen and nurseries certified to by the state as dealing in nursery stock that is free from insect and fungous pests.

A FEW DELICIOUS SALADS.

A slice of fresh tomato on a crisp white lettuce leaf with a spoonful of mayonnaise sprinkled with chopped chives will make a most dainty and tasty salad.

Diced pineapple mixed with one-third the quantity of pecan meats and dressed with mayonnaise, served on head lettuce, is another delicious salad.

Cabbage Salad.—Chop enough cabbage to make two cupfuls, add chopped peanuts enough to flavor it well, two tablespoonfuls of scraped onion and French dressing highly seasoned with salt and red pepper. A little red pepper cut in fine strips may be used as a garnish to this nice salad.

Potato Salad.—Mix cold boiled potatoes, cut in cubes with crisp cucumber, also cut in cubes, sprinkled with chopped onion, pour over mayonnaise and garnish with minced parsley.

Apple-Cheese Salad.—Pare apples and cut in small balls with a French vegetable cutter, marinate in French dressing and chill. Mash a cream cheese, season with a teaspoonful each of worcestershire sauce and chopped red pepper. Shape into balls the same size the apple and heap a few of each on crisp lettuce. Serve with French dressing.

Meat Salad.—Cut chicken, beef or veal into fine pieces, removing all fat and gristle. To each two cupfuls of meat add a cupful of chopped celery and one small onion, finely minced. Just before serving add enough boiled dressing, highly seasoned, to make it hold together.

Cabbage Salad.—Chop a small cabbage head very fine, with an onion, fry until brown a slice of salt pork cut in fine cubes, pour over the cabbage the hot fat and browned cubes, stir and season well with salt and red pepper, then add enough boiling-hot vinegar to season well and serve hot. This is a salad which may take the place of a vegetable at dinner.

Jello or gelatine used with cut fruit and served with a French dressing, makes another nice salad, serve on head lettuce.

DISHES FOR THE INVALIDS.

The necessary requisites for an invalid's service are wholesomeness of food, appropriate kinds for the person served and prompt and dainty service. Do not confer with the invalid as to what he would like to eat, for the various surprises will help to tickle his appetite.

The tray on which the food is served should be covered with a spotless napkin, folded to cover a good-sized tray. The smallest, prettiest dishes should be placed on it and everything in an orderly manner. All hot foods should be served hot and cold foods cold on well-chilled dishes.

For a fever patient, fruit juice in cold water makes most refreshing drinks. Serve in small glasses rather than in too large quantities. This is a rule which should be observed in all serving to sick people.

Oatmeal Gruel.—Take two-thirds of a cupful of oatmeal, add three pints of boiling water and a teaspoonful of salt; cook for two and a half hours in a double boiler. Remove from the fire and strain. When using for a patient, use half a cupful of the gruel with a half cupful of thin cream, two tablespoonfuls of boiling water and sugar to taste. A grating of nutmeg or cinnamon may be added in some cases. Other gruels may be prepared in the same manner, using barley, cornmeal, rice or farina.

Chicken Custard.—Take a cupful and a half of crumbs from the center of a loaf, add to them two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped chicken breast. Beat the yolks of two eggs until well mixed, add to them a dash of celery salt, a pinch of salt and a cupful of milk. Mix all well and pour into a custard cup set in hot water and bake until the custard is set. Serve hot.

Simple custards are both wholesome and dainty to serve to an invalid. Float-island, with small cubes of jelly on the egg white, makes a most attractive dish which will be especially pleasing to children. The sight must be appealed to in the sick, so a study of pretty combinations pleasing to the eye is worth while.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good. I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without so tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of wonderful success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

Edmiral Dewey's Statement.

Every patriotic American must have read with profound satisfaction the statement from Admiral Dewey concerning the new navy bill. It is "expert opinion" of the highest character; the opinion not merely of a bureau officer, but of a naval strategist, a commander, a fearless leader, a man who, all of his life, has been weighing the arguments and counter arguments concerning the new types of ships, naval strategy and foreign policies.

In the opinion of Admiral Dewey this new bill makes the United States navy indisputably the second navy in the world. It is, moreover, a bill drawn in accordance with recent experience, and provides "a well-balanced navy" of offense and defense; an American navy for the protection of American rights.

Further than this, Admiral Dewey answers the partisan criticism of our naval administration. He praises the personnel of the navy. He declares that the policy of the navy, that has been blindly assailed, has been vindicated by the re-enlistment of men who have served out their term. He points to an increase of 6,000 in the force manning the ships and the provision of the new bill for a further increase.

Concerning the marksmanship Admiral Dewey is alike emphatic and satisfactory. Then he responds to the assaults made upon Secretary Daniels because of his order excluding liquor from the ships. Admiral Dewey says there may have been some dissatisfaction with the order when it was issued, but it has all passed away; that our officers recognize the value of this order, and it has since been applies to the conduct of the navies of the world.

Mr. Hughes, who, we believe, is running for President, says he wants not only to know that we are going to appropriate money for preparedness, and especially for a navy, but he wants to know that the money is properly expended. The response to Mr Hughes that comes from a review of the new bill by Admiral Dewey is complete and crushing. It is manifest that the affairs of the government are at this time in perfectly safe hands.—Louisville Post.

One of the town egg dealers in assorting his eggs, ran across one marked May 27, the date it was set. The egg failed to hatch, and the owner could not afford to lose it when eggs are bringing 24 cents a dozen, so it accidentally got mixed with the good ones, and it brought as much, if it was soured. —Falmouth Outlook.

The car was damaged to the extent of one fender torn off and the windshield broken. No one was hurt.

Fruit growers of Henderson co., are preparing their fruit exhibits for the Kentucky State Fair at Louisville. Henderson county fruit especially apples, have taken first premiums for the past four years, and growers say they will take to Louisville next week the finest display of apples ever sent from here. This county is the pioneer Winesap apple county in Kentucky, and the exhibit this year is expected to eclipse all former ones.

Judge M. L Tribble, of Fayette county, has grown two crops in one season on the same land. A field of forty acres was planted in barley, which was put in early and carefully cultivated. About forty bushels to the acre was produced and harvested. Later twenty acres of the same land were planted in corn and the remainder of the land in cow peas and soy beans. The corn was planted about the middle of June, rather late, but 10 bushels to the acre is the estimate now.

ASCRIBES BAD WEATHER TO WAR FRONT GUNS.

Steamship Officers Convinced Firing Causes Wind and Rain.

Captains and officers of the Atlantic liners trading to N. Y., are firm in the belief that the unusual rains and violent windstorms which have been so frequent this summer are partially due to the continuous firing of the heavy guns on the continent added to the explosions on the sea.

Captain Capper and the officers of the Cunarder Pannonia said the weather in the channel was the worst they had ever experienced at this time of the year, and in London there were not five sunny days the whole of July.

Reports brought from Paris by the officers of the French liner Rochambeau stated that the sun had only shone for three days out of the thirty-one in July, which is usually the sunniest and hottest month of the year at the French capital.

Captains of Italian liners trading to New York from Genoa state that the weather in the Mediterranean instead of being calm and hot is subject to frequent violent windstorms with heavy downpours of rain similar to those which occur in the latitudes of the "doldrums"—that is, ten degrees either side of the equator.

Reports from northern Europe state that the summer weather there is the same as it is in England and France and more resembled March in its boisterous winds and rain than June or July. Russian meteorological statistics show an unusual amount of rain and excessive cold. In Moscow up to the middle of July there had been no sign of summer or of the hot weather which usually sets in before June, in the Scandinavian countries the weather has been as dull, damp and chilly as it has been reported in England.

Southern Germany has been subjected to violent rains, and Lake Constance is abnormally high, according to reports just received. Austria, Hungary and the Balkan provinces, as well as Turkey, have experienced a series of storms all through June and July.

Party vs. People.

There is too much party and too little people in our American scheme of government. Party rules and the people are ruled, whereas the people themselves should do the ruling.

Two distinct classes of people compose the voting population, those who vote blinded with their party and those who prefer the man of integrity and ability. The latter are generally referred to as independent voters.

The blind partisan gives but little heed to the real qualities of the man in the selection of a candidate. The one requisite in his eyes is the ability to carrol votes.

When our primary laws were enacted they were designed, or at least so it was said, to give the people an opportunity to express their individual preferences in the selection of candidates for public office.

But the law does nothing of the kind. Under its provisions the politicians are still in the saddle and driving the people to the polls almost as relentlessly as in the palmy days of old.

But few men dare to aspire to any office without the O. K. of the political leaders, and men who secure the endorsement of those leaders are but too often subservient to the will of those leaders.

Political slates are made up behind closed doors and in secret conference and the voice of the people is neither desired nor invited. It is ignored if it is given.

The result is that when primary day comes around the people, who fondly prate of their sovereign rights go blindly and obediently to the polls and vote their choice between certain candidates selected for them by the political bosses.

That, in a nutshell, is the plain reason why our high offices are filled from year to year with politicians instead of statesmen.

We repeat, there is entirely too much party and too little people in our misnamed Republican form of government, or Democratic form of government, whichever you prefer to term it.

The professional politicians are firmly seated in the saddles of both political parties and there they will stay and rule with a ruthless hand until the people themselves muster up sufficient courage to throw them out.

But will that day ever come?

Seven Reasons for More Sheep

It never has been disputed that sheep are of great value on the farm. Some men who have had years of practical experience with sheep and have raised a flock in connection with other classes of livestock, declare that they have derived the largest and easiest income from sheep. From the standpoint of profit they consider: First, the small sum of money required for the establishment of a flock; second, the small expense incurred in building suitable shelter for sheep; third, the little care sheep require in the summer, during the farmer's busiest time; fourth, the extermination of weeds on the farm by the sheep; fifth, the enrichment of the soil on which the sheep graze by the even distribution of their manure, which is of much value to the land; sixth, that with present prices of wool a breeding ewe ought to pay for more than her keep and that her lamb or lambs are their net profit; and seventh, that since the demand for them is ever growing stronger, mutton and wool are constantly increasing in value.—Wisconsin Bulletin.

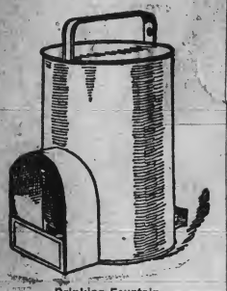
PROFIT FROM PIGEONS



Eggs Usually Fertile if Birds Are Properly Fed.

Fountains or Pans Are Best Adapted for Drinking Vessels—Mixture of Staple Grains May Be Used for Feeding.

Pigeon eggs are usually fertile if the pigeons are healthy and properly fed, especially when they have free range. One squab (usually the male) frequently hatches first, and where there are several cases where one squab outgrows its nest mate, it may be advisable to sort the squabs in the nests, making the pairs as uniform as possible in size and age. If the parent bird dies the squabs may sometimes be removed to a nest where there is only one squab, or they may be fed artificially, although this process takes considerable time.

Roosts of various sizes, usually arranged in perpendicular rows, are placed at convenient points in the pen. A good type of roost is A-shaped made of two boards about 5 inches wide and 6 or 7 inches long, placed directly over each other so that the pigeons will not soil one another with their droppings. If hoppers or feed troughs are used they should be of good size, while the hoppers should be constructed so that the pigeons cannot waste the grain easily by throwing it onto the floor. Fountains or pans with floats in which the pigeon cannot bathe are best adapted for drinking vessels, while a galvanized-iron pan from 3 to 4 inches deep and 15 to 25 inches in diameter makes a good bath pan.

Many varieties of grain are used in feeding pigeons. A good mixture of staple grains may be made of equal parts by weight of cracked corn, hard red wheat, kafir corn, and Canada peas, with a small quantity (10 per cent) of hemp and millet seed added during the molting season. Other grains which may be substituted for or added to these are peanuts, oats or hulled oats, buckwheat, Egyptian corn, barley, cowpeas, and milo maize, while a small quantity of stale bread, rice, rape, millet, canary, vetch, and sunflower seed may be fed for variety. Canada peas are expensive, but seem to be essential to the best results, especially during the breeding season, and apparently take the place of green feed to some extent. Peanuts are being used to some extent in place of Canada peas. Green feed, such as cut clover, alfalfa and grass, lettuce, and plantain leaves may be fed to advantage, but is not absolutely essential.

GROWTH OF POULT IS RAPID

Furnish Plenty of Nutritious and Easily Digested Food—Make Changes in Ration Gradually.

The growth of young turkeys is rapid. Give plenty of nutritious and easily digested food. For the first five days feed four parts of bread crumbs and one part of boiled eggs. Feed one meal a day of rolled oats and give all the sour milk they will drink. Change gradually and in three weeks feed six parts of wheat and two parts of corn, with rolled oats once a day. From the time the birds are ten weeks old until maturity give: Wheat, ten parts; whole oats, two parts—increasing to ten parts in two weeks; cracked corn, ten parts.

TREAT WIRE FENCE INJURIES

First Wash Wounds Thoroughly With Warm Water—Use Care Not to Cause Infection.

When animals are injured by getting into a barbed wire fence their wounds should be washed thoroughly with warm water, then the hair around the cut clipped and the wound washed again. Dirt can be removed from the cut by means of absorbent cotton. Care should be taken not to cause infection. A powder made by mixing together equal parts of slaked lime, powdered sulphur and charcoal dusted on will have a healing effect.

INCREASED GROWTH OF SCAB

For Legumes Limestone Has Other Effects Than That of Merely Counteracting Acidity.

It is just possible that for legumes limestone has other effects than those of merely counteracting acidity. On potatoes most lime does certainly increase the growth of scab germs; and as the soil it may increase possibly the number of nitrogen absorbing bacteria which forms the leguminous nodules.

CLEANLINESS MUST BE FIRST

Success With Dairy Depends Greatly Upon Attention to Details in and Around Barn.

In order that milk may be sanitary and healthy the cows must be healthy, clean and well cared for, and must not be given feeds that will produce objectionable flavors in the milk; barns must be well lighted, ventilated and kept clean and be roomy enough to prevent undue crowding of cows; barnyards must be kept reasonably clean, and should be well drained so as to insure, as far as possible, cleanliness of cow; manure must not accumulate near or be piled against the barn; the floor of the milk room should be of concrete, the room being well lighted, ventilated and screened; utensils such as cans, bottles and milk pails must be washed and scalded after each use, and all tinware must be free from open seams and rust; water supply for cows and for cooling and cleaning purposes must be clean and free from contamination; steam or hot water should be used for cleaning and sterilizing utensils.—Clemson College Bulletin.

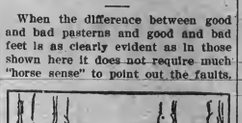
WHITEWASH THAT WILL LAST



Formula for Making Covering Used by Government on Lighthouses Maintained Along Coast.

To make the whitewash which has been used for more than ten years in the White House at Washington and on the lighthouses maintained by the government along the coasts, take a half bushel of unslaked lime and slake it with boiling water. Cover during the process to keep in the steam. Strain the liquid through a fine sieve or strainer and add to it a peck of salt, which previously has been dissolved in warm water; 3 pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste and stirred in while hot; ½ pound Spanish whiting; and 1 pound of glue previously dissolved by soaking in water and then hanging over hot water. This is best accomplished by putting in a small pail and hanging in a larger one filled with water. Add 5 gallons of hot water to the mixture, stir well, and let stand a few days covered. It should be applied hot, for which purpose it can be kept in a portable furnace.

CORRECT TYPES OF PASTERNS

It Does Not Require Much "Horse Sense" to Point Out Faults as Illustrated Herewith.

When the difference between good and bad pasterns and good and bad feet is as clearly evident as in those shown here it does not require much "horse sense" to point out the faults.

Pastern Types.

"A" is a good example of a pastern that is too upright and too straight. In "B" the pastern goes to the other extreme, being too sloping. The correct type of the forefoot is seen in "C," while "D" shows the correct type of hind foot.

ERADICATE THE HESSIAN FLY

Pointers From Expert of Missouri College of Agriculture—Starve the Pest, He Says.

(By T. J. TALBERT, Missouri College of Agriculture.)

Plow early.
Bury the fly.
Destroy all volunteer wheat.
Sow on or soon after fly-free date.
Use oats or rye as fall pasture. The fly can't eat oats and it cares little for rye.
Deep plowing of wheat stubble buries the fly and a good harrowing makes it harder for him to escape.
Starve the fly till about the middle of October then sow and you'll have no Hessian fly next year if all your neighbors do the same. If one of them sows early or lets volunteer wheat stand, his fly crop will probably get your wheat next year.

BARN MANURE BREEDS FLIES

Unsightly Heap Should be Removed to Garden or Field Where Value Is Appreciated.

Although a most excellent fertilizer, there is nothing that will breed flies more quickly or certainly than stable manure; and as flies carry disease, then the unsightly heap should be removed to the garden or field where its value is appreciated.

WAR BREEDS FICTION.

"Peace hath its victories no less renowned than those of war," but war can come right back at peace and give it good long odds in the matter of encouraging fiction. The two years of the war so far have marshalled more words to express purely imaginary statements than any similar period in all history, says Omaha Bee. No once was possible for the gifted war correspondent to re-enforce his vivid accounts of battle with some flavor of facts, but nowadays, under the tender but ceaseless vigilance of the censor, he is reduced to producing romance exclusively. No irrefragable fact is permitted to buttress a column of eloquent description, for that might give the enemy some information. Even the official reports of the belligerents vie in nervous competition at dissembling, if not actual distortion, of facts. The practice of trifling with truth is not common to one side. Each is bent on getting its own version of happenings to the world ahead of the other fellow's, and in the best light possible. Truth is hidden away in secret records, where it will ever remain, while the world outside is fed on well-prepared accounts of battles that rest on claims rather than accomplishments. This is vividly emphasized just at present, while interested readers still blame the newspapers for not printing the "truth."

The British bank of South America reports that the amount of coffee carried forward from last year's crop in Brazil is very small, which is expected to facilitate the sale of the coming harvest, estimated at 3,000,000 bags Rio and from 10,000,000 to 11,000,000 bags Santos. The new crop will be marketed earlier than usual. The present demand from the United States is small, owing to high prices. The European demand is spasmodic, but there are almost no steamers available to carry coffee. Argentina reports that money is a drug in the market, and that the discount market shows no improvement. Importers who can obtain goods are making satisfactory profits, but both imports and exports are hampered by lack of tonnage. The fall in grain has produced heavy losses in the country districts and may produce failures there, which will mean losses to Buenos Aires firms who sell or make advances up country. Grain shipments have been behind those for a year ago.

The output of bituminous coal in the United States during the first six months of 1916 was the greatest ever recorded in any half-year period. Estimates by C. E. Lesher, of the United States Geological survey, based on returns from over 100 railroads originating coal and coke shipments, indicate that the production during this period was 261,000,000 tons, an increase of 35 per cent over the first six months of 1915, and of 5 per cent over the last six months of the same year, and greater by several million tons than the record established in the last half of 1913. Compared with the first half of 1915 the exports from the Atlantic seaboard during the last six months have increased about 10 per cent, and the exports to Canada have nearly doubled.

The director of a Boston children's group says boys make better dish washers than girls. To some boys there is likely to be a seeming relevancy between this report and the philosophic observation that the horse has never erected a monument to the first of their race who let it be known that a man could lead him with a bridle.

The post office department has abolished the title "laborer" and raised the pay of those in that class from $720 to $840 a year. In other words, $72 a year is wages and $840 is a salary.

Since the automobile advertisers are now using bathing beauties in their advertisements, the casual reader does not limit himself to studying the lines of different cars.

The author of "Casey at the Bat" says he is sick of hearing about the piece. Now that it has been made into a movie play, he'll probably suffer more than ever.

A shipload of African peanuts has arrived in New York, thus showing someone believes in preparedness as a campaign issue.

"It Is More Blessed to Give Than to Receive."

To the Citizens of Kentucky:

The work of the Kentucky Children's Home Society has grown to such an extent that we find ourselves overcrowded with children. We are anxious to place our children in good family homes, and in this connection we will have an Exhibit of the Kentucky Children's Home Society at the State Fair this year, with Rest and Lounging Room for your accommodation.

Our workers will be on the grounds and will be only too glad to escort you to the Home or they will bring such children as you are interested in, to the Fair Grounds for you to see.

We have in the Receiving Home 225 children, of all ages, from babies a few months old up to girls and boys 12, 13 and 14 years old. When you realize that there are 120 counties in the State and there is only one agency to receive the destitute children, you will realize what a burden is upon us.

We are making an appeal to the citizens of Kentucky as we cannot place our children in other States, and we hope that you will open your hearts and your homes to these little children, and give them a chance in your homes. The success of the work has been due to the fact that so many of our friends have taken the little children into their homes, and now at the beginning of the Fall Season, when the demands from the counties are so great, it is imperative for us to place a number of our children in family homes.

If you will take a child you will find that you will have enough trouble and enough pleasure to compensate any effort you may make and you will unconsciously and individually do a great work for the home and for the future citizenship of our Commonwealth.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive" and to give a child a chance to become a good citizen is one of the highest privileges that comes to a family. Please think this matter over, and if you want to make application for a child, we will be glad to take up the matter with you.

Any family who have not the high moral standing need apply to no child. The work is nonsectarian, members of [illegible] church may apply for the [illegible]. Our object is to place our children in good Christian homes, where they will not only be given the advantages of church and school, but will receive a religious home-training.

Hoping that this will make an impression on the citizens of Kentucky and that you will call to see our Exhibit at the State Fair, I remain,

Yours Very Respectfully,

GEO. L. SHEON.

State Supt., Kentucky Children's Home Society 1086 Baxter Avenue, Louisville, Ky.

TO FIGHT TOLL ROADS.

Automobile executives and sales men of Covington and Newport are actively engaged in the automobile industry and its branches are taking preliminary steps towards organizing a branch of the Knights of the Motor World, a new organization formed recently in Philadelphia. It is the first organization of this kind in the country, and offers a greatly needed means of co-operation among men whose welfare is bound up in the automobile industry. As soon as the rules of the organization are perfected, a membership campaign will be launched which will extend from coast to coast.

While the organization is beneficial, it will be conducted along much different lines from other fraternal orders. The beneficial feature will cover accidental death or injury only, as it has been proven that men in the automobile business are less subject to sickness than men engaged in sedentary occupations, but are more or less subject to accidental injury.

One of the first campaigns to be waged by the new organization will be a fight to wipe out all toll roads in the United States. At the meeting when this campaign was inaugurated, the systematic upkeep and improvement of the roads also formed an interesting topic for general discussion. The first object of the crusade will be to take active steps to resist legislation hostile to automobile owners, which is calculated to discriminate unfairly against the automobile industry.—Covington Messenger.

LETTER FROM INDIANA.

To the Recorder:

Many events have eventuated since I have had the pleasure of talking with the Recorder. Tom Taggart has talked economical State government in the U. S Senate—think of it.

The late potato crop in Indiana promises to be a dismal failure and potatoes are selling in Indianapolis at six dollars per barrel.

One farmer sold 160 hogs that averaged 160 pounds at $10.75 per hundred.

Dr. Harlan, of Alexandria, sold a herd of Shorthorns last February for $7,500 that are worth today, he tells me, $15,000.

The recent severe storms of rain have wrecked the corn fields until they look like Arkansas cane breaks, but the ears are longer and larger around than usual, and promise eighty bushels per acre even though they do have to gather it in baskets like one good Kentucky farmer we know of.

The "good roads" spirit is working oaver time and the State roads are said to be better than for years. The pike from Alexandria to Cincynati is like a hard wood floor, said a traveling man recently. So you might hitch up your Overland and drap out some day, Mr Ed. The latch string is hanging out and the fryers hang high for you.

The great [illegible] strike has been called off, and a calamity, greater than we can comprehend, has been averted.

The long sought answer to the question, "Who Killed Cock Robin," has come at last—Mr. Wilson with his 42 centermeter Krupp gun—the U S Congress did it.

The 8th Congressional District, largest in the state, our district is offering J. A. M. Adair for Governor, who for four times represented the district in Congress, being elected with a 9,000 majority against him to start with. He is a man of the people, for the people, &c., and so on. He has a fascinating smile, a pleasing address and a far reaching mind. He soothes the aches and [illegible] "Old Soldiers" [illegible] ing [illegible] pensions. He will [illegible] on the tired farmers horney hands, so they can handle the large profits on wool and hides with ease and comfort.

A wireless message from Union informs me that Prof. Voshell and Col. Perry Corbin with John R. Whitson and S. A. House, have formed the [illegible] Club with the avowed purpose of carrying Kentucky for [illegible] take George [illegible] to South with Willi[illegible] Bryan. W J. R has [illegible] "young south" ever since he "sot the boat" up in Washington [illegible] time ago. That want him [illegible] The [illegible] two representatives in Kentucky recently and they came back overflowing with health, wholesome food and reports of optimistic reports of the state at large and Boone county in particular.

UNION BLADE.

Signs that Can't be Located.

They have little trouble with specimen automobilists in Lawrenceburg, Ind., despite the fact that the smooth main road holds a great temptation and thousands of cars travel it weekly.

Perhaps the nature of the wording on signs "warning" autoists to drive slowly has something to do with it.

This sign greets you just before you hit the well paved portion of the road:

"Pleased to meet you, but drive slow."

You slow down instinctively. Such politness cannot be ignored.

"Good-bye and be good" says a sign just before you reach the other end of the town.

Somehow or other it makes one feel that a town which can say welcome and goodbye is such hearty fashion, even if only thru the medium of signs, and at the same time can issue an effective warning against speeding, is a pretty good sort of a place and its wishes well worth respecting.

It has been our experience that politness wins over the average auto driver, even as music "with charms to soothe the savage breast."—Cincinnati Post.

[illegible] favorable reports of condition [illegible] different communities come to this office [illegible] by the individual dozes from counties. Since the good rains, corn, tobacco, and pastures have made a wonderful growth.

Generally speaking, the corn crop bids fair to be a good one in fact, the best in years in some localities, although much damage is reported by recent storms. The condition of corn as a state average is given at 90 per cent, the condition of Burley tobacco is given at 80 per cent and Dark tobacco at 91 per cent. Tobacco cutting and housing has begun and in this way in many sections and reported as coming in. The hemp crop is in good condition and shows at 93 per cent. The condition of cow peas is given at 89 per cent, while soy beans show at 91 per cent. The Q & C. Railway Company has purchased quite a number of small strips of land abbutting its right of way to provide against the caving-in of ground on the railroad land. The purchases range from six to twelve feet and fancy prices were paid for most of it, as the railway company considered this the better way to do than to get it by litigation for a less price.

Mr. Metcalfe was very wrothy over the accident as he says he gave the Mills machine more than half the road. Mills refused to pay for the damages his alleged carelessness accomplished and Mr. Metcalfe may seek redress. There is too much carelessness on the part of some of the chaffeurs in driving their machines on the highways and some of them ought to be punished severely for failing to observe the rights of others. The drivers of some machines will hardly give any right of way at all.

Miss. Jeanette Chambers left last Saturday for Harrodsburg, Mercer county, where she will take charge of a department in the graded school of that city. Miss Chambers gave excellent satisfaction here in the work where she taught for a number of years and the Harrodsburg school is exceedingly fortunate in securing her services.

Rev. W E. Arnold of the Highlands, Newport, who is the Presiding Elder of the M. E. church in this district, was here Saturday and Sunday, and preached two gems of sermons Sunday that delighted the thinking members of his congregation. When a talented and cultured speaker like Rev. Arnold speaks in Walton everybody would be profited if they heard him.

Mr. and Mrs H. C. Diers, Chas L. Griffith, Jas R. Wallace and W. Lee Gaines attended the fair at Alexandria, last Saturday where the Boone county exhibitors were very successful in the show rings, Allan Gaines and Ed. Berry winning a lot of nice premiums on their horses, among which is Chas. Ransler's fine mare Katie Ransler that was awarded first premium in one of the rings.

Thieves broke into the residence of Mrs. Fannie Hudson near Bracht Station last Saturday while Mrs. Hudson and her daughter Miss Cynthia were visiting friends at the Pendleton county ... thieves ... work tearing up the ... and furniture in search of loot, and left everything in a very disordered state. The articles missed so far are a pair of diamond cuff buttons, gold watch and chain, gold breast pin and a bead chain. No trace of the thieves has yet been obtained.

Elisha Graham, who formerly resided at Walton, died very suddenly at his home in Ludlow last Saturday night. He was apparently well when he retired and later on his wife going to his bedside found him dead. Mr Graham was a veteran of the civil war and was about 70 years old. He leaves a wife and several grown children and many friends who esteemed him for his many good qualities. The funeral took place here Tuesday afternoon, the remains being laid to rest in the Baptist cemetery.

R. F Stone and J. S. Montgomery of Georgetown, were here last Monday investigating the feasibility of installing an ice plant and perhaps a laundry. They have two sites under consideration, and in all probability will conclude to establish the business here. Both are high class men of excellent business qualifications, and the type of citizen we need in Walton. They own the ice plants at Georgetown, Cynthiana and other points and all of their investments have been successful and profitable. Messrs Stone and Montgomery were given a hearty welcome and every encouragement to establish the enterprise here.

Married.—A M. Rosenberry, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Lois Hoffman were united in the bonds of holy wedlock at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs Madison Hoffman in Kenton county last Saturday, Rev. A Kirtley Johnson performing the ceremony in his usual impressive manner. In the presence of a few invited guests and the immediate family, it being the desire of the contracting parties that the affair be quiet and unostentatious. Following the ceremony elegant refreshments were served. Such tobacco enjoyment as you never thought could be is yours to command quick as you buy some Prince Albert and fire-up a pipe or a home-made cigarette!

Prince Albert gives you every tobacco satisfaction your smoke appetite ever hankered for. That's because it's made by a patented process that cuts out bite and parch! Prince Albert has always been sold without coupons or premiums. We prefer to give quality!

On the reverse side of this tidy red tin you will read: "Process Patented July 30th, 1907," which has made three men smoke pipes where one smoked before!

PRINCE ALBERT

the national joy smoke

has a flavor as different as it is delightful. You never tasted the like of it! And that isn't strange, either.

Buy Prince Albert everywhere tobacco is sold in toppy red bags, 5c; tidy red tins, 10c; handsome pound and half-pound tin humidors—and—that corking fine pound crystal-glass humidor with sponge-moistener top that keeps the tobacco in such clever trim—always!

Men who think they can't smoke a pipe or roll a cigarette can smoke and will smoke if they use Prince Albert. And smokers who have not yet given P. A. a try-out certainly have a big surprise and a lot of enjoyment coming their way as soon as they invest in a supply. Prince Albert tobacco will tell its own story!

Rising Sunners Want a Fair.

There has been considerable talk about town for the last week as to the advisability of having a fair at Rising Sun annually, beginning next year. One man has expressed a willingness to take stock to the amount of $1,000. The matter is to be up before long for a proper consideration. As to the success of the venture, there is a difference of opinion, but it seems that a majority believe that a fair at Rising Sun with a live racing program and good agricultural features as its main drawing cards would be a winner. —Ohio County News.

An Exciting Experience.

Miss Hazel Huff had a most terrible experience last Thursday evening, when a snake that was being driven from under a pile of wood by her father and George Strayslnger sprang on her arm. Coiling itself around her arm it raised its head and, darting its tongue at her face, would have bitten her, but with rare presence of mind, she shook her arm, which for an instant made the snake coil tighter. Then suddenly straightening itself it leaped into the grass, when it was killed. Those witnessing the scene were horror stricken, but Miss Hazel was wonderfully calm and displayed no fear. The snake was the common black variety, and was four feet long.—Aurora Independent

RISING SUN BUSINESS MEN.

Filling Silos.

In considering the filling of the silo we would first mention the crops best suited for silage. Corn is by far the best crop for the purpose because of its high nutritive value and the ease with which it is harvested and run thru the silage cutter. Sorghum also makes an excellent silage. In feeding value it is not quite so rich as corn, especially in the item of protein, but ordinarily it produces a heavier yield than corn. Sorghum should not be put in the silo until the seed heads are entirely ripe. A few frosts will do no harm. Some good farmers prefer that two or three frosts fall upon sorghum before it is cut and placed in the silo. Soy beans and cow peas make a good grade of silage, but the objection to the cow peas is the difficulty in handling them and getting them into the cutting box on account of the tangled condition of the vines.

Some farmers find that they get a richer silage by mixing corn and soy beans in the proportion of one third to one half soy beans. The only objection to mixing the crops in this manner is that it complicates the handling of the teams and breaks up the routine, thereby retarding the work and adding somewhat to the cost per ton of filling. Everything considered it is wisest in most cases to use a single crop and to balance the silage ration by feeding the cow peas or soy beans in the form of hay instead of putting them into the silage.

Corn reaches the best stage for placing in the silo when the stalk and ear are nearing maturity. Ordinarily corn should go into the silo a week or ten days before it is ready to cut and placed in the shock. If cut too green the silage will be lacking in nutrients and will be excessively sour, while if too ripe there is danger of moulding and failure to pack firmly in the silo.

It is highly important to have all arrangements for filling made in advance. The silage cutter should be set and the blower pipe and distributor put in place, and the engine set the afternoon before filling is to start. One or two loads of corn should be run thru the cutter to make sure all the machinery is in working order so there will be no delay and loss of time when the actual filling begins with a large force of men. It is well, also, to have an extra set of knives which are kept sharpened so that the sharp knives can be substituted for the dull ones when the work is closed down for the night.

When a gasoline engine is used one of ample power should be provided. The horse power of the engine should be equal to the tons per hour capacity of the cutting box is ten tons per hour a ten horse power engine will be required.

When putting corn through the cutter care should be taken to have the bundles of medium size and to lap those on the feeding table so that the machine is never running empty.

We have found that it makes little [illegible] with the keeping [illegible] whether it is cut into one half inch lengths or one inch lengths. In the case of the one-half inch lengths the silage packs more closely, while with the one inch lengths the corn or other material goes through the cutter more readily. When cut in short lengths a greater tonnage can be placed in a silo of given capacity.

An extremely important point in filling the silo is to have the silage well tramped, especially next to the wall. Here the silage should be kept higher at all times than in the middle. The proprietor should make frequent inspections to make sure that the men inside of the silo "be kept everlastingly at it." A lazy man should not be assigned to this job. At least two men are needed to keep the silage tramped and distributed.

Usually the feeding of silage does not begin for several weeks after filling and this results in a layer of spoiled silage several inches thick. The best way to avoid serious loss from this source is to snap off the ears from the last several loads of corn, so that the layer of silage which rots is simply fodder and is only of slight value.

Before filling the silo the farmer should make sure that all cracks and openings are repaired or stopped, because any opening will result in the rotting of the silage in the neighborhood of the opening. Small cracks around the doors or foundation may be stopped at the time of filling the silo by mixing up a plastic mass of stiff clay and dabbing this into the openings.

Millikin, Republican was elected Governor of Maine Monday by an estimated majority of about 10,000, and Congressman McGillicuddy, Democrat, appears to have been defeated by about 500 votes. The larger per cent. of Progressives voted for the Republican candidates. The Republicans also gain the Lower House and hold the Senate, and gain a United States Senator. An unusually large vote was polled.

DISEASE CARRIER.

Little seems to have been proven concerning the ways in which infantile paralysis is transmitted. In the meantime, it behooves everybody to be very careful and to take every same precaution against transmitting or contracting the disease.

Animals and insects have many diseases laid at the door. It has been proved that many insects are real dangers. Mosquitoes carry malaria and flies carry typhoid bubonic plague. And cats carry bubonic plague, and cats and dogs are said to be carriers of many contagious diseases.

In some places there are regulations in the sanitary code forbidding the presence of any dog or cat in the room where persons ill from smallpox, scarlet fever, diphtheria measles and other contagious diseases are confined.

If you live in a rural district or in some other place where no such laws are in effect you should make it a household law of your own that all pet animals should be kept away from those who are ill. And if there is contagious illness in the neighborhood keep your own pets at home, and if by chance they do stray, have them washed carefully with some antiseptic soap on their return home.

Children should, of course, be taught to love dogs and cats, but they should also be taught not to allow the animals to touch them with the tongue. Many well-bred animals are rigorously taught not to lick the hand that pets them, and almost any animal can be taught this bit of mannerly observance.

Animals are much healthier if they are made to sleep in places specially set apart for them. A kennel outdoors for sturdy dogs, or a bed in a well-aired hallway for those of less resistance and for cats, should be provided and animals should never be allowed to share a human sleeping room.

Fighting the Cattle Tick.

Uncle Sam has found that "benevolent advertising"—which he took up with some trepidation—really pays, and he has gone still farther from the former stiff attitude that it was beneath his dignity to popularize the constructive activities of his various departments by adopting follow up methods as efficient as those employed by many a large commercial concern.

Since inaugurating an anti-tick campaign in the south by the use of colored posters the Department of Agriculture has been periodically disturbing in the same way other supplemental literature on the same subject. All these tell the same story of the many millions of dollars' worth of flesh-building blood of cattle that is being literally sucked out of the South each year by the seemingly insignificant tick. A recent pamphlet of the Department aims to drive home to the cattle owner the usually disregarded fact that an animal will lose as much blood thru a heavy infestation of ticks as thru a severe wound.

In connection with the fight that is being waged to free more and more territory from fever ticks entomologists and officials of the department are interested in a report of a study by the Tennessee Experiment Station show the rapidity with which the insects multiply and the long periods they may live without food. It was found that the average female lays about 285 eggs a day and produces in all more than 2,100 eggs.

Some prolific individuals were found to lay more than a thousand eggs in twenty-four hours. Eggs dropped in midsummer hatched in 21 days, while those dropped in the fall did not incubate until the next spring. The freshly hatched ticks, or "seed ticks," remain alive an incredibly long period, it was found, while fasting and awaiting an animal host. The record was 298 days.

UNION HIGH SCHOOL.

Union Graded and High School opened Sept. 6th with an unusually large attendance of patrons and pupils.

The school building, newly painted and repaired, stands a beautiful testimonial of a board of loyal, energetic trustees and an incentive to those who gather there each day.

The music for the first chapel of the new school year was conducted by Prof. David Hughes, of Newport, who also sang with pathos that well loved "Mother McCree."

Mr. Bill, pastor of the Presbyterian church, conducted the devotional exercises in his own inimitable manner, leaving every one feeling that it was good to have him at chapel.

An opening enrollment of seventy, with a visitors list equal in number, attests the educational interest of Union.

THE PATROL SYSTEM.

If Shelby county inaugurates the patrol system on the State-wide improvement of the Frankfort-Shelbyville road the economy of keeping the ditches and cross drains clear and making small repairs where the surface of the road is "leveled" or otherwise damaged will be demonstrated.

The patrol system will not be a novelty in Shelby county. It was the mainstay of economical road maintenance when the turnpikes in Shelby and adjoining counties were toll roads owned by stock companies. The term "Dead Irishman," meaning the old-fashioned surface cross drain, sometimes called "Thanky-mam," owes its origin to the fact that when the turnpikes were maintained by sections the road maintainers were, in any instance, Irish laborers, who understood the requirements of their position and saved the stock companies an immense amount of money by the use of the pick and shovel and the wheelbarrow. It was estimated that between each of the surface drains an Irish patrolman had spent his life in the service of the community. The excellence of the work done by the class was recognized generally. Their labor commanded good pay. The skilled maintainer's work was to take the stitch in time and save nine. A good workman was proud of the manner in which he kept up his allotment of highway, and as he grew old at the job he grew more valuable. Everyone in the neighborhood knew personally the man with the wheelbarrow, who stretched the section of road over which the neighborhood drove most frequently. The buggy at a standstill on the turnpike, the driver in conversation with the road mender who pulled at his pipe and kept his shovel going while discussing neighborhood affairs or national politics, constituted a common "scene" picture of life in the section of Kentucky which enjoyed good roads long before the rest of the State. The position of road patrole was not without its amenities. As an institution the patrol system was of recolnized value.

It is stated that Shelby county will be the first to revive the patrol system. That statement will system. That statement will perhaps arouse discussion. Let us hope it will awaken a spirit of emulation and of rivalry. Hart county proposes to maintain its section of the Dixie Highway by patrols and is distributing loads of crushed stone along the highway for that purpose. Perhaps there are other counties which have begun or will begin, to keep their roads in condition by the method which is obviously the best. —Courier-Journal.

OUR NAVY.

The Navy Department seems always to be a political storm center. All recall the bitterness of the Sampson-Schley controversy. Just now the Wilson administration of naval affairs is under bitter partisan criticism.

Against the flood of censure degenerated into abuse, which sensible men have already discounted to something like its real worth, is opposed the deliberate opinion of Admiral Dewey. He reviews the state of the U. S Navy and the Democratic Navy Bill in a lenthy interview an extract from which is given below. Against the word of the hero of Manilla Bay that of all the politicians in the world will not prevail with the American people.

Admiral Dewey says:

"The attacks that have been made upon the navy are as false as many of them are shameful. It is not a junk heap. There is no demoralization. Both in material and personnel we are more efficient today than ever before. Our ships are as good as any, our officers are as good as any, and our enlisted men are the finest in the world.

"It is true we have not enough ships or enough men. But navies are not build in a day. Congress, after all, expresses public sentiment in, large degree, and the reason we droppped was because the people wanted to drop. The recommendations of the general board went unheeded because they were not backed up by public opinion. Until 1914 people were thinking in terms of world peace. It is different today, and it is today that should concern us."

Admiral Dewey picked up a copy of the Democratic Navy Bill, spread it before him, hesitated, as if to measure his words and said:

"This is the best bill ever passed by any Congress. It takes the five-year program of the general board and changes it into a three-year program. It will restore us to second place and enable the U. S to meet on equal terms any power in the world save one."

They say a Kentuckian is ever in a state of unrest away from his native State. Many stories have been told of Kentuckians who accidentally managed to get into heaven and how they fought to get back. In the mind of the writer, who is a Kentuckian, this time honored theory has been exploded. Neither would he be forced to face a criminal charge for some offense were he to return. If we could move Kentucky to Tampa or move Tampa's climate to Kentucky the inducement might be sufficient. In fact, though, the grand old Commonwealth will have to come to us for it is a certainty we will stay with the climate for a while anyway.—Tampa Times.

Mr. and Mrs. Daugherty made the trip from their western home in their automobile.

The chairman of the Western Republican National Campaign Committee "gives Kentucky to Hughes." Deciding in advance how States are to vote is a favorite pre-election pastime of campaign managers. Kentucky has failed only once in twelve national contests to cast a Democratic vote, and there is still time for it to change its mind about going Republican.—New York World.

Carlisle, Sept 10.—The growers of Nicholas county are preparing to rush tobacco into the houses this week. Much cutting and housing of the crop took place the past week and probably one-third of the crop has been cut. The growers are elated over the condition of the crop and the way tobacco, housed early, is beginning to cure up. The crop will be much better than expected some weeks ago.

Paducah, Sept 10.—Most of the tobacco crops in West Kentucky and West Tennessee have been cut and is being placed in barns for curing. The crop is expected to be 25 per cent larger than last year and the quality is the best in several years. Deliveries will be started in November. Dealers and growers hope the embargo England and Germany have placed on tobacco will be raised between now and January 1.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., Sept. 11.—Growers of tobacco are rushing the cutting and the larger part of the crop will be under cover by the end of this week. The crop indications show the best crop that has been grown in the Burley belt since 1913. The growers have allowed the tobacco to become riper than heretofore, and, as a consequence, it is believed that the crop will show more fancy tobacco than ever. The yield promises to be heavy, with a vast amount of the silky variety, that always brings from 20 cents to 40 cents per pound on the loose leaf breaks. Much bright tobacco is seen and the crop that has been housed many days is curing out with an admirable color.

FARM ANIMALS

HOG CHOLERA RECOMMENDED

Device Is Paying Proposition and Will Save Trouble—Animals Soon Learn Its Use.

There seems to be very little said about the hog oiler and yet it is something that has been used on a great many farms for the past year or two. I have had experience with oilers of different kinds and find that the use of a good oiler, that does not leak or clog up, is quite worth while and is a paying proposition, as it will save a great deal of trouble and neglect, says a writer in an exchange.

A great many farmers neglect keeping their hogs free from lice and mange simply because it is so much trouble and annoyance to get them up in a pen and sprinkle or dip them. The hog oiler not only saves time and trouble, but also saves oil, since much oil is wasted when the sprinkling can is used.

There are two distinct kinds of oilers on the market: The cylinder oiler and the upright or post oiler. The oiler that does not waste oil by leaking or overflowing and one that operates easily is one of the best investments a hog raiser can make; while the oiler that leaks or clogs up with dirt is almost useless.

If the oiler is set up in a place where the hogs congregate every day, such as the feeding place, they will almost invariably use it when they smell the oil.

FENCING FOR HOG PASTURES

Material Slump in Profits if Animals Are Confined to Pens—Make Barrier "Pig-Tight."

The raising of hogs calls for the fencing in of a field or two for hog pasture, for every hogkeeper well knows that there is a very material slump in the profits in pork-growing if the hogs are kept in pens or small runs, obtaining no food except that given them. Of the three prime essentials in a hog pasture—namely pasturage, water supply and fence—the fence is of more importance than most of us realize until a stiff bit of experience sets us thinking. The hog-lot fence, of all fences on the farm, needs to be built substantially and "pig-tight." Any hog pasture fence that is put up hurriedly and somewhat indifferently is a detriment to all concerned—to the rest of the farm, to the farmer and to the hogs, even.

SHORTHORN BREED IN FAVOR

Country Church in Northwest Missouri Is Center of Community Devoted to Breeding.

(By FRANK D. THOMSON.)

A country church near Ravenswood, in northwest Missouri, is the center of a community devoted to breeding Shorthorns. In the past three months the 26 members of the organization—and to be eligible to membership in this special effort one is required to live within five miles of the church—have acquired 100 registered Shorthorns and 200 high-grade cows. Twelve registered bulls have been placed in service. The latter, however, are owned privately by this group of individuals within the circle. The matter of convenience determined this item.

The community is known as "Harmony." The Shorthorn circle is but one of various interests which the community is encouraging.

KNOWLEDGE HELP TO FARMER

Good Judge of Stock Offered Many Opportunities to Mingle With Experts and Breeders.

The farmer who has been a good judge of stock through careful, systematic study will have a degree of recognition and influence in his community that may offer many opportunities for him to meet and mingle with the best informed live stock men, expert judges, prominent breeders and officials of shows and other agricultural organizations. He may thus come in touch with the best methods of breeding and handling stock and with men of affairs, and by his increased knowledge broaden his influence and usefulness to his community and the world at large.

FARM STOCK

SOWING RAPE IN CORNFIELD

Dwarf Essex Rape Broadcasted After Final Cultivation Best Adapted for Sheep Pasture.

As a feeding proposition there is none that gives better profits, considering the amount of capital invested, than fattening sheep in the cornfield where rape has been sowed at the last cultivation of the corn. The sheep may be bought early, and pastured or fed earlier selling crops until the rape is fit for them to be turned into the cornfield. The Dwarf Essex rape is the variety best adapted for sheep pasture. About five or six pounds of seed will afford an excellent stand, if sowed broadcast after the final cultivation of the corn crop, providing that the conditions are favorable for an early germination of the seed.

Practically no damage will result to the corn crop; the sheep will consume a large percentage of the lower leaves and lodged stalks. Old breeding ewes that have passed their maternity usefulness, can always be bought at prices which make them profitable to turn into a rape and cornfield. Yearling wethers may be fattened in the same way. No grain foods will be required. Rape alone will produce enough increase to insure a good profit. By growing rape with the corn crop, and pasturing it with sheep, an intelligent flock owner may greatly increase his income from his corn crops.

RING WORM IS EASILY CURED

University Expert Favors Iodine and Acetic Acid Treatment for Removal of Trouble.

(By M. H. REYNOLDS, University Farm, St. Paul.)

Ring worm appears most commonly in cattle as a round, slightly raised, bald patch, being seen especially about the head and neck of a calf or yearling. Older cattle, other animals and men are subject to the trouble. It is caused by minute vegetable parasites which grow under the skin, something like mildew in a grape leaf.

Ring worm can be rather easily cured by giving the spots a good scrubbing with soft soap and water, then treating them once each day with equal parts of tincture of iodine and glacial acetic acid. The treatment may be continued for several days, as appears necessary.

WEANING COLTS IS SIMPLE

Ordinary Youngster Should Be Taken From Its Mother When From Four to Six Months Old.

The ordinary colt is best weaned from its mother at from four to six months of age. If the mare has been re-bred or is kept at constant hard work, four months is none too soon, otherwise, six months. If properly handled, weaning is a simple matter. Before weaning, the colt should be gradually accustomed to a rather full hay and grain ration, so that when final separation comes there will be no setback. And the separation must be complete, the foal and its dam not being permitted to see or smell each other for some weeks.

Good clean oats form the best of all grains for the weaning foal, but in order to build up bodily fat which the colt needs in cold weather, one-fourth of the grain ration in the fall and winter may consist of ground corn. Also, several small handfuls of oil-meal may be added with good results. Let the colt have plenty of good clean mixed hay, plenty of good water and a clean bed.

KEEP SWINE IN CLEAN PENS

Cholera Germs and Vermin Flourish Most in Hot Weather—Avoid Trouble by Cleaning.

Lice and cholera germs flourish most in hot weather, and both by a little work may be prevented. Running for remedies and cleaning up when a flock is down with contagious disease is certainly a ridiculous and fruitless proceeding and exhibition of how not to do it.

MIXTURE FOR HOG PASTURES

Four Pecks of Oats and Four Pounds of Rape to Acre Will Furnish Ample Supply of Grass.

For hog pasture sow on each acre a mixture of four pecks of oats and four pounds of rape. Broadcast or drill. The mixture is ordinarily ready for pasture about eight weeks after seeding.

Walnut Hall Farms, near Lexington, purchased 200 grade ewes on a Western market, kept them two years and sold them this year. The net profit above first cost and upkeep, was $23.40 a head

The Flemingsburg Gazette says: A few crops of tobacco, small crops, have been bought at 14c and as high as 18c, the last named being a lot of about 300 lbs., being raised at Sherburne. These aperatic purchases are made frequently as bait by the warehousemen and as advertisers, and are not extensive enough to give any line on what the tobacco market is going to be, The indications are favorable for a fair price for the weed, but no one knows how the market will be.

The packers filled their storage houses full of 6-cent pork last winter, and now when there are few hogs on the market they run the price up to $11.50 per hundred, so they can sell their stored meat at a great profit. The public will pay the bill. Cattle is now selling at 5 to $7, and as soon as the packers get their storage houses full and the big run of cattle is over, they will run the price up again. The trusts have got the great common masses of this country by the throat as firmly as the war dog has got the people of Europe. Some of these days the farmers will wake up to these conditions and do a little manipulating for their own benefit. The trouble is now, when a farmer gets his stock ready for market, it must go. He is too anxious to see the money.

NEWS FROM CARROLL COUNTY

(Carrollton News.)

Labor Day allowed Judge Gaines to witness the Lincoln ceremonies at Hodgenville.

The Burley crop in Carroll county is possibly from 10 to 15 per cent larger in acreage and considerably finer than the 1915 crop.

The grand jury took a recess from Friday until Tuesday on account of awaiting witnesses. Before adjournment they returned 15 indictments.

Geo. P Harris, former assessor of Carroll county, and an extensive farmer and dairyman, died at his home about four miles above Carrollton on the Ghent pike, at three o'clock yesterday morning, from paralytic strokes sufferred Sunday evening. Mr. Harris and his son were in the barn milking and after the son had finished with one cow he looked into the stall where his father was and found him sitting on the stool unconscious. He helped him to the house and put him to bed, but Mr. Harris never regained consciousness.
